FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION.

MARCH 2, 1893.—In the Senate of the United States.

Resolved by the Senate, That there be printed of the annual report of the American Historical Association for the year 1892 the usual number.

LETTER OF SUBMITTAL.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION,
Washington, D. C., February 28, 1893.

To the Congress of the United States:

In accordance with the act of incorporation of the American Historical Association, approved January 4, 1889, I have the honor to submit to Congress the annual report of said association for the year 1892.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. P. LANGLEY,
Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

HON. LEVI P. MORTON,
President of the Senate.

HON. CHARLES F. CRISP,
Speaker of the House.

ACT OF INCORPORATION.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Andrew D. White, of Ithaca, in the State of New York; George Bancroft, of Washington, in the District of Columbia; Justin Winsor, of Cambridge, in the State of Massachusetts; William F. Poole, of Chicago, in the State of Illinois; Herbert B. Adams, of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland; Clarence W. Bowen, of Brooklyn, in the State of New York; their associates and successors, are hereby created in the District of Columbia a body corporate and politic, by the name of the American Historical Association, for the promotion of historical studies, the collection and preservation of historical manuscripts, and for kindred purposes in the interest of American history and of history in America. Said association is authorized to hold real and personal estate in the District of Columbia so far only as may be necessary to its lawful ends to an amount not exceeding five hundred thousand dollars, to adopt a constitution, and to make by-laws not inconsistent with law. Said association shall have its principal office at Washington, in the District of Columbia, and may hold its annual meetings in such places as the said incorporators shall determine. Said association shall report annually to the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution concerning its proceedings and the condition of historical study in America. Said secretary shall communicate to Congress the whole of such reports, or such portions thereof as he shall see fit. The regents of the Smithsonian Institution are authorized to permit said association to deposit its collections, manuscripts, books, pamphlets, and other material for history in the Smithsonian Institution or in the National Museum, at their discretion, upon such conditions and under such rules as they shall prescribe.

[Approved, January 4, 1889.]

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION,
Baltimore, Md., February 15, 1893.

SIR: In compliance with the act of incorporation of the American Historical Association, approved January 4, 1889, which requires that "said association shall report annually to the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution concerning its proceedings and the condition of historical study in America," I have the honor to transmit herewith my general report of the proceedings of the American Historical Association during the year 1892. In addition to the general summary of proceedings I send also several valuable contributions to American history, including a paper on Lotteries by the Librarian of Congress, an account of General Washington's library and manuscript records, by Dr. J. M. Toner, and the concluding portion of an elaborate Bibliography of the publications of the State Historical Societies, prepared by Mr. A. P. C. Griffin, of the Boston Public Library.

Very respectfully,

HERBERT B. ADAMS,
Secretary.

Prof. S. P. LANGLEY,
Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

I.—SUMMARY OF THE WORK OF THE AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION DURING THE YEAR 1892, BY HERBERT B. ADAMS, SECRETARY.

REPORT OF THE AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION.

By HERBERT B. ADAMS, Secretary.

No annual meeting of the association was held during the year 1892 in consequence of the resolution passed by the Executive Council in Washington, December 30, 1891, to hold the ninth annual meeting in Chicago in 1893. The work of the association has, however, gone forward in literary ways. The progress of historical literature in the United States from 1887 to 1892 has been carefully reviewed by one of our members, Dr. John Martin Vincent, an American contributor to the Jahresberichten der Geschichtswissenschaft, annually published by the Berlin Historical Society, and his work will be printed in the report for 1893. In view of the requirements of our charter to report annually to the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution on the condition of historical study in America, it has seemed wise to initiate systematic and classified reviews of recent contributions to historical literature in this country.

The bibliography of the published writings of members of the American Historical Association has been continued by Mr. A. Howard Clark during the year 1892 and supplemented by additions to bibliographies belonging to previous years. The bibliography of the publications of the historical societies of the United States has been completed by Mr. A. P. C. Griffin, of the Boston Public Library, and its publication is now continued from the annual report of 1890. Certain papers read before the association, or long promised, are included in the present report. Among such contributions are The United States Provisional Court for the State of Louisiana, by Judge Charles A. Peabody; Some Account of the Historic Value and Dispersion of the Autograph Papers of Gen. George Washington, by J. M. Toner, M. D.; Lotteries in American History, by A.

R. Spofford, Librarian of Congress; Copies of Certain Tracts relating to America, found by Prof. James E. Thorold Rogers in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, and by him obtained for the American Historical Association.

The American Historical Association was organized at Saratoga, N. Y., September 10, 1884. It was incorporated by act of Congress, approved January 4, 1889, "for the promotion of historical studies, the collection and preservation of historical manuscripts, and for kindred purposes in the interest of American history and of history in America." Since its foundation the Historical Association has published five volumes of "Papers" through G. P. Putnam's Sons, or the Knickerbocker Press, New York and London, 1885-1891. Through the Smithsonian Institution it has published three "Annual Reports," for the years 1889, 1890, and 1891. All future publications of the society will be issued from the Government Printing Office in Washington. The first series, published by the Putnams, has been discontinued.

The following complete list of the "Papers of the American Historical Association" and of the "Annual Reports of the American Historical Association," is reprinted and supplemented from the bibliography prepared by Mr. A. P. C. Griffin, of the Boston Public Library, for the Annual Report of the American Historical Association for the year 1890:

1. THE CASE OF CHARLES LORD BALTEMORE, A MINOR, WITH RELATION TO HIS GOVERNMENT OF MARYLAND.

In the year 1632, Cecil Lord Baltemore, had a Grant and Charter from King Charles the First, of the Province of Maryland, to him and his Heirs.

In the year 1634 and 5, Cecil Lord Baltemore was at the charge of sending Ships, with People and Provisions, to Seat and Cultivate that Province; which Charge amounted to Forty Thousand Pounds at least, the Interest of which Money he never Received by any Profits he had from thence.

In the year 1661, his Son, Charles Lord Baltemore, went to Maryland. From the First Settlement of that Province, 'till his Lordship's First Voyage thither, which was Twenty-six Years, Maryland had yielded little or nothing to the Family; but the Duties on Tobacco Planted there, in that Time, brought in a considerable Revenue to the Crown, at the sole Charge of that Family.

Cecil Lord Baltemore, at great Charge, First Peopled and Cultivated that Province, and entirely confiding on the Charter and Grant of King Charles the First, exhausted his Estate in England, to enable him to Improve and Cultivate that Province; and his Son Charles Lord Baltemore, having made several Voyages thither, continued to improve the same, to the great Increase of the Revenue of the Crown.

About the year 1698, the said Province was made a Security to the Right Honourable the Lady Charlott Lee; upon her Marriage with the late Benedict Leonard Lord Baltemore.

The present Lord Baltimore, and his Three Brothers, and two Sisters, are lately become Protestants; and his Lordship has no Way of Providing for them, but out of those several Branches of the Civil Government of this Province, which, by a Bill Intituled, A Bill for the better Regulation of the Charters and Proprietary Governments in America, and for the Encouragement of the Trade of this Kingdom, and his Majesty's Plantations, are intended to be taken away, the Amount whereof is at least 3000*l.* per Annum.

The Indians in this Province are very inconsiderable; and it is not at all likely, that there can ever be any Disturbance from them; the Whites there being now much more Numerous and Stronger than they, either in this Province or its Neighbourhood.

'Tis therefore Humbly Hoped, That Maryland may be Excepted out of this Bill.

(At back:—) The Case of Charles Lord Baltimore, a Minor, with Relation to his Government of Maryland.

2. THE CASE OF WILLIAM PENN, ESQ. ; PROPRIETARY-GOVERNOR OF PENNSYLVANIA, AND OF JOSHUA GEE, HENRY GOULDNEY, SILVANUS GROVE, JOHN WOODS, AND OTHERS, MORTGAGEES UNDER THE SAID WILLIAM PENN.

His late Majesty King Charles II. in 1680, by Letters Patent in Consideration of the Services of Sir William Penn, Kt., Deceased, Father of the said William Penn, and then late Vice-Admiral of his said Majesty's Fleet) Granted to the said William Penn, his Heirs and Assigns, the Province of Pensilvania and the Government thereof.

The late King James, when Duke of York, in 1682, Granted to the said William Penn, his Heirs and Assigns, the Town and Tract of Newcastle, and the Two lower Counties upon the River Delaware, with the Government thereof, as the same had been granted to him the said Duke.

The said William Penn, (having purchased of the Indians their Title) by his Industry and great charge, improv'd those Countries, and established considerable Colonies in them: And by this means very much impaired his Estate in Europe; and in the Year 1708, to clear a Debt which he contracted for the Settling and Improving the said Colonies, borrowed of the said Mortgagees 6600*l*. For the Securing whereof, with Interest, he mortgaged the said Countries and all his Powers of Government to them: And the Principal Money, and some Interest, is still unpaid.

Both King William and the late Queen Anne, having a Desire to get all Proprietary-Governments into their own Hands, the respective Ministers of those Princes often treated with the said William Penn for the Purchase of his Governments: But he demanding first more, and afterwards 20,000*l*. Her late Majesty was pleased to refer the same to the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, who made their Report.

This Report was by Her Majesty referred to the Lords Commissioners of her Treasury, and soon after an Agreement was made with the said William Penn, for an Allowance of 12,000*l*.

to be paid him at several Payments (whereof 1000*l.* was paid) in Consideration of a Surrender of his Governments; and a Draft of such Surrender, and of an Instrument of her Majesty's Acceptance of it, was, by Her Majesty's Order, prepared by Her then, and now Attorney-General.

But before those Instruments were Executed, the said William Penn being seized with an Apoplexy, which disabled him to perfect the same; Her Majesty, in Council, order'd the said Agreement to be compleated by Act of Parliament.

All which is Humbly Submitted, &c.

(At the back:—) The Case of William Penn, Esq.; and of Joshua Gee, and others, his Mortgagees of Pensilvania.

3. THE CASE OF THE PROVINCE OF THE MASSACHUSETTS-BAY
IN NEW ENGLAND, WITH RELATION TO THEIR CHARTER, AND SOME OBSERVATIONS THEREON.

The said Province had it's charter granted by King James I, in the eighteenth year of his Reign, which was afterwards confirm'd by King Charles I, in the fourth Year of his Reign; by Virtue whereof, the Governor and Company of the Massachusetts-Bay, had power to appoint their own Officers, Civil and Military, with other Priviledges in the said Charter mention'd.

In the Reign of King James II, the Charter was vacated, at the same Time that many Corporations in England were disfranchis'd.

After the Revolution, King William, of Glorious Memory, restor'd the Charter, only reserving to himself the Nomination and Appointment of a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary, Judge of the Admiralty, and Attorney-General; and this is the Charter the Province now enjoys.

Hereupon it is humbly observ'd,

That the Charter of this Province, being on the same Foot with the Corporations in England, it seems as great a Hardship to divest them of it, as it would be to disfranchise the Corporations at Home.

That the Province has given a valuable Consideration to the Crown, for their Charter, viz. The subduing and planting a Wilderness, at a vast Expence, and with the Loss of many Lives; by which they have added a large Territory to the Crown, and thereby greatly increas'd the Trade and Commerce of Britain.

This Province is not within the Reasons suggested in the Bill. They have not exercis'd arbitrary Power, nor indeed can they; for the principal Officers, before-mention'd, being appointed by the Crown, are such a check on the Government, that it is entirely out of their Power, as well as very far from their Inclination, to grieve or oppress the Subject. They have not neglected the Defence of the Inhabitants. On the contrary, it is certain they have well defended both themselves and their Neighbours, in a long, French and Indian War; so that the ordinary Charge for Guards, Garrisons, Guard-Ships, &c. has been thirty five thousand Pounds a year, communibus Annis. And tho' the Province has hereby contracted a Debt of one hundred and fifty thousand Pounds, yet they don't complain, nor are they burthensome to the Crown, but are paying it off every year by Degrees.

If this Charter be taken away, no Compensation can be made for it. Whereas, in the Case of the Proprietary Governments, an Equivalent may be given to the Proprietors, as it seems is intended; but here it cannot be, because the Priviledges are not vested in particular Persons, but in the Body of the People.

Thus it's like to happen, that the Proprietors of Carolina, &c. on whose Account alone this Bill is brought in, may come off well enough, whilst the Charter-Governments, in New-England, which have done nothing amiss, shall be the only Sufferers.

Lastly, This Province is zealously devoted to the present happy Establishment, and accordingly, made such great and publick Rejoycings on his Majesty's Accession to the Throne, as were never before known, from the first Settlement of the Country to that Day.

'Tis therefore humbly pray'd that this Province may still enjoy its Priviledges, by being excepted out of the Bill entitled, A Bill for the better Regulation of the charters, and Proprietary Governments in America, and of his Majesty's Plantations.

(At back :—) The Case of the Province of the Massachuset's-Bay, in New-England, with relation to their Charter, and some Observations thereon.

4. THE CASE OF HIS MAJESTY'S COLONY OF CONNECTICUT IN NEW-ENGLAND, WITH RESPECT TO THEIR CHARTER, WHICH IS INTENDED TO BE TAKEN AWAY BY A BILL, ENTITLED, A BILL FOR THE BETTER REGULATION OF CHARTER AND PROPRIETARY GOVERNMENTS IN AMERICA, &c.

This his Majesty's Colony had, like the other Charter Governments, a Grant or Charter from the Crown, whereby they were empower'd to appoint all their own Officers, Civil and Military, for the Administration and Execution of Justice.

The first Planters entirely confiding in the Royal Charter, for the Security of their Liberties therein granted, did, at a vast Expence, and great Peril, subdue and plant a Wilderness, whereby they increas'd the Dominions of the Crown, as well as the Commerce of Britain.

They have in all Times since, defended themselves against the Enemy.

They have impartially administer'd Justice to the Subject.

When publick measures have been concerted for the common Good of the Colonies, they have chearfully join'd in the Expence.

They have never to this Day cost the Crown a Shilling.

They have strictly observ'd the Acts of Trade and Navigation.

They have been always dutiful to the Crown, and in nothing offended it.

They are zealously affected to his present Majesty King George.

If their Charter be taken away, no Equivalent can be given for it, the Priviledges being vested in the Body of the People, and not in particular Persons, as is the case of the Proprietary Governments where a Sum of Money to the Proprietors, that is proportionable, may make sufficient Amends for the Loss of the Charter.

It is therefore humbly hop'd, that the Colony of Connecticut may be sav'd out of the Bill.

5. THE HUMBLE ADDRESS OF THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE LORDS SPIRITUAL AND TEMPORAL, IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED, PRESENTED TO HER MAJESTY ON WEDNESDAY THE THIRTEENTH DAY OF MARCH, 1705, RELATING TO THE PROVINCE OF CAROLINA, AND THE PETITION THEREIN MENTIONED, WITH HER MAJESTIES MOST GRACIOUS ANSWER THEREUNTO.

DIE MERCURII 13 Martii, 1705.

(At the back) f. 131b.

It is Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, That the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, do give Order, That the Address of this House, Presented to Her Majesty, Relating to the Province of Carolina, and the Petition therein mentioned, with Her Majesties most Gracious Answer to the said Address, be forthwith Printed and Published.

MATH. JOHNSON,
Cler' Parliamentor'

The Humble Address of the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled.

DIE MARTIS 12 MARTII, 1705.

We your Majesties most Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, beg Leave to Inform Your Majesty, That a Petition from Joseph Boone Merchant, in behalf of himself, and many other Inhabitants of the Province of Carolina, and Merchants of London Trading thither, having been Presented to this House, Complaining of very great Abuses and Oppressions, under which your Majesties Subjects in that Province do at present labour, and which tend to the utter Destruction of that Plantation, and particularly of Two Acts lately Passed in the Assembly there, the Ratifications of which have been Sign'd and Seal'd in England, by the greater part of the Proprietors of the said Colony, we thought our selves obliged to cause the said Acts to be brought before us, and having, at the Request of the Lord Granville, Palatine of the Province, and of the Lord Craven, One of the Proprietors, heard Council in Defence of the said Acts, and examined Witnesses in Relation to that matter. The House proceeded to enter upon a particular Consideration of the Two Acts, and it appeared to us that by the First of the Acts complained of, a Commission, consisting of Twenty Laymen, was erected with Power in an Arbitrary manner, to Remove and Turn out any Rectors or Ministers of the Church of England, from their Benefices, for any Immorality or Imprudence, or for Incurable Prejudices or Dissensions between such Rectors or Ministers and their People, only by delivering a Writing to them, or leaving it at their Houses, or fixing it upon the Church Doors, whereby it should be Declar'd, That they ceas'd to be Rectors or Ministers of such Parishes. The other Act directly asserts, That by the Law of England, all Members of Parliament are obliged to receive the Sacrament according to the Rites of the Church of England; and does therefore Enact, That no man who shall be chosen a Member of the Commons House of Assembly in Carolina, shall be permitted to Sit there, who has not received the Sacrament in such manner, within a year before his Election, unless he will Swear he is of the Profession of the Church of England, and did not abstain from the Sacrament out of dislike to the Manner and Form of the Administration used in the Church of England, and has not from a year past been in Communion with any Church, that does not Conform to the Church of England, but upon such Oath he shall be Qualified to Sit as if he had received the Sacrament, as prescribed by the Act. The Act does further provide, That if any Member should refuse to Qualifie himself, as is thereby directed, there should not be a New Election, but he who had the next number of Voices to such unqualified Person upon the former Poll, should be the Member in his Place.

The House having fully and maturely weigh'd the Nature of these two Acts, found themselves obliged, in Duty to Your Majesty, and in Justice to Your Subjects in Carolina (who by the express Words of the Charter of Your Royal Uncle King Charles the Second, granted to the Proprietors, are declared to be the Liege-People of the Crown of England, and to have Right to all the Liberties, Franchises and Privileges of English-men, as if they were born within this Kingdom, and who by the Words of the same Charter, are to be subject to no Laws, but such as are Consonant to Reason, and, as near as may be, agreeable to the Laws and Customs of England) to come to the following Resolutions.

First, That it is the Opinion of this House, That the Act of the Assembly of Carolina, lately Pass'd there, and since Sign'd and Seal'd by John Lord Granville, Palatine, for himself, and for the Lord Carteret, and the Lord Craven, and by Sir John Colleton, Four of the Proprietors of that Province, in order to the Ratifying of it, Intituled, an Act for the Establishment of Religious Worship in this Province, according to the Church of England, and for the Erecting of Churches for the Publick Worship of God, and also for the Maintenance of Ministers, and the Building convenient Houses for them, so far forth as the same relates to the Establishing a Commission for the Displacing the Rectors or Ministers of the churches there, is not Warranted by the Charter granted to the Proprietors of that colony, as being not Consonant to Reason, Repugnant to the Laws of this Realm, and Destructive to the Constitution of the Church of England.

Secondly, That it is the Opinion of this House, That the Act of the Assembly in Carolina, Intituled an Act for the more Effectual Preservation of the Government of this Province, by Requiring all Persons that shall hereafter be chosen Members of the Commons House of Assembly, and Sit in the same, to Take the Oaths, and Subscribe the Declaration, appointed by this Act, and to Conform to the Religious Worship in this Province, according to the Church of England, to Receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, according to the Rites and Usage of the said Church, lately Pass'd there, and Sign'd and Seal'd by John Lord Granville, Palatine, for himself and the Lord Craven and also for the Lord Carteret, and by Sir John Colleton, Four of the Proprietors of that Province, in Order to the Ratifying of it, is Founded upon falsity in Matter of Fact, is Repugnant to the Laws of England, contrary to the Charter Granted to the Proprietors of that Colony, is an Encouragement to Atheism and Irreligion, is Destructive to Trade, and Tends to the Depopulating and Ruining the said Province.

May it Please your Majesty, We Your Majesties most Dutiful Subjects, having thus humbly Presented our Opinion of these Acts, we beseech Your Majesty to use the most Effectual Methods, to Deliver the said Province from the Arbitrary Oppressions under which it now lies, and to Order the Authors thereof to be Prosecuted according to Law.

At the same time we Represent to Your Majesty, how much the Powers given by the Crown have been Abused by some of Your Subjects, Justice Requires us to Acquaint Your Majesty, That it Appear'd to the House, that some of the Proprietors absolutely Refused to joyn in the Ratification of these Acts.

We humbly beg Permission to Inform Your Majesty That other great Injustices and Oppressions are Complained of in the Petition, but the nature of the Fact requiring a long examination, it was not possible for the House to find time for it so near the Conclusion of the Session; And therefore we Presume with all Duty, to lay the Petition it self before Your Majesty at the same time we present this our Address. We cannot Doubt but Your Majesty, who from the Beginning of Your Reign, has shewn so great Concern and Tenderness for all Your Subjects, will extend Your Compassion to these Distressed People, who have the Misfortune to be at so great a Distance from Your Royal Person, and not so immediately under Your Gentle Administration.

Your Majesty is fully Sensible of what great Consequence the Plantations are to the Crown of England, and to the Trade of Your Subjects, and therefore we rest Assured, That, as Your Majesty will have them all under Your Royal Care, so in particular, You will be Graciously Pleased to Find out and Prosecute the most Effectual Means for the Relief of this Province of Carolina.

HER MAJESTIES MOST GRACIOUS ANSWER TO THE ADDRESS.

I Thank the House for Laying these Matters so plainly before Me; I am very Sensible of what Great Consequence the Plantations are to England, and will do all that is in My Power to Relieve My Subjects in Carolina, and to Protect them in their just Rights.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled:

The Humble Petition of Joseph Boone, Merchant, on behalf of himself and many other Inhabitants of the Province of Carolina, and also of several Merchants of London, Trading to Carolina, and the Neighbouring Colonies of Her Majesty in America, sheweth to your Lordships,

That the late King Charles the Second, by his Charter under the Great Seal of England, bearing Date the Twenty fourth of March 1663, Did Grant to Edward Earl of Clareudon, then Lord High Chancellor of England, George Duke of Albemarle, William Lord Craven, John Lord Berkeley, and others, their Heirs and Assigns, all that Tract of Land in North-America, commonly called Carolina, to be held of the Crown of England, as a County-Palatine, with Power to them, their Heirs and Assigns, to make Laws for the good Government of the said Colony, with the Advice, Assent, and Approbation of the Free-men of the said Colony, and the greatest part of them, so as the said Laws may be Consonant to Reason, and as near as conveniently can be, agreeable to the Laws and Customs of England; But all these Privileges, with others in the said Charter, are Granted with an Express Saving of the Faith, Allegiance and Sovereign Dominion due to the King, His Heirs and Successors, and Saving the Right, Title and Interest of English Subjects then planted within those Limits, if any be.

That for the better Peopling the said Colony, express Provision is made in the said Charter, for a Toleration and Indulgence to all Christians in the Free Exercise of their Religion.

That in the Year 1669, the Lords Proprietors of the said Colony, Settled the Method of the Government of the said Colony, in several Articles, which were called, and so Agreed to be, The Fundamental Constitution of the said Colony, whereby the said Colony was Divided into Four Estates (viz) The Lords Proprietors, or their Deputies, Landgraves, Cassiques, and Freeholders, who are to make up their General Assembly or Parliament, which is the Legislature of the whole Colony; The Lords Proprietors, or their Deputies, being in the nature of Sovereign, the Landgraves and Cassiques being the Nobility, who have an Hereditary Right of Session there, the Freeholders Representing the Commons, who are to be Chosen by the Freeholders from among themselves by a Majority of Voices.

That in the said Fundamental Constitutions, there is an express Provision, That no Person should be disturbed for any Speculative Opinion in Religion, and that no Person should on the Account of Religion, be Excluded from being a Member of the General Assembly, or from any other Office of the Civil Administration; The greatest part of which said Fundamental Constitutions, and this Provision, among others, were in the year 1689, confirmed by the Proprietors and every Person to be afterwards admitted into any Office or Place of Trust, was to Swear to the Observation of them.

That the said Charter being made soon after the time of the happy Restoration of King Charles the Second, and the Re-establishment of the Church of England by the Act of Uniformity, many of the Subjects of this Kingdom, who were so Unhappy as to have some Scruples about Conforming to the Rites of the said Church, did Transplant themselves and Families into the said Colony, by means whereof the greatest part of the Inhabitants there were Protestant Dissenters from the Church of England, and through the Equality and Freedom of the said Fundamental Constitutions of the said Colony, all the Inhabitants there lived in great Peace, and even the Ministry of the Church of England had support from Protestant Dissenters; And the Number of the Inhabitants, and the Trade of the said Colony daily Increased, to the great Improvement of Her Majesties Customs, and the manifest Advantage of the Merchants and Manufacture of this Kingdom.

That in the Year 1703, when a New General Assembly was to be Chosen, which by the Constitution is to be chosen once in Two Years, the Election was managed with very great Partiality and Injustice, and all sorts of People, even Servants, Negroes, Aliens, Jews and Common Sailors were admitted to Vote in Elections.

That the Ecclesiastical Government of the said Colony is under the Jurisdiction of the Lord Bishop of London; But the Governor, and his Adherents, have at last, which the said Adherents had often threatened, Totally Abolished it: For the said Assembly hath lately Passed an Act whereby Twenty Lay Persons therein Named are made a Corporation, for the Exercise of several Exorbitant Powers, to the great Injury and Oppression of the People in general, and for the Exercise of all Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, with Absolute Power to Deprive any Minister of the Church of England of his Benefice, not only for his Immorality, but even for his Imprudence or Incurable Prejudices and Animosities between such Minister and His Parish; And the only Church of England Minister that is Establish'd in the said Colony, the Reverend Mr. Edward Marston, hath already been Cited before their Board; which the Inhabitants of that Province take to be a High Ecclesiastical Commission Court, Destructive to the very Being and Essence of the Church of England, and to be had in the utmost Detestation and Abhorrence by every Man that is not an Enemy to our Constitutions in Church and State.

That in the said General Assembly another Act was Passed, to Incapacitate every Person from being a Member of any General Assembly that should be Chosen for the time to come, unless he had taken the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, according to the Rites of the Church of England, whereby all Protestant Dissenters are made Uncapable of being of the said Assembly. And yet by the said Act, all Persons who will take an Oath, That they have not Received the Sacrament in any Dissenting Congregation for One Year past, tho' they have not Received it in the Church of England, are made capable of being of the said Assembly. And we take the Liberty Humbly to Inform Your Lordships, That in the Preamble to the said Act it is Asserted, That by the Laws and Usage of England, all Members of Parliament are Obliged to Conform to the Church of England, by Receiving the Sacrament of the Lords Supper according to the Rites of the said Church; which Assertion is Notoriously and Manifestly False.

That this Act was Passed in an Illegal Manner, by the Governors Calling the Assembly to Meet the 26th of April, when it then stood Prorogued to the 10th of May following, and yet this Act hath been Ratified by the Lords Proprietors here in England, who Refused to Hear what could be Offered against it, and contrary to the Petition of above One hundred and seventy of the Chief Inhabitants of the said Colony, and of several Eminent Merchants Trading thither, and though the Commons of the same Assembly quickly after Passed another Bill to Repeal it, which the Governor rejected.

That the said Grievances daily Encreasing, your Petitioner Joseph Boone is now sent by many Principal Inhabitants and Traders of the said Colony, to Represent the Languishing and Dangerous Condition of the said Colony, to the Lords Proprietors thereof; But his humble Applications to them have hitherto had no Effect.

That the Ruin of the said Colony would be to the great Disadvantage of the Trade of this Kingdom, to the Apparent Prejudice of Her Majesties Customs, and the great Benefit of the French, who watch all Opportunities to Improve their own Settlements in those Parts of America.

Wherefore Your Petitioners most humbly pray Your Lordships to take the Deplorable State of the said Colony into Your Consideration, and to Provide such Relief for it, as to Your Lordships in Your great Wisdom shall seem proper.

And Your Petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

6. THE IRREGULAR AND DISORDERLY STATE OF THE PLANTATION-TRADE, Discuss'd, and Humbly Offered to the Consideration of the Right Honourable the Lords and Commons in Parliament Assembled.

That the Present Parliament Assembled together with Resolutions to Promote Trade, was the Apprehensions of most, and the frequent Considerations about it, by the Lords and Commons, since this Session began, confirms the Truth of it; and whilst they are taking care of some particular Branches of the Trade of the Kingdom, I humbly take leave to Recommend another Branch of its Trade not yet considered of, and which, when well weighed, and enquired into, may possibly be found to deserve the Regards of a Parliament as much as the East-India, or any one other Branch whatsoever; and that is, The Trade to the Plantations.

To have this Trade settled on a Regular and Sound Foundation, I humbly conceive concerns England very much, in regard Colonies Abroad are Planted, Maintained and Protected at a very great Expense of Treasure; and a Specimen of that may, I presume, be seen by the Accounts of the present Charge of the War, now lying before the Honourable the House of Commons, and which doubtless must swell very high: But that which Affects the Kingdom as its greatest Treasure, and of which there is no Accompt kept of its Disbursments, is the Expence of our People, a Treasure which can no way be compensated, nor satisfied for, but by such a way as may conduce to supply the Kingdom with People for our People; for else, were our Plantations so many Mines of Gold and Silver, yet should we be weakened and impoverished by the having them.

Spain is a lively Instance and Proof of this, who from the greatest Monarchy in Europe, is declined to what it now is, and who have commenced their Declension gradually from the time they Dispeopled Spain to Plant in the West-Indies; all the Treasure of the Indies which they have in their Power, and fetch yearly to Spain, not being able to Recompence the Loss of their People; and this instance may serve to confirm the Truth of a Position that is already agreed on by all, as far as I know at least, as unobjectionable.

That all Kingdoms or Governments are Strong or Weak, Rich or Poor, according to the Plenty or Paucity of the People of that Government.

And that England may not split upon the same Rock Spain hath done, should be not only every English Man's good Wish, but ought to be as much their Indeavours; and I can heartily say, it is the only Motive that draws me to cast in my poor Mite as an Essay towards it, and as a Necessary Consequence of the before-going Position.

All such Means as tend to draw our Hands from us, and which at the same time creates not Means by which we may be supplied with as many, or more Hands, in the room of them, are pernicious, and as they shall obtain, may in the Issue be Destructive.

Manufacture in the Plantations, is that very Means by which the Kingdom is drained of its People, and is so far from giving us the Means by which it may be replenished with People in the room of them, that it deprives us of that only Means that's left us for it.

Manufacture promoted in the Kingdom, is the only means by which the Kingdom may be replenished with People in the room of those sent to the Plantations; for as the Prey to the Eagles, Manufacture is to the People; where that is, there they will be gathered together.

On these Two Heads I beg leave Humbly to suggest some few Considerations, to shew the Prejudices and the Disorder, Manufacture of Sugar in a part of Barbadoes, doth occasion at present, to the Essential Interests of the Kingdom, and the further Mischiefs it will bring, as it shall obtain and increase.

And then to shew the Benefits and Advantages that would accrue to the Kingdom, by Discouraging or Suppressing it, and by injoining all Commodities that are the Growth of the Plantations to be Imported in their first Product.

Manufacture in the Plantations, (even as Manufacture) doth need, and draws more People than is necessary for Product, and is a Motive to our People to leave the Kingdom, and indeed puts a Necessity upon them so to do, for it thereby deprives us of Manufacture at Home, by which they are Employed.

Manufactures of Sugar in Barbadoes, altho' but to the degree it has already attained, is such an Error in the Foundation of the Interests of the Kingdom, as respecting the Plantation Trade, that no Structure of Good, or Benefit to the Kingdom, can be Built upon it, and is the Cause that the Navigation is very much lessened Homeward; and by despoiling us of Manufacturing in the Kingdom, prevents a Navigation and Trade Outward, of Sugar Manufactured wholly and intirely, and which once we had to a very great degree, and is the chief Cause that the Manufactory and Navigation (which are the only Fruits proposed, as the Returns and Repayment of all Charges upon the Plantations) is conveyed to the Dutch and Hamburgers without any Charge to them; without Charge did I say? Nay, they are well paid for it; as for instance, There was Exported from the Port of London only, from Midsummer 1687, to Midsummer 1688, as the Custom-house Books will shew, Six Thousand Four Hundred Seventy Four Tuns of Sugar, which was Navigated in their own Ships, as they usually do; and they drew back out of the King's Revenue 19448*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* and I question whether the whole Duty on Sugar for this last year amounts to so much; and stood them in so much Cheaper than the English Manufacturer could Buy them in our own Markets. And by the Advantages of Navigation, Manufacture and Trade to most parts of Europe, of this After-Manufactured, may be guessed the Loss the Kingdom hath through the want of it.

Manufacture of Sugar in Barbadoes, is not more Injurious to the Manufacture and Navigation at Home, then it's Mischievous to that part of Barbadoes, and all the rest of the Islands, who do not Manufacture their Sugar; for as they are Obligated, as indeed they ought, to bring their Sugars into the Kingdom, they find their Disappointment of a Market here, by reason of the Discouragement their Buyers lye under from the Barbadoes Manufacture, for they must have more or less Money for their Sugars, according as the number of their Buyers are, many or few. And to give one Instance of this also, the Refiners in the year 1690, through a Surprize of a quantity of Barbadoes Manufactured Clayed (not Refined) Sugar and Molasses, brought in one Fleet from Barbadoes, Lost not less than Twenty Thousand Pounds in about Thirty Sugar-houses in and about London; and I am apt to think it could not be less than Fifty Thousand Pounds to the Importers of Unmanufactured Sugar; for the Refiners ceased working for near Twelve Months after, and the Importer all that while depended most wholly on the Courtesie of Foreigners for a Price for their Sugars.

If Manufactory of Sugar in Barbadoes be permitted, then will it be not only a Motive, but a strong Invitation to the rest of That, and all the other Islands, to do the like.

And the Indulgency of Manufacturing of Sugar, will induce and perswade to a Manufactory of Cotton-wooll, which Now is a Manufactory that Impleys possibly some Hundreds of Families in the Kingdom; and this is begun already in Fact, in some measure. And as an Attendant on that, will follow the Manufactory of Dying also, that is another great Manufactory in the Kingdom; for the Wooll and Materials for Dying, such as Indigo, Logwood, Fustick, Nicaragua-Wood, are all the Growth of the Plantations, and places adjacent thereto; and the Dying-Woods being Imported at present in great quantities, as well as Sugar, Impley a great number of Ships yearly.

I shall not strain the Point, if I add, there is danger of Losing the Navigation almost intirely, for there is not the least degree of any Manufacture that is used upon the Plantations, but to a proportionable degree to what it doth obtain, the Navigation is diminished; and if all their Products be Manufactured there, then New-England, who now do in a great measure share with us in the Navigation already, may possibly Ingress the whole in time; they Building Ships, and Trading not only with the Plantations, but directly for Spain; with Fish, &c. at present, it can-not be doubted, that they do, or will deny themselves of carrying any Plantation Goods there, or elsewhere, where it stands with their Interest so to do. It's far from me to grudge the Advantages of any, especially English Men, in what part of the World soever they be; but that Old England, shall be made to depend upon the New, or any of its Colonies or Plantations, or that they should be Inriched, to the Exhausting the Kingdom of its People, which are its Riches and Strength; or Navigation, which are its Walls and Defence; or that the Lesser should be preferred to the prejudice of the Greater, cannot be the desire of any Honest Man.

Objection, But why is the Loss of this Manufactory laid at the Door of the Barbadoes Manufacturers, when as the Refiners had some Exportation Trade, before the late Impost Duty was laid, and which gave the Foreigner 2s. 4d. Draw-back? And since that it was, that the Exportation Trade was lost, and therefore that must be the true Cause.

Answer.—It's true, that this was an accidental Cause, and yet the Barbadoes Manufactory, the Main and Original Cause, for that (as Worms or Vermin that destroys the Roots of a Tree, makes it liable to be blown down by every blast of Wind) weakens this Interest of Manufacture at home, so as every Forreigner may wrest it from us; but had there been no other Cause than this Draw-back, then might the Exportation Trade have been Retrieved, since this Cause is removed; but it is evident it is not so, nor never like, whilst the Original Cause remains; and which is the Cause that there are not Fifty Sugar-Houses in England, although we have Six Islands that are Sugar-Plantations; and Holland hath but One Hundred Sugar-Houses, and Three of them, as big as Twenty of the biggest we have, and Imploy Seventy Thousand Pounds Stock each, and yet hath but one Plantation of its own, and Hamborough hath but Fourscore Sugar-Houses, and not one Plantation of its own, and both depend upon England and Portugal for their Supplies; And yet Sugar which is the Growth of our own Plantations, is as much in our Power as Wooll is, which is the Growth of the Kingdom; and I doubt not but in time, it will be thought to deserve as much our Care to preserve for Manufacture; and the rather, because Navigation will be more promoted by this, than that of Wooll.

I humbly hope, that enough hath been said to shew that the Plantation-Trade in the State it now is in, is Irregular and Disorderly, and that the Charge of it is Englands, and the Fruits thereof is Reap'd betwixt the Hollander and Ham-burgher on the one Hand, and the Barbadoes Manufacturer on the other; and the Kingdom, and all the rest of the Plantations, are the Sufferers. The next thing to be considered of, is, How the Plantation-Trade may be settled on such a Regular Foundation, as that it may be reciprocally Advantageous to the Kingdom, and all the Plantations in general; and I humbly conceive the Methods to be used for it are very easie, provided the Gentlemen concerned in the interest I have been speaking against, would be content to come into the general Interests of the Kingdom, and set up Sugar-Houses in the Kingdom, instead of those in Barbadoes; let them enjoy the Houses set up there, as Planters; and those set up here, as Refiners or Manufacturers; and why not? They will then stand upon an Equal Foot with the rest of the Plantations there, and with the Manufacturers here, and so make up one Family as it were, one United Interest; they will then be provided for equally with all the King's Subjects; and for these Gentlemen to expect to be priviledged above all, I presume will be thought to be too much; and to be priviledged to go on with an Interest that stands in Opposition to, and poisons all the Interests of the Kingdom in its Manufacture, Navigation and Plantations, is unreasonable to desire, even to a Crime.

I wonder not, that there are so few Sugar-Houses in the Kingdom, but rather that there should be any, under the Difficulties they have always struggled with; and were they not a Frugal Industrious People, they could not continue a Being in the Kingdom, although Refining of Sugar hath been here before ever we had Plantations, and had then, their Supplies for Manufactory from Portugal and the East Indies; but I wonder, that some Gentlemen should so despise and contemn them for their fewness, always arguing that they are not worthy of being considered, because few, and a small Interest, although made so purely by themselves: I am well assured they are not few, as being a Monopoly or Corporation; for they are none, and their Trade is open and free to all, and were there due Encouragements for it, there is no doubt, but there would be enough of it, and why England may not have as many Sugar-Houses added to what now is, as there are Sugar-Houses in Holland, Hamborough, Flanders, &c. that depend upon the Water of our own Fountain, the Sugar of our Plantations for their Supply, I know not, and those in Barbadoes added to them; the Key of this Fountain is in the Hands of our Conservators; and who will, I doubt not, as soon as they see these Streams have run waste, or upon Strangers so long, turn them towards the Kingdom at last.

The Methods, that with all Submission, I would propose for making the Interests of the Kingdom and Plantations, to be Mutual and United, are,

That the Manufacturers in Barbadoes, may be obliged to Import their Sugars unmanufactured, in Barbadoes, as all the other Islands now do, viz, Jamaica, Nevis, Antegoa, St. Christophers, Monserrat, and a great part of Barbadoes.

By Importing their Sugars thus, they give us an entire Navigation homeward, which now is greatly lessened; they will take away the cause why this Manufacture is so little in the Kingdom, and wrested from us by Strangers, and give us an opportunity by increasing this Manufacture, to replenish the Kingdom with People in the Room of those they want from us; and as by some necessary Laws to encourage it above Foreigners, this Manufacture may be wholly in the Kingdom; and thereby multiply Buyers at home, which is the Interest of the Plantations, erect a new Navigation with Sugar Manufactured to all Parts of Europe, not only to the East Country, Spain, Italy, Turkey, Flanders, where, in some measure, we once had; but even to Holland and Hamborough itself, who now have both the Navigation and Manufacture of it from hence; and thus England may be made the Mart of Sugar for all Europe and it's pity that a small Fly, of a Manufactory in Barbadoes, should spoil this great Pot of sweet Oyntment: And that I may shew how Practicable this is, it may not be amiss to represent how useful this would be, by the tastes of Exportation we have had to the places above mentioned, as I am very well informed.

The East Countrey Trade was pretty considerable, and to whatever Value there was of Manufactured or Refined Sugar Exported there, saved so much Silver in the Kingdom, for the Ballance of that Trade is against us, for we must have our Stores for Ships, and they will have our Silver, since they like not our Commodities; Sugar was a Commodity they did like, but the Dutch could supply it Cheaper, by reason of the Drawback, as already mentioned.

As the Trade to the East Countrey saved our Silver, so that to Spain brought us Silver in the lieu of Sugar; and that to Turkey, and Italy, Silk, Grogoram Yarn, Oyls, &c., Commodities that create and help on Manufacture in the Kingdom, which Employs many thousands of Hands.

By the tastes we have had of the Exportation-Trade, may be seen what may be done much more; I do not know, but that next to the East-India Trade and Fishery, this Manufacture and Benefits arising from it, makes the third great Article of Trade to Holland above all other; and that they which are such known Judges of Trade, should so esteem this, as with all their Might and Cunning, to grasp at it, should quicken us, as much in our Endeavours to preserve it for ourselves, and this may be Noted, That they do not suffer any Sugar to be Manufactured on their Plantations, but that it shall be brought home unmanufactured; and all that, is not above Ten or Twelve Sail of Ships a year.

Objection, But will not the giving over of Manufactory of Sugar at Barbadoes, give incouragement to the Dutch and French, &c. to Manufacture theirs on their Plantations, and so be able to under-sell us at Forreign Markets?

Answer, If the French, Dutch, or any other will be so Impolitic, as to Weaken and Impoverish their Kingdom, and Destroy their Navigation, (as by setting up Manufactory in the Plantations they certainly must) I do not know why we should fear that, for England will be the better able to deal with them upon any Difference; but I presume there is no grounds for such Fears; and the only Instance we have of such a Method of Trade, is Portugal, whom, although they were the first that settled Sugar Plantations in Europe, have not yet grown Rich by them, neither in People, nor Navigation; nor never can, in such an Irregular Method as manufacturing on the Plantations; Nay, they are in a manner, beat out of the Sugar Trade, and their Examples must be avoided, unless we would be content with the same Success; but were it not thus, yet is there neither Dutch, French nor Hamburgers that have the advantages we have of so many Plantations; shall we not be able to out-sell the Dutch that hath but one Plantation, and the Hamburger that hath none, when we have Six Islands that are Sugar Plantations? Besides, the Objection is weak, and at best, is but an Argument of the Slothful? There is a Lyon in the way, says he; Such counsellours, if they had an Interest in Namur last year, as now they have in Barbadoes, with as good grounds might have advised not the taking of Namur, for fear the French should take it from us again; for to forbear Improving our Trade, for fear others should take it from us, is giving of it, for fear we should lose it, and that when there is no danger neither.

I hope none will insinuate, as if I design'd* to persuade, from laying out our Treasure and People to all the occasions of the Plantations; those especially, who have not, neither from the Motives of Profits by manufacturing, nor by reason of their loss in having their Buyers at home baulk'd, been drawn from their Duty in Importing their Sugars unmanufactured; and there are five of the six Islands, and part of the sixth; they have done their part, and will always deserve the Care and Helps of the Kingdom whilst they persist; and it is the Barbadoes manufactory alone, that spoils the Harmony in the Interests of Kingdom and Plantations.

It's so usual in treating of a general Interest, to aim at a particular one; That I may possibly have raised some Expectation of wondering what mine is, and to satisfie such, I have only this to say, as I have Treated of the General Diffusive Good and Advantages of the Kingdom; if that takes place, there is no good Englishman but shares in it, either in his Estate, or in his Content and Satisfaction; if mine does not lie in the Kingdom's interest, I am content to go without it; I have delivered nothing but what I believe to be true, and from the Impression it had upon my own Apprehension, it's possible I may have delivered matters in too conclusive a Stile; but with all Humility and Submission, I desire to present them to the Consideration of the August Assembly of Parliament, as Humble Suggestions only; from which possibly may be gathered by Their Great Wisdom, something as a Grain of Wheat from amongst a great deal of Chaff, that may through Improvement in Their Hands, be of use to the Kingdom and Plantations.

I think I can heartily say, That no By-Ends could have prevailed with me to give or take this trouble, but a sincere Zeal for my Countrey, which hath a great many Doors by which goes out its Disbursements, and whilst I did know of any shut against its Reimbursements, of this high moment, I could not be silent; I am told, it's a cause that wants Friends, to Recommend it; and I did then conclude it wanted Friends, because it wanted being made known: I have according to my poor Endeavours, Represented it as Intelligible as I could; and doubt not, but some Worthy Patriots will take it up and promote it, even for its own sake, or rather for the Kingdoms sake.

FINIS.

7. A MEMORIAL OF SEVERAL AGGRIEVANCES AND OPPRESSIONS OF HIS MAJESTY'S SUBJECTS IN THE COLONY OF NEW-YORK IN AMERICA.

Sheweth :

When the Enemies of the Nation had, by their wicked Councils and trayterous Intreagues, brought our Nation to the very Brink of being swallowed up by Popish Superstition and Arbitrary Government, it pleased the Almighty God by his wonderful Omnipotence to bring in Peace and settle his Most Sacred Majesty, King George, upon the British Throne ; and it is to be hoped, that his Subjects in distant Countries, and in particular those of the Colony of New-York, may in some Measure feel the Influence of his Happy Government, and be in due time relieved from all Oppressions.

The West End of the Island Nassau (the then Manhados) Hutsons-River and Staten-Island were first settled by the Dutch from Holland, in great Danger and Hardship many of them being slain by the Salvages ; the East End of the same Island by English under the Crown of England (they then being a Part of Connecticut-Colony) who also settled in great Hazard and Hardship. In some time after the Natives were suppressed, in the year 1664, General Nicols with a Fleet of Ships and some Land Forces reduced the then Manhados to the King's Obedience, it being delivered to him upon Articles. And being thus subjected to the Crown, King Charles the Second making a Grant of the same to his Brother James Duke of York, as by the same may at large appear, the said General Nicols and Commissioners demanded the East End of the Island ; and though the Inhabitants thereof were very much against being moved from Connecticut to New York, yet it was their Misery and unhappy Fate to have it to be so. The Governor, Commissioners and Council took upon them the Legislative Power, and the People were governed by their Ordinances, until Governor Dungan came to be over them, then an Assembly were called, which Privilege was then declared to be the Peoples Right ; and some time after an Act of Assembly passed, That the Persons to be Elected to sit as Representatives in the General Assembly from time to time, for the several Cities, Towns, Counties, Shires, Divisions or Mannors of this Province, and all Places within the same, shall be according to the Proportion and Number hereafter expressed ; that is to say, For the City and County of New-York four, for the County of Suffolk two, for Queens-County two, for Kings-County two, for the County of Richmond two, for the County of Westchester two, for the County of Ulster two, for the County of Albany two, for the Mannor of Ranslerwick one, and for Dukes County two, and as many more as their Majesties, their Heirs and Successors shall think fit to establish ; That all Persons chosen as aforesaid, or the major Part of them, shall be deemed and accounted the Representatives of this Province in General Assembly, and such Acts made by them, consented to by the Governor and Counsel, shall be the Laws of the Province, until they are disallowed by their Majesties, their Heirs and Successors, or expire by their own Limitation. And though by this Act, their Majesties, their Heirs and Successors may establish as many more, as they shall think fit : It is not to be thought that our Most Gracious Sovereign King George, will establish so many in such Places, that they may live upon other Parts of the Government, and great Injustice be done thereby, neither give Power to his Governor so to do ; But that His Most Sacred Majesty would have Justice done : Notwithstanding of late there hath been Precepts issued out for choice of Representatives in what Part and Places of the Government as he pleaseth. So that notwithstanding the Law, they are raised to the Number of Twenty-Five ; and now the Minor Part of the People in the Government have the Major Part of the Assembly, and for their Interest Oppress a great Part of the People, and they lie under great Disadvantages ; as may appear by the following Proportion of a 4000 l. Tax, and several other Particulars upon the several Counties in the Colony, here is an Account of the Men, Inhabitants in each County, and their Representatives in the Assembly ; also the Quota of Tax in the same.

	Number of Men.	Assembly Men.	Quota of Tax.
			l.	s.	d.
In the City and County of New-York.....	1200	4	885	00	0
County of Albany, with Ranslerwick.....	540	4	175	10	0
Kings County.....	420	2	730	00	0
Queens County.....	1000	2	644	10	0
County of Suffolk.....	800	2	680	10	0
County of Ulster.....	620	2	311	10	0
County of Westchester.....	630	3	240	00	0
County of Richmond.....	350	2	226	13	4
Orange County.....	65	2	60	00	0
Dutchess County.....	60	2	46	06	8
	5685	25	4000	00	0

By this Plan it is evident, that the several Counties are very unequally Represented, as well with Regard to the Number of Inhabitants in each, as to the Taxes they pay; And to this Disproportion of Assembly-Men is to be ascribed the unequal Taxing of the several Counties, without respect to their Number of People, their Riches and Commerce. To evince this it will appear, that Kings-County, Queens-County, and County of Suffolk, which contain 2220 Men, have only Six Representatives in Assembly, and are taxed at 2055 l. whereas all the other Counties, having in them 3465 Men, and so many Representatives that they are taxed only at 1945 l. So that at this time there is up Hudsons-River Ten Assembly-Men, in Albany, Ranslerwick, Ulster, Orange and Dutchess Counties, and all those Ten represent, do not pay in one Tax so much as one County on the Island of Nassau, where they have but two in each County. And for what Disbursements and Services done on the same Island, for publick Service there is very little if any thing paid them: When for publick Disbursements and Services done up Hudsons-River (do but give it the Name for their Majesties Service) altho' it be to draw Trade to them, or to go to purchase Land for themselves, it is brought to the Assembly to put the Charge upon the Country; and for the most part they get twice so much as others in part of the Government would demand for the same Service, if it were for the Publick. It is a Privilege to have an Assembly, if it were as near as may be according to the Number of the People in each County, that Justice and Right might be done: But to have the Name and nothing of the Nature, is but a Snare to the greatest Part of the People in the Colony, and would be easier for them that there was not any Assembly, than to have such an One as endeavour to live upon their Neighbours, and not by them, and shall be called True and Loyal Subjects, complying to all Proposals for some Mens Advantage; when others, endeavoring to have Justice and Right done, and speak any thing for Property and Liberty of the Subjects, shall be looked upon as Criminals, if not prosecuted for the same, as Capt. Mulford was. It is supposed there are some things else besides Loyalty, as An Officer with a Sallery, A Grant of some Lands, and A Sallery of Three Hundred Pounds per Ann. to the Commissioners of the Indian Affairs at Albany; though it is not known to the Country, what Service they do to the King or Country, except it be to draw Trade to themselves and Debts upon the Country, and procure a Resolve of the Assembly to allow them 300 l. per Annum for five Years, and also to Allow the Indians 400 l. by a Resolve of the House for the same time. And so in time of Peace have brought the Colony to be Tributaries to the Heathen, and when the five Years are expired, the Indians will expect it for ever; and if they have it not, they will think they have just Cause to Quarrel with the English. And of what dismal Consequence are such Measures? But it is thought that the Indians did not expect such a Present now, but that it was some body else that wanted it: For 400 l. at New York, with the Customary Advance of 50 l. per Cent. at Albany, makes 600 l. And if the Indians have 400 l. there, it will do; also somebody must present it to the Indians, who in Retaliation return several Packs of Beaver and other Skins: The Report is, that sometimes to the Value of the Present, which is unknown to the Publick what becomes of it. But it is thought to be the greatest Reason of Making the Present, and so bring His Majesties Subjects to be Tributaries. If it were of Necessity to do it, and were for the publick good of the Plantations in America, why do not the Neighbouring Colonies assist, which are as deeply concerned for their own Security?

The Indians that fled out of New-England are settled near Albany, and those from North-Carolina, when fled from thence, come there for Shelter, amongst those Indians which their Majesties Subjects in New-York Government are brought to be Tributaries to; and it is thought that the Present that was made to those Indians in the year 1713, put them in a Capacity to assist in destroying their Majesties Subjects in South-Carolina. The Report is, That when the Wars were in North-Carolina they had Assistance from South Carolina, the Albany Members informed the Assembly, That there was Five Hundred of the Enemy Indians come amongst the Five Nations. They also informed the House, That they thought it was requisite to make a Present to the Indians: Amongst some slight Arguments, they said, The young Men amongst our Indians armed themselves, and it was to be feared they were upon some ill Design: So in the latter End of the Summer they had a Present of 400 l. The Report was, That the Winter following there were Indians from South-Carolina amongst the Five Nations, complaining that the English at South-Carolina had taken their Land from them, and craved their Assistance. In the Spring following the Wars were at South-Carolina, and it was reported, that several Indians from those Five Nations were gone when the Wars were there, and the latter End of that Summer the Indians Sold (at Scunnatade, about twenty miles above Albany) Beaver Hats bound with Silver Lace, Wigs, good Broad Cloth Coats, and Shirts; It is so reported that it is thought to be real Matter of Fact, and it might be well if it were not so. It was commonly reported, That the Albany-People made a Truce with the French of Canada, and had a Trade with them all the Time of the Wars: Notwithstanding by their Remonstrances to the Assembly, of their Danger, and they being a Frontier, the Country was at great charge keeping Garrison there, and all the Officers must be of Albany, and most of the Money for that Service centers among them, which was thought to be the greatest Reason for that Service. And if the Governor for the time being hath Power to Establish so many Representatives, and in what Places of the Government he pleaseth (as it now is) and such as for their own Interest will do and comply with all Proposals to bring it to pass, and the Governor to put in Office whom he will, and as many as he pleaseth, and allow them what Sallery he sees cause, and all the publick money in the Government at his Disposal, to no other Use but at his Will: Then the People in the Colony, have not the Property and Liberty of English Subjects, but are subjected to some Mens Avarice; not only to those who have the Name of Christians, but to the barbarous and cruel Heathen. And is it not a Dishonor to His Majesties Crown and Dignity, that his Subjects should be sold Tributaries to them? Would it not be better for them to part with one Half of their Personal Estates, for Encouragement for 5000 or 6000 Men to come and suppress those Salvages, that his Majesties Subjects could not live quietly by, and to possess their Lands, and not become Tributaries to them, or at least to do as those of Quebeck did in October, 18, 1716, on the Interruption of their Commerce by the Savages, living Four Hundred Leagues up the Country, went with Three Hundred French and Six Hundred Savages their Allies, to bring them to a better Temper: And finding the Enemy well entrenched with Pallisadoes and good Ditches, they planted themselves near enough to the Pallisadoes, and threw two Granadoes, brought them to Surrender and agree to pay the Expence they had been at, and restore to the French their former Skin Trade, as before; and they had but one F[r]enchman and two Savages wounded in that Expedition, thought [Sic] there were above 3000 Men Women and Children in that Fort. So that it is a Quare, whether it be not more for some particular Mens Interest, to make so much Stir for Presents to the Indians and bring the Colony to such vast Charge, than it is for a publick Good.

The poor Colony of New-York, containing in it not above 6000 Men at the most, were at the charge of at least 30000 l. upon the Expedition for Canada, upwards of 27000 l. to pay some small Debts and make good the Embasselment of the public money in the Government, and 4045 l. per Annum for five Years by Resolves of the House, part of which is to bring them to be Tributaries to the Heathen, and pay Men to bring it so to be; and now the Colony is miserably distressed, if not vassaled: The Sence whereof caused several to move out of the same, and several more purpose to do so, if they cannot be relieved.

A great Part of the Aggrievances and Injustice done in the Colony may be ascribed to an unequal Proportion of Representatives; and if not redressed, may ruin the Colony. If there were an equal Proportion of them, as near as may be according to the Number of the People in each County, then they might in the strongest Manner unite Hearts of all the Subjects, and put an effectual End to all the Feuds and Animosities that have obstructed Prosperity in the Colony for a course of many Years.

There is a Court of Chancery erected at New-York, where the Governor is sole Judge, and if he demands any thing in the King's Name and it is not comply'd with, they shall be subpœna'd to the Court of Chancery, where the Governor shall judge whether he shall have his Demands; the Masters of Chancery shall not judge in the cause, only tax the Costs of the Court. So in all cases that come to that Court, the Governor is only and sole Judge, whether the Cause be right by the Verdict of Twelve Men and Judgment upon the same. So the Governor becomes The End of all Law and Judgment in the Government: Let the Judicial Reader judge, whether it be not a Miserable and Unhappy Fate to be subjected, both Persons and Estates, to the Will and Pleasure of any Governor for the time being, especially considering the People under the Government by Experience find the chief End of their Coming. It may be said, You have an Agent for your Colony. Answer, Though there be an Act for an Agent for the Colony of New-York, yet by the same Act he is Agent for the Governor, and not for the Country, they have nothing to do but to pay him, and send to him such Instructions as the Governor shall approve of; for it is said in the Act, That the Instructions sent to him, shall be by the Governor and Council, or General Assembly; and what is sent by the Governor and Council shall be signed by the Governor and major Part of the Council, residing within the Province, and what is sent by the General-Assembly, shall be Signed by the major Part of them and the Speaker; and if any thing comes to him otherwise, then as aforesaid, he shall not have any Regard to it.

Observe, The Governor hath Power to call some to sit in Council, they must acquiesce with what he proposeth, lest they be suspended; and for the Assembly, if the Governor hath power to have them chosen where he pleaseth, and get the Soldiers to chuse for such Men in New-York as they shall be directed to chuse to serve upon the Assembly, the most subtle Men to have a Grant of some Lands, an Office with a large Sallary, as several of the Assembly Men have, they must comply to the Governor's Proposals, and make Resolves to allow the Governor 1710*l.* per Annum, for five years, the Chief Justice 300*l.* per Annum, for the same time, the Commissioners of the Indian Affairs at Albany 300*l.* per Annum, for the same time, and some others of the Assembly Sums too tedious here to relate.

So that some for their Interest and others for Fear dare not oppose any thing proposed, but comply with whatsoever is for the Governor's and some cunning Mens Advantages: And how can the major Part of the Assembly make known the Aggrievances of the People, when they are drawn and deter'd from speaking. And if the major Part and Speaker of the Assembly should be about to send to the Agent, if the Governor should not like it, he could dissolve the Assembly at his Pleasure, and so prevent them of sending. So it must be what he pleaseth; and if Demetrius and the Craftsmen of the same Occupation made such an Uproar about Paul's Preaching the Gospel at Ephesus, because it took away their Gain and Wealth, what Stir do you think these Men will make, if any should endeavour to break the Schemes they have laid, whereby they get their Wealth, and wholly subject the People to their Pleasure? But if the Governor be infallible, and the People under his Government both Persons and Estates at his Pleasure, then it is in vain to dispond or complain; but if the people have Property, and the Government ought to be carried on for His Majesties Benefit, and Good of the Subjects, then such Measures as these ought to be took into Consideration and what is amiss to be rectified.

The People in New York Government have been called Stubborn, Reflectory, little if any thing less than Rebels, when they have been Oppressed under the Government, and Ruinous Measures taken amongst them, whereby they are deprived of the Privileges of Englishmen, and they have been uneasie under the same: And there is not any reason to Vilify, Scandalize and Reproach them, except to render them so vile, that not any should have Regard of them, to relieve them from Oppressions. But he that doth Injustice dishonours the King, and those that endeavour to uphold and vindicate such, are Accessaries though not Principals.

These are some of the Measures that are and have been taken in New-York Government; although the Truth of this may be questioned, yet many One in the Colony of New-York by woful Experience knows this and several other Oppressions to be real Matter of Fact.

And although there was an Act of Parliament passed in the Reign of King William III. For Punishing of Governors of Plantations in this Kingdom, for Crimes by* them committed in the Plantations, what Benefit can the People in New-York Government have by this Act, when they cannot have an Agent to be informed of the Aggrievances of the People, nor any Publick Money in the Government, to enable any other Person to do it, but what the Governor pleaseth. And for particular Persons, when denied to make Use of the Customs of the Colony and Grants made by former Governors, denied the Benefit of the Laws of the Colony, Prosecuted contrary to Law, passed upon and destroyed without due Course of Law; How shall they relieved from such Oppressions,* when by their Poverty and Ruinous Measures are so impoverish'd, that they have not Money to prosecute in such Case[s]? These must be Ruin'd: for there is not any Fencing against a Flail.

So, by what is here set forth, may be left to the Consideration of all Judicial Persons, what Encouragement such a small People as are in New-York Colony have, to allow their Governor such a large Sallery. Quare, Is the Government carried on for their Majesties Benefit, and Good of the Subjects, according to the Laws and Customs of the Colony, and according to English Government; or is it Arbitrary, Illegal, Grievous, Oppressive, Unjust and Destructive?

8. REASONS HUMBLY OFFERED FOR THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF MAKING IRON IN HIS MAJESTY'S PLANTATIONS OF AMERICA.

The Swedes, of all Nations in Europe in Proportion to their Trade, carry the greatest Quantities of Gold and Silver from England; yet no other Kingdom has endeavored to impose on us as they have done.

Within this Twenty Years, the Government and Company of Stockholm Engrossed all the Tar, which they obliged us to take at extravagant Prices; and had not the Parliament of England prudently provided against their monopoly, by encouraging the making that Commodity in our own Plantations, it's hard to judge what Difficulties they might have put us to by this Time.

The Necessity the present Parliament was under to prohibit Trade with them, has raised Iron near 50 per Cent. and if it should be to be opened again, they are preparing a new Imposition to be laid on it of near 25, per Cent. which we must pay, provided no other Supply can be found out.

The English Plantations in America abound with Wood, Iron-Oar, and other Materials for making Iron; and if suitable Encouragement was given, we might be supplied with great Quantities from thence.

This would engage the People in these Colonies to employ themselves in making Iron, and enable them to make Returns for purchasing Woollen Manufactures, and other Productions of England, to supply their Wants, and prevent their falling on our Manufactures, which their Necessities (if not otherwise provided for) will force them to.

Since we can be so well supplied by our own Subjects, who will be paid for their Iron by the Manufactures of England, we shall prevent the ill Treatment we have received from Sweden, encourage our own Navigation, keep our Money at home, and save the great Expence of fitting out a Royal Navy to protect our Trade.

The Bounty on Pitch and Tar has already so well establish'd those Manufactures in our own Plantations, that England has Pitch enough for their own consumption from thence; and export great Quantities to Holland, Hamburgh, Portugal, Spain, &c. And 'tis to be hoped those Manufactures will be so well established in a short Time, that they will support themselves.

Such considerable Sums must be laid out to erect Iron-Works, that when once built, will engage the Proprietors to proceed on making Iron; which is a Security to the Government that the Encouragement given will answer the end proposed.

Note,—That the granting the Bounty or Plantation Pitch and Tar has supplied us with such Quantities from thence, that the Price of Pitch is brought down to 6s. per Cent [cwt. ?], or under; whereas formerly we paid for Swedish pitch 16s. per Cent [cwt. ?]. And the Price of Tar to 14s. per Barrel, for which we formerly gave the Swedes 3*l.* per barrel.

Great Sums of Money have been paid by way of Bounty, yet it is presumed it does not amount to so much (allowing the Bounty to be Part of the first cost) as the extraordinary Price the Swedes would have had from us for the Pitch and Tar used by the Navy; and 'tis to be doubted, whether they would have supplied us with all we wanted for our money.*

The same Success may be expected from Iron made in the Plantations, provided a Bounty was allowed on the importing it.

(At the back:—) Reasons Humbly offered for the Encouragement of making Iron in his Majesty's Plantations of America.

* See Dr. Robinson's Letter, when Envoy Extraordinary in Sweden, to Sir Charles Hedges then Secretary of State from Warsaw, August 4, 1703.

9. REASONS AGAINST A GENERAL PROHIBITION OF THE IRON MANUFACTURE IN HIS MAJESTY'S PLANTATIONS, INTENDED BY A CLAUSE IN THE BILL NOW DEPENDING, ENTITLED, A BILL FOR ENCOURAGING THE IMPORTATION OF NAVAL STORES FROM AMERICA.

I. If the Clause be taken in a strict Sense, all Iron Work for building Ships, Houses, Mills, and even what is necessary for Instruments to Till the Ground, will be forbid to be made there; whereby it will become impracticable to live in the Plantations, because this Sort of Iron Manufacture must be made on the Spot, that it may be fram'd and fitted to the Size of the Work.

II. To forbid his Majesty's Subjects the making any Sort of Iron Wares, when its for their own Necessary Use, and not for Exportation, seems to bear hard on the common Rights and Liberties of Mankind; especially, when the Ore is what their own Soil yields, and what is found but in small Quantities comparatively in the Mother Kingdom.

III. If such a Prohibition be thought just to prevent the Plantations from interfering with the Iron-Workers in this Kingdom, all other Tradesman may expect, in their Turns, to be forbid Working at their respective Callings. For, by the same Reason, the People may be forbid making Cheese or Cyder, for fear of prejudicing the Manufactures in Cheshire and Herefordshire.

IV. It is humbly conceiv'd, there is no Occasion for this Clause. All Labour is so excessively dear in the Plantations, that no Manufacture of the lesser Iron Wares can vend, or ever does there, but when it happens by Accident that there is a great Scarcity of the same Commodity made in Great Britain.

V. The Encouragement given in the Bill for the Importation of Bar Iron from the Plantations, by taking off the Duty, which is Three Pounds per Tun, is not sufficient to bring it in; of which there needs no other Proof, than that a Tun of Iron is worth Sixty Pounds in New-England, their money, and but Twenty Pounds here, to say nothing of the chargeable Freight thence; so that if the Clause pass, the Iron Ore in the Plantations will be of Use neither there nor here.

VI. It seems a farther Hardship, that the Subjects Abroad should be permitted to forge their Ore into Bars, but not to run or cast it into Pots and other Implements, because the same Fire, and even the same Heat, will suffice for both.

It is therefore humbly pray'd, That the Clause prohibiting any Kind of Iron Wares to be made in the Plantations, tho' for their own Use, and not for Exportation, be left out of the Bill.

(At back:—) Reasons Against A General Prohibition of the Iron Manufacture in his Majesty's Plantations, intended by a Clause in the Bill now depending, entitled, A Bill for Encouraging the Importation of Naval Stores from America.

10. REASONS FOR ENCOURAGEING THE MAKING OF IRON IN OUR PLANTATIONS, AND THE OBJECTIONS ANSWER'D.

1. Iron made in our Plantations (either in Pigs or Bars) will be a very good Return for Goods Exported, and never miss a market when brought home,

2. We should have a Market of our own, to supply ourselves from, in case any Rupture happens between us and those Countries, from whence we have hitherto been supplied.

3. We make in England scarce one third Part of the Iron that is here manufactur'd: So that our Iron Manufacture depending on Materials from Foreigners, must be cramp'd when they please; which will be prevented by having it in our own Colonies.

4. The Iron that may be made in our Plantations, will be as good (if not better) than the best from Sweden, as by some Samples now made, doth appear; and would in all probability (if need require it) make as good Steel as any of that doth; as in a few Weeks may be more fully prov'd.

5. We can have from thence Iron made as proper for the Guinea Trade as any from Sweden, which Sort (as well as all others) is grown very scarce, and will be hereafter so, as oft as the King of Sweden pleases, if not prevented; that sort hitherto coming wholly from thence.

6. We shall then have one Market more than we have hitherto had, to supply our selves from: By that means it will be the more plentiful, and Goods made thereof Cheaper, which will much increase the Sales of our Iron Manufactures.

7. As the Manufacture in the Iron Yearly Encreases, so ought the Quantities of Iron to encrease proportionably; else the Tradesmen can't Supply their Demands, nor employ be found for the increasing Number of Workmen.

8. Iron from the Plantations would be wholly Purchas'd with our own Manufactures; by which means our Trade thither would increase proportionably to the additional Returns we shall have from thence in Iron.

THE OBJECTIONS ARE CHIEFLY,

1. A Surmise, That the consequence of encouraging Iron-Works in our Plantations, will be a means of carrying out Iron Manufacture thither: How Groundless this Supposition is, both Sweden and Spain are notorious Examples to the contrary. However, we desire proper Restrictions may be made by the Parliament to prevent the growing of the Manufacture to our prejudice here. As for Instance, The Carriage of a Tun of Iron into the heart of the Kingdom where the chief Manufacture lies, and the Carriage of the Goods back into our Plantations of that Tun of Iron here Manufactur'd, will not exceed Five Pound Ten Shillings: Now if a Duty of Seven or Eight Pound per Tun was laid on all the Iron that is sold there, for the Planters Uses (having a Mark Stamp'd on it, and a Penalty on any Person that works there any Iron without such Mark) would effectually prevent the Increase of the Iron Manufacture there, and yet be no Burthen to the Planters, who would then have Iron as cheap, nay cheaper, than now; for making their Husbandry Utensils, and other Necessaries, when Iron-Works are there settled, and brought to some Perfection.

2. Another is, That it would be a greater charge to Convoy it thence in time of War; which is very frivolous to suppose, that the same Number of Men of War, will not as well Convoy 40 Merchants Ship, as 35, which is greater odds, probably than the Addition of Iron from thence will make.

3. That if the Legislative should allow a Bounty for Iron Imported from our Plantations, it would encourage them to make it bad for the sake of the Premium: But the Price of Iron, and the Premium that may be presum'd will be allow'd, being so much disproportionable to that of Pitch, Tar, &c. That whoever does so, must abate much more than that in the Price when he sells, which is so far from the Maker's Interest to do, that it will be greatly to his Loss.

4. As to the Ballance of the Iron Trade, mention'd in the Objections, it is very evident, That it will be so much more in our Favour here, by all the Profits of the Goods, that do purchase the Iron that comes from our own Plantations.

(Addressed in MS. at the back :—) For Charles Cooke Esqr. member of Parliament, Westminster.

11. REASONS HUMBLY OFFERED FOR THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF MAKING IRON AND COPPER IN HIS MAJESTY'S PLANTA-TIONS OF AMERICA.

The Necessity the Present Parliament was under, to prohibit Trade with Swedeland, has raised Iron near 50 per Cent. And if i[t] should be opened again, they are preparing a new Imposition to be laid on it of near 25 per Cent. which we must pay, provided no other Supply can be found out.

The English Plantations in America abound with Wood, Iron, and Copper Oar, and other materials, for making Iron and Copper: And if suitable Encouragement was given, we might be supply'd with great Quantities from thence.

This would engage the People in those Colonies to employ themselves in making Iron and Copper, and enable them to make Returns for purchasing Woollen Manufactures, and other Productions of England to supply their Wants, and prevent their falling on our Manufactures, which their Necessities (if not otherwise provided for) will force them to.

Since we can be so well supply'd by our own Subjects, who will be paid for their Iron and Copper by the Manufactures of England, we shall prevent the ill Treatment we have received from Sweden, encourage our own Navigation, keep our Money at Home, and save the great Expence of fitting out a Royal Navy to Protect our Trade.

We should then have a Market of our own, to supply our selves from, in Case any Rupture happens between us and those Countries from whence we have hitherto been supply'd.

We make in England scarce one Third Part of the Iron that is here manufactur'd. So that our Iron Manufacture depending on Materials from Foreigners, must be cramped when they please; which will be prevented by having it made in our own colonies.

The Iron and Copper that may be made in our Plantations, will be as good as the best from Sweden, as by some Samples now made doth appear. And the Iron would in all Probability (if need require it) make as good Steel as any of that doth: As in a few weeks may be more fully proved. And is the fittest for Gun-Barrels and bears the best Proof.

We can have from thence Iron and Copper Bars made, as proper for the Guinea Trade, as any from Sweden; both which are grown very scarce, and will be hereafter so, as oft as the King of Sweden pleases, if not prevented.

We shall then have one Market more than we have hitherto had to supply our selves from: By that means it will be more Plentiful, and Goods made thereof Cheaper, which will much Increase the Sales of our Iron and Brass Manufactures.

As the Manufacture in the Iron and Brass Yearly increases, so ought the Quantities of Iron and Brass to increase proportionably, else the Tradesmen can't supply their Demands; nor Employ be found for the increasing Number of Workmen.

Such considerable Sums must be laid out to erect Iron and Copper Works, that when once built, will engage the Proprietors to proceed on making Iron and Copper; which is a Security to the Government, that the Encouragement given will answer the end proposed.

(At the Back:—) Reasons Humbly offer'd for the Encouragement of making Iron and Copper in His Majesty's Plantations of America.

12. REASONS FOR MAKING BAR, AS WELL AS PIG OR SOW-IRON
IN HIS MAJESTY'S PLANTATIONS.

1. Except Bar as well as Sow-Iron be admitted, the Quantity in the Plantations will fall much short of what may be expected, it being hoped we may make more Sow-Iron than our Market at Home can take off.

2. The Iron Works in England not being able to supply near one Third Part of the Bar-Iron demanded, must occasion the same Importation as hath hitherto been from Sweden, and consequently carry out our Bullion to purchase it, unless more Works be erected, which would still create a further want of Wood.

3. This will prevent the Exportation of our Manufactures of Woollen, &c., which would be sent to purchase it in our own Plantations; besides the Discouragement to our Navigation, and the employing of our Poor in the Plantations and at Home.

4. To have a Supply of Iron, in his Majesty's Plantations, in case of a Rupture with Sweden or Spain, would prevent the distressing our Manufactures; as hath so lately happened to the Discouragement of Trade, and raising the Price of Manufactured Iron Wares amongst us.

5. To extend this Law only to Sow or Pig Iron, would in a great measure frustrate the good Design of the present Bill now before this Honourable House.

6. The Manufacturing Iron into small Wares in the Plantations can never be effected, till their Labour comes to one Fourth Part of the Price that it now is: Iron being made into Bars there for Forty Years past, and Nine or Ten Iron-Works of many Years standing, and no Hindrance to our sending Iron-Wares from hence; which is a clear Demonstration that we are in no Danger.

7. Making Bar, as well as Sow-Iron, in the Plantations, will greatly increase the Quantity, and consequently the Riches of the Nation.

8. The want of Iron for this Two Years past, has created great Uneasiness in our Workmen, and put them under great Difficulties to subsist, and given Opportunity to our Neighbouring Countries to tempt them away.

Upon Examining the Imports for the Years 1714 and 1715, when a Free Trade was settled, we find imported in those Two Years above Forty Thousand Ton of Foreign Iron; which with the Swedish New Duties, and Tonnage on our Shipping, could not stand in so little as 12*l.* per ton.

That our usual Exports of wrought Iron is from 1900 to 2000 Ton yearly.

That about Six Hundred Ton thereof is exported to our Neighbouring Kingdoms of Europe.

That from 13 to 1400 Ton is annually exported to our Plantations; much about one Half thereof is sent to the Sugar-Islands, the rest to New England, Virginia, &c.

Those that are afraid of injuring our Manufacturies, by making Bar-Iron in America, will not pretend any Danger of our Trade to the Sugar-Islands, for they can make no Iron; therefore allowing that full 700 Ton is now exported to the Continent, and that this Nation should lose all the Manufacturing thereof, and allowing full 12*s.* per Hundred for the Workmanship, it comes but to 8400*l.* For the first cost of the Iron must be deducted.

But 20000 Ton of Iron at 12*l.* per Ton comes to 240000*l.* and 'tis well known, Sweden takes nothing from us for their Iron, but our Bullion. And therefore on a Supposition, that 8400*l.* worth of Labour in the Iron Manufactories may be injured, we must be necessitated to send out our Gold and Silver Annually to supply us with Iron, which might be purchased with our Woollen and other Manufactures, and the Labour of our own People from our own Plantations, and keep us dependant on the Courtesy of Sweden, &c. for Iron and other Naval Stores, as we have been for many Years.

(At back:—) Reasons For Making of Bar as well as Pig or Sow-Iron in His Majesty's Plantations.

13. REASONS HUMBLY OFFER'D AGAINST ENCOURAGING THE MAKING OF IRON IN AMERICA.

It will appear by the Custom-House Books, that there hath not been for many Years 100 Ounces of Silver exported to Sweden; and that the Exportation of the Woollen Manufactures to Sweden increased in the three Years from Christmas 1711 to Christmas 1714, more than in the three Years from Christmas 1708 to Christmas 1711,

The Swedes are so far from laying a new Duty of Five and Twenty per cent that his Swedish Majesty hath lately published a Placart, That any Ships that bring in Merchandize, shall have Iron, or other Merchandize, for it; and that all the Corn and other Provisions imported, shall pay no Duty to Sweden: And by the Prohibition to Trade there, 'tis obvious to all the World, the Dutch are great Gainers, and We great Sufferers in our Manufactories and Foreign Trades.

Should a Bounty be allow'd for making Iron, 'twould certainly be a Means to make it bad for the Sake thereof, (as they have done in the Pitch and Tar) and would be very destructive to our Manufacture here. which is now in great Perfection; and it would be hard to make Ireland pay a Duty for what Iron they make there, and import hither, who contribute so largely to the Expence of England.

It was never thought the Interest of England to encourage the Colonies to Manufacture any Thing that was Manufactured in England; and the Iron Manufacture is the second in the Kingdom, which maintains at least 200,000 People; and, if lost, those People must be an heavy Burthen to their Parishes, particularly in the counties of Worcester, Stafford, Warwick, Salop, Lancaster, York, great Part of Wales, and other Places, and considerably lessen the Value of the Land and Rents in those counties.

Should Encouragement be given to the Colonies, especially to Virginia, 'twould not encourage our Navigation; for there's no Ship that comes from thence, but will bring a considerable Quantity of Iron, and her full Quantity of Tobacco also; and therefore not employ many more Ships in the Virginia Trade. And the Making of Iron in any other Parts of America, will occasion a larger Fleet to convoy the Ships from thence than from Sweden, should we have a War with any Nation whatever.

There is no Iron yet known proper for Steel made here, but the best Swedish; and the Steel Manufacture is very advantageous to England, at least Fifty per Cent. in Manufacturing.

There are Collieries in New-England, and the Smiths there buy Coals as cheap as a Smith in London; and by that and other Advantages, the People of New-England did Manufacture considerably; which being laid before the Honourable the House of Commons, they took off the Drawback from unmanufactured Iron and Steel Exported to America in the year 1711, being the Ninth of Queen Anne.

The Encouraging the Making of Iron in America, will put them upon Manufacturing, and they will supply themselves first, and all the Colonies; so that the Manufacturers here must starve. America cannot supply England with any Iron for many Years; and the Want of Iron is already sufficiently known to all Traders, Handicrafts, Husbandmen, Shipwrights, Merchants, and others.

The Americans have the Advantage of 5*l.* per Tun and upwards, in Making of Iron in their Wood, and Oar, more than the English have; which will over and above pay the great Wages in America, and the Freight to England.

When there was an open Trade with Sweden, the Swedish Iron Imported into England paid annually 40,000*l.* Custom, which will be so much Loss to the Revenue if the Americans Import Iron free, and much more if a Bounty be given them, could they supply us.

(At the Back:—) Reasons Humbly Offered against Encouraging the making of Iron in America.

14. THE PRESENT STATE OF THE TOBACCO-PLANTATIONS IN AMERICA.

Before the present War, France and Spain annually took off near 20000 Hogshead of Virginia and Maryland Tobacco; but of late both those Kingdoms have been otherwise supply'd.

The Troubles in Sweden, Poland, Russia, &c. have prevented the usual Exportations of great Quantities of Tobacco to those Parts.

Virginia and Maryland have severely felt the Loss of such Exportations, having so far reduc'd the Planters, that for several years past, the whole Product of their Tobacco would hardly clothe the Servants that made it, notwithstanding the ready and earnest Endeavours of the Lords Commissioners of Trade, &c. to prevent such Mischiefs, and encourage the Tobacco-Trade.

This hath produc'd two effects.

Ist. Some, in hopes of better Success, have continued Planting, till they have run themselves so far in Debt, that they have been forc'd to sell part of their Land and Servants, to secure the rest.

IId. Others, out of meer Necessity, have fallen into the Manufacturing of Woollen, Cotton, Flax, Leather, &c. Which they have brought to such Perfection, that four whole Counties, and part of several others, not only clothed themselves, but sold great Quantities of the same Manufactures to other neighbouring Counties.

These Plantations of Virginia and Maryland, in Times of Peace, yearly, (and in the War, in Fleets) have taken off not less than the value of 300000 l. Sterl. in the Woollen and other Manufactures of this Kingdom; and, in return, send the Product of their Labour, Tobacco; which pays annually to the Crown above 400000 l. Customs, exclusive of what is drawn back, by Debenture, on Exportation.

Wherefore it is humbly hop'd, a general Liberty, and further Encouragement may speedily be given, for the Exporting of Tobacco, and all other Products of the Plantations, and Manufactures of Great Britain not counterband, for France, &c. to prevent the impending Ruin of the Plantations, and regain the advantageous Trade of sending the Woollen and other Manufactures of Great Britain to those Colonies, which otherwise must annually decrease.

Note,—Establishing of Woollen, and other Manufactures in America, will not only lessen the Planting Tobacco, but consequently very much diminish the Revenue and Navigation of this Kingdom.

15. THE CASE OF MADAM JANE ALLEN WIDDOW AND RELICT OF THOMAS ALLEN ESQR. SON AND HEIR OF SAMUEL ALLEN ESQR. MERCHANT PROPRIETOR OF THE PROVINCE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE IN NEW ENGLAND WITH RELATION TO THE PROVINCE OF THE MASSACHUSETT BAY IN NEW ENGLAND.

The Province of New Hampshir aforesaid was granted unto John Mason Esq^r. from King James the first. The grant unto the Company of the Massachett Bay from King Charles y^e first, wherein His Majesty King Charles was Imposed upon not being truly Informed of the bounds by Inserting in the Massachetts Grant a Considerable and best part of the Land before granted to said John Mason who had been at more than Thirty Thousand Pounds Sterling Charge in setling the same as by the Tryalls on the Case in New England and before his Majesty in Council hath been made apparent.

The said John Mason Esq^r. departed this Life in the year of Our Lord 1635 and by his last Will and Testament bequeathed the Premises to his Grand-son Robert Tufton Mason a Minor.

After the decease of s^d. John Mason the Governo^r & Company of the Massachett Bay province usurped the Authority & Government of the New-Hampshir, Pretending y^e same to be within their grant, whereof Complaint being made a Quo Warranto was Issued out & served upon the Governo^r & Comp^a. of said Massachusetts Bay Province appeared disclaimed any right or title to the Soile or land of New-Hampshire and entry thereof made in the Council Book. For which and other causes the Charter to the Governo^r & Comp^a of Massachusetts Bay was declared Null & Void in the Reign of King Charles the Second.

After which petition was made to King James the second for restoring the Massachusetts Charter, but not obtained yett after y^e happie Revolution King William and Queen Mary of Glorious memory did grant unto the Governo^r & Comp^a of Massachusetts Bay a New Charter w^{ch} they now Enjoy but with a Limitation and reservation in hæc verba viz^t. Provided also that nothing herein contained shall extend or be Understood or taken to Impeach or Prejudice any right title or Interest or demand which Samuel Allen of London, Merchant from and under John Mason Esq^r Deceased or any other person or Persons hath, or have claimeth or claim to have hold or enjoy of into or out of any part or parts of y^e premises Scituate within the limits above mentioned, But the s^d Samuél Allen or all & every Such person or persons may and shal have hold & Enjoy the Same in Such manner (and no other then) as If these presents had not been had or made.

Notwithstanding y^e said Provision and Limitation in the right behalf and favour of the Proprietor of New-Hampshire so full & plain as words can Express in said Charter made the late Governo^r of s^d Massachusetts Bay Province Joseph Dudley Esq^r. with the Council and General Assembly of s^d Province have passed and made Several grants of Land to his son William Dudley Esq^r.

John Bridger Esq^r with others in s^d grant named which Lands are truly within New-Hampshire, as also Several other grants directly contrary to y^e Limitation and reservation made in the Said Charter.

By which it appears the Province of Massachusetts Bay are Computed with the reasons Suggested in the Bill, and that they have and do Exercise arbitrary Power, and that over people who are not within the Limitts of their Charter.

This Memorialist therefore doth humbly pray that a Surveighor may be appointed by his Majesty to Lay out the Bounds of the Several respective Charters for the better regulation of y^e Charter and proprietary Govern^{ts} in America and of his Majestys plantations whereby the just & true bounds of the Several Governments wil be plain and Evident and Prayes if occasion require to be heard by her Council.

Yo^r most humble servant

JANE ALLEN.

SOME ACCOUNT OF GEORGE WASHINGTON'S LIBRARY AND MANUSCRIPT RECORDS AND THEIR DISPERSION FROM MOUNT VERNON, WITH AN EXCERPT OF THREE MONTHS FROM HIS DIARY IN 1774 WHILE ATTENDING THE FIRST CONTINENTAL CONGRESS, WITH NOTES

By J. M. TONER, M. D.

WASHINGTON'S LIBRARY AND MANUSCRIPT RECORDS.

It has been suggested to me to furnish for publication in the Annual Report of the American Historical Association, as of special historical interest, that part of George Washington's diary beginning one month prior to the meeting of the Continental Congress of 1774, continuing through the sitting of that body in Philadelphia, and closing with his return to Mount Vernon.

The suggestion is made on the theory that, as I have already obtained literal copies of all the volumes, known to be in existence, of the diary of this illustrious character and, with explanatory notes, have them practically ready for the press, I could furnish any required part as an excerpt with but little inconvenience or labor and with no detriment to the diary when published in a complete form. In the main this supposition is correct.

Washington's diary and recorded notes upon passing events and all his allusions to persons and places at any period, brief though they be, are of very high value to all who are interested in his life and the history of the Republic which he did so much to found.

His diary is measurably continuous, with but few breaks, from 1760 to the close of his eventful life. It is true some selections from it have been printed in "Washington's Writings," by Sparks, also by other editors covering particular periods; but never in a consecutive form which made any pretension to completeness. The fact may not be generally known that the diary of George Washington is written on both sides of the paper, in a series of small almanacs, having blank leaves bound in them, and in pocket memorandum books containing about one hundred pages of $3\frac{1}{2}$ by 5 inches in size. For some years the entries fill several of such books. In time these volumes became quite numerous, which, with their small size and want of uniformity in shape and binding, added to the danger of their loss from accidental displacement, as well as by deliberate abstraction.

At the general's death, all of his papers were left intact and in excellent order. Judge Marshall had the use of the archives at Mount Vernon in the preparation of his "Life of Washington," begun the year of the General's death, and published in 1804-07 in five volumes, but he makes no mention of the loss or absence of any papers. However, from the lax care and the want of a due appreciation of the great value of these papers, during the long period which elapsed before the historian Jared Sparks began a systematic examination of the letters and papers in this repository of unique records of Washington's early life as well as of his labors during the War of Independence, the adoption of the constitution of the United States and the inauguration and administration of the Government under it for eight years, the collection had suffered considerable spoliation.

It is, therefore, difficult to avoid the reflection that Gen. Washington's nephew and executor, to whom he left his library and papers, with the Mount Vernon mansion and a plantation attached of over 4,000 acres, lamentably failed to appreciate, in any magnanimous sense, his duty to his uncle's memory or the value to history of these precious literary treasures.

It is known that Judge Bushrod Washington gave some of the volumes of the General's diary to his own personal friends as memorials and keepsakes, thereby breaking the consecutiveness of the personal record and proving himself entirely oblivious of their historical worth.

It was the General's delicacy alone, I apprehend, that prevented his indicating, in detail, definite measures for the preservation of his papers; his confident expectation being that his nephew, out of common gratitude and with proper comprehension of the value of the collection, would duly devise a plan which should preserve them as a foundation toward a national repository of original records for the true history of the rise of the Republic and the donor's own life, as well as for the light they alone throw on the efforts and principles of so many other worthy actors in that heroic endeavor which founded the Republic we enjoy. The ample estate which went with this collection of papers, he doubtless supposed, would have assured its safe keeping intact, at Mount Vernon, for all time for the benefit of the people of the United States, without becoming an onerous tax upon his nephew or his heirs. He knew the aid these papers would be to historical writers, and the gratification they would give statesmen and the friends and advocates of free institutions. That such was the hope of the "Father of his country," is a natural inference, from many casual expressions in his letters and papers as to their value and the future service they would be to writers, as well as from his uniform habit and ceaseless endeavors from his youth to his last hours to preserve all papers connected with his journeys, occupations, business transactions and official position as General of the Army and President of the Republic, letters received, together with copies of his own letters sent, his papers and journals.

The gift, or devise and trust of Gen. George Washington's books and papers, is in the words following:—

Item—To my nephew, Bushrod Washington, I give and bequeath all the papers in my possession, which relate to my civil and military administration of the affairs of this country.

I leave to him also such of my private papers as are worth preserving, and at the decease of ——— wife and before, if she is not inclined to retain them, I give and bequeath my library of books and pamphlets of every kind. [See Will.]

The great extent of Washington's written notes and observations, surveys, drafts of papers, letters and studies of different kinds, is something amazing. In his library these were all systematically arranged in order for reference. His inquiring mind and his disposition to collect opinions, documents and books on agriculture, inland navigation and government, and other lines of thought in which he was interested have been but inadequately presented by his biographers.

The great attention he gave to taking and preserving vouchers for his personal expenses while in command of the Continental Army, and his carefully rendered account to Congress at the end of the war of moneys received and disbursed for that purpose, is in itself a monument to his fixed principles of exactness, industry and integrity. The evidence of this may still be seen at the Treasury Department in vouchers for per-soul expenses while in the Army, unless the recent spasm for economizing space in the Treasury building, which sent tons of records to the paper mill, may have included them among those as "unimportant and worthless papers," doomed to destruction under an act of Congress.

It is known that Washington, at an early period of the war for Independence, when Governor Dunmore was conducting a destructive warfare upon the villages on tide water and plantations along the Potomac River, where there was no military force to oppose him, and when it was apprehended that Mount Vernon might be pillaged and destroyed, ordered all his papers to be carefully packed and ready for removal to a place of safety, should the necessity arise. Washington's estimate of the importance of his papers in writing the history of the Revolution, as well as that of his own life and employment in the public service, is pretty fully stated in his letter to Dr. James Craik, March 25, 1784; and also to the Rev. John Witherspoon, March 8, 1785.

MOUNT VERNON, 25th March, 1784.

DEAR SIR : In answer to Mr. Bowie's request to you, permit me to assure that gentleman, that I shall at all times be glad to see him at this retreat—That whenever he is here, I will give him the perusal of any public papers antecedent to my appointment to the command of the American army—that he may be laying up materials for his work. And whenever Congress shall have opened their Archives to any Historian for information, that he shall have the examination of all others in my possession which are subsequent thereto; but that till this epoch, I do not think myself at liberty to unfold papers which contain all the occurrences & transactions of my late command;—first, because I conceive it to be respectful to the sovereign power to let them take the lead in this business—& next, because I have, upon this principle, refused Doct. Gordon & others who are about to write the History of the Revolution this privilege.—

I will frankly declare to you, my Dr. Doctor that any memoirs of my life, distinct & unconnected with the general history of the war, would rather hurt my feelings than tickle my pride whilst I live.—I had rather glide gently down the stream of life, leaving it to posterity to think & say what they please of me, than by any act of mine to have vanity or ostentation imputed to me—And I will furthermore confess that I was rather surprised into a consent, when Doct. Witherspoon (very unexpectedly) made the application, than considered the tendency of that consent.—It did not occur to me at that moment, from the manner in which the question was propounded—that no history of my life, without a very great deal of trouble indeed, could be written with the least degree of accuracy,—unless recourse was had to me, or to my papers for information—that it would not derive sufficient authenticity without a promulgation of this fact—& that such a promulgation would subject me to the imputation I have just mentioned—which would hurt me the more, as I do not think vanity is a trait of my character.—

It is for this reason, & candour obliges me to be explicit, that I shall stipulate against the publication of the memoirs Mr. Bowie has in contemplation to give the world, 'till I shou'd see more probability of avoiding the darts which I think would be pointed at me on such an occasion; and how far, under these circumstances, it would be worth Mr. Bowie's while to spend time which might be more usefully employed in other matters, is with him to consider; as the practicability of doing it efficiently, without having free access to the documents of this war, which must fill the most important pages of the Memoir, & which for the reasons already assigned cannot be admitted at present, also is.—If nothing happens more than I at present foresee, I shall be in Philadelphia on or before the first of May; where 'tis probable I may see Mr. Bowie & converse further with him on this subject—in the meanwhile I will thank you for communicating these Sentiments.—

I am very truly Your Affectionate friend & Serv^t,

GO. WASHINGTON.*

To Dr. JAMES CRAIK.

MOUNT VERNON, 8 March, 1785.

REVEREND SIR: From the cursory manner in w^{ch} you expressed the wish of Mr. Bowie to write the Memoirs of my life—I was not, at the moment of your application & my assent to it, struck with the consequences to which it tended:—but when I came to reflect upon the matter afterward, & had had some conversation with Mr. Bowie on the subject; I found that this must be a very futile work (if under any circumstances it could be made interesting) unless he could be furnished with the incidents of my life, either from my papers, or my recollection, and digesting the past transactions into some sort of form & order with respect to times & circumstances:—I knew also that many of the former relative to the part I had acted in the war between France & G: Britain from the year 1754, until the peace of Paris; which contained some of the most interesting occurrences of my life, were lost;—that my memory is too treacherous to be relied on to supply this defect;—and, admitting both were more perfect, that submitting such a publication to the world whilst I continue on the theatre, might be ascribed (however involuntarily I was led into it) to vain motives.—

These considerations prompted me to tell Mr. Bowie, when I saw him at Philad^a. in May last, that I could have no agency towards the publication of any memoirs respecting myself whilst living:—but as I had given my assent to you (when asked) to have them written, & as he had been the first to propose it, he was welcome if he thought his time would not be unprofitably spent, to take extracts from such documents as yet remained in my possession, & to avail himself of any other information I could give;—provided the publication should be suspended until I had quitted the stage of human action.—I then intended, as I informed him, to have devoted the present expiring winter in arranging all my papers which I had left at home, & which I found a mere mass of confusion (occasioned by frequently shifting them into trunks, & suddenly removing them from the reach of the enemy)—but however strange it may seem it is nevertheless true, that what with company; references of old matters with which I ought not to be troubled—applications for certificates, and copies of orders, in addition to the routine of letters which have multiplied greatly upon me;—I have not been able to touch a single paper, or transact any business of my own, in the way of acco^{ts}. &^a during the whole course of the winter; or in a word, since my retirement from public life.—

I have two reasons, my good sir, for making these communications to you—the first is, by way of apology for not complying with my promise in the full extent you might expect in favor of Mr. Bowie—The second is, not knowing where that Gentleman resides I am at a loss without your assistance, to give him the information respecting the disordered state of my papers, which he was told should be arranged, & a proper selection of them made for his inspection, by the Spring. Upon your kindness therefore I must rely to convey this information to him;—for tho' I shou'd be glad at all times, to see Mr. Bowie here, I should be unhappy if expectations which can not be realized (in the present moment) shou'd withdraw him from, or cause him to forego some other pursuits which may be more advantageous to him.—

My respects if you please to M^{rs}. Witherspoon.—

I have the honor to be, etc.,

GO. WASHINGTON.*

To the Rev. JOHN WITHERSPOON.

Immediately after the death of his mother, in writing to his sister, Bettie Lewis, he requested her to have "particular care taken of [our mother's] papers, the letters to her, etc., and to preserve them for him." His solicitude for the preservation of his letters and papers was exhibited in a marked manner but a few hours before his death, in the directions he gave Mr. Lear:—

Do you arrange and record all my late military letters and papers; arrange my accounts and settle my books, as you know more about them than anyone else; and let Mr. Rawlins finish recording my other letters which he has begun. (Lear's account of Washington's death, in Sparks, Vol. I, p. 557.)

The list of Gen. Washington's books at Mount Vernon, made by the appraisers after his death, and to be found in Hon. Edward Everett's "Life of Washington," and in the "Home of Washington," by Lossing, is meager and, I apprehend, very incomplete. It gives less than a thousand titles of books and pamphlets, and about 100 charts and maps. As confirmatory of this view we need only refer to the many stray volumes which may be seen in public and private libraries, and to the collection in the Boston Athenæum, designated as the "Wash.

* Copied from transcript in Washington's letter-book, Department of State.

ington Library," numbering 1,300 titles; and even this collection, it is known, represents but a part of the books and pamphlets owned by Gen. Washington at the time of his death.

Some account of the dispersion and, as far as practicable, the present resting place of the library of books and manuscripts so laboriously gathered and so carefully preserved at Mount Vernon by Gen. Washington, may have at least a melancholy interest in connection with the diary from which we are about to give an excerpt. The following information as to the Mount Vernon library and manuscripts has been derived from authentic records and other reliable sources.

The library and manuscript papers of Gen. George Washington given to his nephew, Justice Bushrod Washington, one of the executors, were kept intact at Mount Vernon until his own death in 1829. He, however, permitted the free use of them by reputable writers, and under a written contract gave the Rev. Jared Sparks leave to take the manuscripts to Boston to copy and have them near him, for consultation, while he was editing the life and writings of Washington. Many times in the discharge of the public business the heads of the Departments of the United States Government wished to consult these early records, but they were not within their reach. Except a few autograph letters, papers and memorandum books of the immense mass of manuscript at Mount Vernon given by Judge Washington, from the files to friends, as curiosities, the collection was supposed by him to be unimpaired and practically in the condition in which it came into his possession on the death of his uncle. The Judge in his will devises the literary treasures he had received in the following words:—

Thirteenth.—All the papers and letter books devised to me by my uncle, General George Washington, as well as the books in my study, other than law books, I give to my nephew George C. Washington; the books in the cases in the dining room I give to my nephew, John Augustine Washington. (See Judge Bushrod Washington's will in "Albert Welles's History of the Washington Family," p. 327.)

George Corbin Washington was a lawyer of ability, the son of William Augustine Washington (who married his cousin Jane, daughter of John Augustine Washington), and a grandson of Augustine, the father of the General. He was liberally educated at Cambridge, resided on a fine plantation in Montgomery County, Md., and was a Member of Congress for three terms. He was for many years president of the Ches-peake and Ohio Canal Company. He was twice married and left one surviving son, Lewis William Washington.

This most valuable collection of records, family papers and books thus passed into the legal possession of the Hon. George Corbin Washington; yet from the fact that the greater and more valuable part of them had gone direct to Boston, from Mount Vernon, under a contract bearing date January 17, 1827, between Justice Bushrod Washington and the Rev. Jared Sparks, and were not returned at the time of the Judge's death, nor indeed had they been when the Hon. G. C. Washington made sale of them to the United States, it is probable that a large portion of the Washington papers were, therefore, never in the latter's actual possession.

In the practical administration of the Government under the Constitution, and particularly in the adjustment of claims brought against the United States and authorized by Congress to be equitably settled, the value of these records in reaching just conclusions had often presented itself to the heads of the several Departments. The desire to possess them was not an ebullition of sentiment or patriotism; it would seem that it was almost wholly from a business standpoint, and in consideration of the use they would be to the National Government. It may not be without interest to present briefly in the following compendium some of the steps which led to the acquirement of the greater portion of these precious papers by the Government.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

December 10, 1833.

GEORGE C. WASHINGTON, Esquire:

SIR: Being desirous of rendering as complete as possible the Archives of the United States, and especially those which belong to that most interesting portion of our history, the struggle for independence, I take the liberty to address you on the subject of some official papers and records of General Washington, which are understood to be in your possession.

The value of the papers of your illustrious relative, in a public point of view, was justly esteemed by him; and, in a letter addressed to the President of Congress on the 4th of April, 1781, he informed that body, that it had been found impracticable "to register the copies of the letters, Instructions, &c., in books, by which means valuable documents, which may be of equal public utility and private satisfaction, remain in loose sheets and in the rough manner in which they were first drawn" and he suggested that writers might be employed to arrange and register them. Congress took the same view of the subject, and immediately, on the 10th of April, 1781, authorized him to employ an additional confidential secretary and as many writers as he should judge proper, to arrange and register the public letters, and other documents in the office at Head Quarters and assign them such salaries as he might see proper.

The Department of State is in possession of the correspondence between the Commander-in-Chief and the President of Congress, and a small part of that with the General Officers and the Governors of States; but, whether the other letters, instructions, &c., above referred to, were ever placed among the archives of the Government, does not appear.

It is presumed that it may be agreeable to you, as well on the grounds of public utility as from a desire to preserve in so safe and so suitable a depository, the official papers and records of your eminent kinsman, to consent, that any, which may be in your possession of that description, may be deposited among the national archives in this Department.

I will thank you to acquaint me with your views on this subject, and, if they should be favorable, to inform me upon what conditions you would be willing to enter into such an arrangement.

I am, Sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LOUIS McLANE.

To the foregoing proposition Mr. Washington responded fittingly and patriotically, giving a brief outline of the character and extent of the papers of Gen. Washington which he inherited, and expressing his willingness to part with such of them as related to the political history of the country, to the end that they might become a part of the records of the National Government.

The following is his answer in full:—

GEORGE TOWN, Janv. 3rd, 1834.

Hon. LEWIS McLANE, Secy. of State.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 10th Dec^r., expressing your desire "of rendering as complete as possible the Archives of the United States, and especially those which belong to that most interesting portion of our history, the struggle for independence"—which are to be found in the official papers and records of Gen^l. Washington, in my possession.

You suggest, "that it may be agreeable to me, as well on the grounds of public utility, as from a desire to preserve in so safe and so suitable a depository, the official papers and records of my eminent kinsman, to consent, that any which may be in my possession of that description, may be deposited among the National Archives" in the State Department, & in conclusion, you request me to acquaint you with my views on the subject, "and if they should be favorable," to inform you upon what conditions, I would be willing to enter into such an arrangement. I have given to the subject the consideration which its interest and importance merits, and now briefly present to you my views in relation to it.

The papers devised by Gen^l. Washington to my late relative, Judge Washington & by him to me, comprises an immense mass of information, intimately connected with the history of our country from the years 1752 to 1799. They embrace papers in relation to the French war, Braddock's defeat, and other interesting events, prior to the revolution. The papers immediately in connection with the revolution are of great interest and vast amount. These comprise his correspondence with Congress, the Governors of the States, the officers of the Army, both American and foreign, and in a word, everything connected with his long and arduous duties as Commander in chief. The next epoch which they include, is that, in relation to the formation of the Government and the adoption of the Constitution, and the history of his administration, comprised in 13 Vols. from 1789 to 1797 & 13 Vols: containing records and transactions between the President and Departments from 1789 to 1797 & also the journal of the President.

The original letters received by Gen^l. Washington from his illustrious cotemporaries and others, & his miscellaneous papers, probably amount to more than twenty thousand, the larger portion of which are bound, and comprise, I think, 121 vols.

In the above description, I have given you but an imperfect idea of the value and magnitude of these papers.

To part with these relics of the father of our country exacts no small sacrifice of personal feeling, but taught by the example of my venerated relative, who never permitted private views and feelings to interpose in the performance of what he conceived a public duty, I will consent to their being deposited in the Archives of the nation.

I am further induced to comply with your request, by the consideration, that these papers are distinctly National in their Character, illustrative of the events of our glorious Revolution, and of the rise and progress of all our political institutions, and therefore should be the property of the Nation. In the hands of an individual, they are also liable to casualties, which might in a moment sweep into oblivion this proud monument of the moral excellence and intellectual labors of one, whose memory is cherished by his countrymen, & whose long life was devoted to their service.

Permit me, Sir, here to add, that it would be a source of proud gratification to me, could I gratuitously present these papers to my country, but duties and considerations of a private nature, which it may not become me to particularize, forbid the indulgence of my wishes.

I am willing that the Government shall possess all the papers of a general character, or in any manner connected with the Colonial, revolutionary & political history of the country, only reserving such, as are of a private nature, or which it would be obviously improper to make public.

To fix a valuation, would be a difficult task, as the intrinsic worth of such property, can be estimated by no standard with which I am acquainted—nor have I any criterion by which to be governed, further, than the estimation which public sentiment has attached to it, together with the opinion often expressed to me by Judge Washington, who conceived that the legacy was of great pecuniary as well as moral value, as furnishing important materials for future publication (exclusive of the compilation now in progress by Mr. Sparks). The manuscripts bound, I think amount to 201 Vols., and I believe I am within bounds in saying, that if all these papers were printed they would make from fifty to one hundred vols.

I have reason to believe, that a liberal sum would be cheerfully given by citizens of one State of the Union, with the view of placing these papers in a public institution and safe depository—but it would be more grateful to my feelings that they should belong to the whole Nation than to any particular section.

Mr. Sparks, who is favorably known to the public as an able writer, is engaged in publishing a compilation from these voluminous papers, which I understand is now in the press, & is looked for with intense interest by the people. The papers are in his keeping at this time, in a fine state of arrangement and preservation, and safe from accidents by being deposited in a fire-proof vault. They are also insured to a large amount.

I cannot name a specific sum, as an equivalent, but confiding in the liberality of the Government, I am willing to enter into such an arrangement as may be mutually satisfactory, in which event, I will transfer forthwith to the Government my title to the papers (with the reservation before mentioned) to be delivered as soon as practicable, after the publication above alluded to.

In consequence of suggestions which have been made on the subject, I will here state, that I have in my possession, that portion of Genl. Washington's library, relating to the public records of the country, from the journals of the Continental Congress to the close of his administration, including State papers, etc. I believe the series to be complete, and should it be deemed important to have them added to the library, either of Congress or of the State Department, I am willing that the Government shall have them for such reasonable equivalent as may be decided on.

I have the honor to be, Very Respectfully, Y^r. Ob^t. Serv^t.,

G. C. WASHINGTON.

The letter of the Hon. Mr. Washington was so encouraging as to induce the Secretary of State to have a bill introduced into Congress for the purchase of the Washington papers. The bill was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs to inquire into the expediency of purchasing the library and official and private papers of Gen. Washington, to be deposited in the Department of State.

The State Department furnished to the Committee such information as it could procure of the extent and character of the collection, which, it was found, would add much to the completeness of the records of the Government, as was well known to the officials and clerks who were acquainted with the deficiencies and needs of the office, as well as by historians, who had examined the papers.

April 1, 1834, Mr. Archer, from the Committee of the House, made a favorable report, No. 381, from which we quote:—

From the answer of the proprietor, Mr. George C. Washington, sent to the committee, it appeared that, as well on grounds of public utility as from a desire for the safe and suitable preservation of these documents, he was willing to transfer them in property to the United States, for such equivalent as might be deemed reasonable by this Government.

From evidence annexed it appears that the papers in question comprise an immense mass of information intimately connected with the history of our country, from the year of 1752 to 1799. They embrace papers in relation to the French war, Braddock's defeat, and other interesting events prior to the Revolution.

The papers immediately in connection with the Revolution are of great interest and vast moment. These comprise the correspondence of George Washington with Congress, the Governors of the States, the Officers of the army, both American and foreign, and, in a word, everything connected with his long and arduous duties as Commander-in-chief.

The next epoch which they include is that in relation to the formation of the Government, and the adoption of the Constitution, and the history of his administration, comprised in thirteen volumes; and thirteen volumes containing records and transactions between the President and the Departments from 1789 to 1797; and also the journal of the President.

The original letters received by General Washington from his illustrious contemporaries, and the miscellaneous papers, probably amounting to more than twenty thousand, the larger portion of which are bound, and comprise one hundred and twenty-one volumes.

Such is the general description given by the proprietor, confirmed by a corresponding statement from the gentleman who has, for some time, had the custody of these papers for the purpose of consulting them, and who is better enabled than any other person to give a just account of their character and probable value.

As regards the desirableness of the acquisition on the part of the Government, the Committee can have no hesitation in expressing an affirmative opinion.

As regards the price to be affixed to the papers, the committee have apprehended difficulty, a part of the considerations affecting their value not being appreciable in money. From this they have been relieved, however, by learning the estimate put on them as objects of mercantile speculation. They have been led, from several sources of information, to believe that the proprietor would have little difficulty in obtaining the price which he has consented to receive from the public, from a preference that they should belong to the nation.

The committee would further remark that nearly the same price was paid for the library of Mr. Jefferson, merely, without his papers, which it is now proposed to give for all the autograph and other papers of General Washington, not purely of a private nature, or which it would be improper to make public, together with a portion of his library.

In pursuance of the views they have expressed, they report an amendment to the general appropriation bill, to be offered when this bill shall be taken up.

Appended to the report of the Committee is the following comprehensive description of the collection and an explicit letter on the subject from the historian Jared Sparks to the Hon. Edward Everett, as to the extent and value of the Washington papers, which we copy:—

CAMBRIDGE, March 3, 1834.

DEAR SIR: I have received your letter of the 22d ultimo, asking such information as I can furnish respecting the amount and character of the manuscript papers left by General Washington and my opinion as to the sum which Congress may reasonably pay for them.

The amount of the papers may be understood from the following summary:

1. Public and private letters, and other papers before the Revolution, embracing his official correspondence during the French war, seven folio volumes.

2. His entire correspondence, official and private, from the beginning to the end of the Revolution, including other original military papers of great value, recorded in thirty-seven volumes; also, the first draughts of the above papers on file, being the identical papers which were retained and consulted by General Washington in the Army. It thus appears that there are two copies of all his letters written during the Revolution. The recorded copy was made near the end of the war. There are also six volumes of orderly books.

3. Letters and miscellaneous papers, public and private, after the Revolution and coming down to the end of his life, thirty-six volumes. Among them are two records of his intercourse with the different Departments while he was President, and many important cabinet papers.

The above are General Washington's own letters or papers. There are besides:—

4. The original letters received by General Washington, and numerous original papers on public affairs, military, civil and miscellaneous, chronologically arranged in a continuous series, amounting to one hundred and seventeen large volumes.

5. A few miscellaneous papers on file.

Hence the whole collection consists of two hundred and three volumes, besides the copy of the Revolutionary correspondence on file. The papers are, throughout, methodically arranged, well preserved and strongly bound.

As to their value in a pecuniary sense, or the sum which Congress may reasonably pay for them, it is a question not easy to answer; but I have no objection to expressing my opinion. When I took them into my hands I would have given for them, as literary property, $20,000. The use I am making of them in selecting parts for publication will diminish the value, but still, if the purchase of them is deemed a national object, I should think $20,000 the lowest price that ought to be affixed for them.

As a historical treasure to the nation, they are altogether invaluable. I have examined all the public offices in the country containing papers relating to Revolutionary events, and I do not hesitate to say that these manuscripts comprise a mass of materials for the history of that period more authentic, rich and important than can be obtained from all the public sources combined.

It would be easy to go into detail and set forth the grounds of my opinion, but this would, perhaps, be gratuitous; I will only add that my impressions have been derived from a very close examination of the subject, and they have constantly grown stronger as I have advanced.

I forward to you a pamphlet containing two letters, which you will probably remember to have seen before, but which will revive some particulars respecting the object of your inquiry.

I am, dear sir, with sincere regards, your friend and most obedient servant,

JARED SPARKS.

HON. EDWARD EVERETT.

The following is a memorandum of the books and papers furnished by Mr. Washington to the Secretary of State, and is preserved in that office. - [Endorsement.] Papers in the office of Geo. C. Washington.

Upon a presentation of these facts by the Secretary of State to the legislative branch of the Government, an act of Congress was passed and approved June 30, 1834, appropriating $25,000 "to enable the Secretary to purchase the manuscript papers and a portion of the printed books of Gen. George Washington, the said papers and books to be deposited and preserved in the Department of State under the regulations the Secretary shall prescribe."

Before the act became a law, an understanding had been reached between the Hon. George C. Washington and the then Secretary of State, John Forsythe, as to the amount of money to be paid for the manuscript papers and books of Gen. Washington, and the manner of their delivery to the Government.

The following letter, from Mr. Sparks to the Hon. G. C. Washington, concerning the classification of the public and private manuscript books and diary of Gen. Washington, is especially interesting:

CAMBRIDGE, Feb'y 23, 1835.

DEAR SIR: When I took the papers from Mount Vernon, some of the numbers of General Washington's diary, or journal were missing. Judge Washington told me afterwards, that he had found them, and would send them to me; but they never came. They are small, thin, manuscript books. If you find them among the private papers left with you, I shall be much obliged if you will send them to me, as they are essential in writing the life of Genl. Washington. They will go back to you among the private papers. Will you have the goodness to put them into the hands of Mr. Everett, who will bring them safely? I hope you will have the goodness to embrace this opportunity, as another so good a one may not soon occur.

When I send the papers back, do you wish me to direct them all to the Department of State, or shall I put the private papers up separately and direct them to you? I think you told me that you had reserved the private papers, and I should like your instructions.

Respectfully & truly yours,

JARED SPARKS.

HON. GEO. C. WASHINGTON,
Georgetown, D. C.

As might have been expected, the question of selection and determination as to what constituted private, and what public papers, arose after their delivery and examination in the Department of State. Some deficiencies were discovered, though the delivery seems to have corresponded with the schedule. When these facts were reported by the examiners, it led to a further correspondence between the Department of State and the Hon. G. C. Washington, with the result of adding a very few papers to the original deposit, but leaving a regret with the Department that the whole of the Washington papers of every character had not been provided for in the purchase. The evident tenor of the will of the general, as well as that of his nephew, Justice Bushrod Washington, was to preserve intact and convey all the papers collected and preserved at Mount Vernon as an entirety. Under these two wills, the collection of manuscripts was presumed to have reached Hon. George Corbin Washington intact, and that he made sale of them to the Government with the single reservation already stated. Mr. Washington defended his classification of the reserved papers and quoted in justification the limiting clause in his letter to the Secretary of January 3, 1834.

To bind the parties, a contract was entered into between John Forsyth, Secretary of State, and the Hon. George C. Washington, on August 22, 1834, for the sale by the latter of all the Washington papers described in the clause of his letter of January 3, 1834. The part of the contract describing these papers and their extent is in the following language:—

The said George C. Washington agrees to sell and deliver to the said Secretary of State, for the use of the United States, all the papers of the late General George Washington of which he, the said George C. Washington, is proprietor, including those mentioned in the lists of inventories furnished from time to time to the Department of State as being in his own possession, and those which are in the possession of any other person or persons, more especially those which are in the hands of the Reverend Jared Sparks; together with the printed books referred to in a letter addressed by the said George C. Washington to the Secretary of State on the third day of January eighteen hundred and thirty-four: The whole of the said papers and books to be delivered forthwith at the Department of State at the expense of the said George C. Washington except those in the possession of the said Jared Sparks, which shall be delivered without delay to the order of the Secretary of State, who agrees to permit them to remain in the city of Boston or in the neighborhood thereof until the close of the next session of Congress. * * *

Hon. JOHN FORSYTH, Secy. of State.

SIR: I have completed the examination and arrangement of the loose files of the Washington papers in the Department, and have delivered to Mr. Blake thirty-seven volumes, to be bound as you directed.

The papers have been classed and arranged so as to conform as nearly as possible to the various subjects they embrace, keeping each class distinct and generally in chronological order. They consist of—

1. Arrangements of officers, &c., by States	8 volumes.
2. Resignations of officers, by States	7 “
3. Oaths of allegiance	2 “
4. Regimental returns	3 “
5. Brigade returns, &c.	1 “
6. Reports of guards	1 “
7. Inspection returns	1 “
8. Q. M. generals returns	1 “

9. Clothing returns	1 volume.
10. Provision returns	4 "
11. Returns of military stores.....	4 "
12. Pay and hospital returns.....	1 "
13. Special returns, &c., on various subjects.....	3 "

There are, besides, a number of letters to Gen. Washington, from the Presidents of Congress, and various public officers, that probably belong to the bound volumes in the possession of Mr. Sparks; these have been laid aside to be put in their proper places, when the books are delivered to the Department.

There are, also, several bundles of papers that relate to the present Government: they have not been put up with those of the Revolution, but, if you should so decide, can easily be added to them.

I have the honour to be, very respectfully, &c.

PETER FORCE.

WASHINGTON, September 23, 1834.

As the memory of Jared Sparks must forever be associated with his labors on the writings of Washington, the following letter from him to the Hon. George C. Washington, must prove of interest. It refers to the unfortunate permission granted by Justice Bushrod Washington to the Rev. William Buel Sprague, to take original letters of Washington's from the files at Mount Vernon, provided he would leave copies of them in their stead. In 1816, Mr. Sprague was a private tutor in the family of Maj. Lawrence Lewis, who had married Nellie Custis, and resided at Wood Lawn, an estate given him by Gen. Washington. The number of letters so taken is stated to have been 1,500. (See Winsor's Narrative and Critical History of America, Vol. viii, p. 417.)

CAMBRIDGE, September 20, 1836.

DEAR SIR: Some time after the Washington papers came into my hands, the Revd. Dr. Sprague, of Albany, obtained permission to select certain autographs, on condition that he should leave a fair copy of each paper he took. These copies are bound in the volumes according to their dates.

I mention this circumstance that in case any remarks should be made about the copies, it need not be thought that I have taken any improper liberties with the papers. The autographs were, of course, taken by Dr. Sprague before the papers were purchased by Congress; nor is it known to me that any were taken without leaving copies. The permission was granted to Dr. Sprague by Judge Washington.

I am, sir, respectfully and truly yours.

JARED SPARKS.

Col. WASHINGTON.

The Department of State expected that by this purchase the Government would come into possession of all of General Washington's papers with the exception of those of a purely personal and private character. This reservation, up to the delivery and examination of the papers, had seemed to the officials to be of little consequence. The letter of the historian, Jared Sparks, to Mr. Washington of February 23, 1835, already given on the subject of the diary makes it evident that he too looked upon these volumes of the diary as coming within the class of private papers, and fully justifying the classification of reserved papers made by Mr. Washington.

GEORGE TOWN, Dec. 24th, 1838.

Hon. JOHN FORSYTH:

SIR: I owe an apology for not sooner answering your letter, in relation to the papers purchased of me by the Government. Absence from the District during part of the time and a great pressure of engagements and duties when in it, have operated to prevent me from sooner replying. I have been desirous strictly to comply with the understanding between the Secretary of State, Congress and myself & with the conditions, on which I consented, that the papers of Genl. Washington should be deposited in the archives of the Nation.

In compliance, I have delivered all the papers which were in the hands of Judge Washington at his death, or which had been placed by him in charge of Mr. Sparks, with the exception of some papers of a private character, which were expressly reserved. Some autographs were taken by permission of Judge Washington & copies substituted, as you will perceive by the enclosed copy of a letter to me from Mr. Sparks. This occurred before I had any control of the papers, but as I understand, they were of but little importance, their value consisting in being in the hand-writing of Genl. Washington.

I beg leave to refer you to the correspondence between Mr. McLane and myself on file in the State Department. On the 10th of Decr, 1833, he addressed to me a letter, desiring to be informed if I would consent to dispose of Genl. Washington's papers to the Government and wishing to know my terms. I replied on the 3rd of Jan^y following and invite your attention to an extract from that letter—"I am willing that the Government shall possess all the papers of a general character or in any manner connected with the Colonial, revolutionary and political history of the Country, only reserving such as are of a private nature, or which it would be obviously improper to make public." And again—"I cannot name a specific sum, as an equivalent, but, confiding in the liberality of the Government, I am willing to enter into such arrangement as may be mutually satisfactory; in which event, I will transfer forthwith to the Government my title to the papers, with the reservation before mentioned; to be delivered as soon as practicable after the publication above alluded to (Sparks's).

This correspondence was referred to the Committee of Foreign Relations of the House of Reps., which reported the bill as passed by Congress without requiring any modification of my terms.

The whole amount of papers retained by me under the reservation referred to, are contained in a small drawer, and are strictly private, being principally letters to members of the family, or to persons on business ; and I find by the endorsement, that even a majority of them are recorded in the letter books, handed over to the Department & those which are bound do not relate to his public life.

I will now notice the papers stated to be missing, in the order presented by the memorandum, accompanying your letter.

No. 1. Vol. III, Orderly Book. This volume is noticed in Mr. Sparks's rec^t. to Judge Washington as missing & it is supposed never came into his possession.

No. 2. Two vols. lettered "Miscellaneous" being private papers, & having no connexion with his public life.

No. 3. Diary of Washington are records of daily and private transactions, kept in almanacks, of the same character is the diary of a journey over the Mountains in 1770.

No. 4. Two books of invoices & letters on business with his agents in London, prior to the Revolution.

No. 5. I am informed by Mr. Weaver and Col. Force, that most of the papers under this item of your memorandum, stated to be missing, have been found and are in the Department. If any of a public character are deficient they must have been lost before they came into the possession of Judge Washington or during his life time, as all such papers found by me at Mount Vernon, or returned by Mr. Sparks have been delivered by me to the Government.

No. 6. I have no knowledge of any original letters or other papers having been taken from the bound Volumes, other than as accounted for by Mr. Sparks in his letter to me on the subject, a copy of which is enclosed, with the exception of the correspondence between Gen^l. Washington and John Nicholas, in relation to an anonymous letter addressed to the former over the signature of John Langhorne. As this correspondence deeply implicates the conduct of a distinguished individual of that day in the transaction, I deem it advisable, to withhold it from the public, as no possible good could result from its exhibition. By reference to my letter to Mr. McLane of the 3d Jan^y., 1834, you will observe, that I reserved the right of retaining such papers, as "it would be obviously improper to make public." The correspondence between Gen^l. Washington and Mr. Nicholas, I considered as of that character, nor was I then aware that Mr. Sparks had published any portion of it—I find, however, that he has not published the entire correspondence, some of the letters suppressed, being of the parcel retained by me. I still entertain doubts as to the propriety of placing them in the Department, but on the fullest reflection have concluded, to submit them to your inspection, to be retained or returned to me as you may deem most proper. They now accompany this communication.

Mr. Sparks, it is true, collated largely from the private as well as public papers of Gen^l. Washington & this he had a perfect right to do, under his contract with Judge Washington, but I do not conceive that his giving publicity to them can in any manner affect my right in the few private papers retained by me, which it would not have become me to part with for any pecuniary consideration, & were therefore expressly reserved.

The amount paid by the Government for the immense mass of papers deposited in the State Department, was far short of their value, & the purchase money has already been more than reimbursed, by the evidences these papers have afforded, by which many fraudulent claims for large amounts on the Government, have been defeated. I have the Copy of a letter from Mr. Dickens to Mr. Archer of the H. of R^s., dated 4th June, 1834, stating that even at that day & before access was had to the papers in Mr. Sparks's hands, the evidence afforded by the Washington papers in my possession had, in one instance, saved to the Government the sum of $9,618, and in another case a much larger amount.

I am, very respectfully, Your Ob^t. Serv^t.,

G^e. WASHINGTON.

As time elapsed, a more accurate knowledge of the deficiencies of the Government Records and the importance of the papers reserved by Mr. George C. Washington, in the sale of Gen. George Washington's papers to the United States in 1834, led the Department of State in 1849 to make proposals to buy the remaining papers, with the approval of Mr. Washington. A clause was, therefore, at the instance of the Secretary of State, inserted in the general appropriation bill, which was approved March 3, 1849, as follows:—

And be it further enacted, That the sum of twenty thousand dollars be, and the same is, hereby appropriated, to be paid out of any monies in the Treasury, not otherwise appropriated, to enable the Secretary of State to purchase the remaining manuscript, books and papers of General George Washington, the said books and papers to be deposited and preserved in the Department of State.

The following is the schedule of the papers, and a certificate that they were delivered to the Department, and that they agreed with the contract, and also an extract from the article of agreement, on the part of Mr. George C. Washington, to sell and convey the papers indicated to the Government.

Schedule of the papers of General Washington in the possession of Geo. C. Washington.

1st vol. Miscellaneous—containing transcripts in his handwriting at from 10 to 13 years of age, of various legal instruments and forms, 20 pages. Rules of good behaviour at same age, 20 pages. His cyphering book at 13 years old, 178 pages.

List of polls at various elections when he was a candidate for the house of Burgesses of Virginia, 130 pages.

Also act. of expenses, crops made, correspondence, list of his lands, affairs of Truro parish, being a member and vestryman of that church for many years.

2d vol. Miscellaneous—containing notes and observations by General Washington, together with a large and curious collection of matter relating to various subjects. This vol. contains 520 pages.

3d vol. Correspondence, invoices, and in his handwriting, from Oct., 1754, to Sept., 1766, 376 pages.

4th vol. Correspondence, invoices, &c., &c., principally in his handwriting, from 1766 to 1775, 257 pages.

5th vol. Ledger of General Washington, with index embracing 22 years, from 1750 to 1772, 378 pages.

Diary of General Washington, in 14 books, commencing with the year 1760 and closing in June 19, 1775.

The diary for several years is headed, "When, how, and with whom my time is spent." The first diary previous to the revolution closes the 19th June, 1775, when he took command of the Revolutionary army. Two previous to this date are missing for the years 1762-67.

The diary recommences after the war on the 1st of Jan., 1785, and of these there are 12 books and complete to 1787. If these diaries were regularly continued after 1788 they did not come into the possession of G. C. Washington, who, in addition to the above, has the diary commencing 10th Feb., 1799, and closing the 13th Dec. of the same year. This diary is endorsed by the late Judge Washington as follows: "This paper probably contains the last words that General Washington committed to writing—on the night of the 13th (Dec., 1799) he was attacked by the disease of which he died." 2 books of field notes and surveys made by himself, between the ages of 17 and 19, for various persons. Books of his expenses while at convention for forming the Constitution in 1787. 1 book, journal of his tour over the mountains in 1747, youthful letters, memorandums, &c. Journal of General Washington to the South in 1791. Cash memorandum books, 8 manuscripts, in his hand, of extracts and observations from works on agriculture, &c. 1 book of precedents, adapted to the laws and constitution of Virginia, with several legal forms in his handwriting when a youth. 2 journals in 1781. 1 journal of a journey over the mountains in 1784. 1 book of experiments and observations. 1 journal of his voyage to Barbadoes in 1751 (a fragment). Diplomas and Honorary distinctions conferred on him by American and foreign Literary Institutions and Societies.

An interesting letter book in 1755, relating to Braddock's campaign, &c.

Autograph letters from General Washington on war subjects.

Autograph letters to General Washington.

This schedule is endorsed by Lund Washington, jun., after an examination of the papers and books, and comparing them with the list and finding them correct and agreeing, March 13th, 1849.

Now be it known that I George C. Washington, for and in consideration of the premises, and the said same twenty thousand Dollars to me in hand paid by the United States, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, have bargained, sold and delivered, and do bargain, sell and deliver to the United States of America, all the said manuscript books and papers of the said General George Washington of which I am in my own right, solely possessed, together with all right, copyright, title, and interest to and in the same. To have and to hold all the said remaining manuscripts, books and papers to the said United States and to their own use and behalf forever. In witness whereof, I have hereunto affixed my hand and seal this 13th day of March, 1849.

G. C. WASHINGTON.

In presence of

LUND WASHINGTON, JR.

WM. C. ZANTZINGER.

In addition to the books and papers which were inherited by the Hon. G. C. Washington from his uncle, Justice Bushrod Washington, it will be observed that there existed a considerable number of books at Mount Vernon, which the last named left by the thirteenth item in his will to his nephew, John Augustine Washington, to whom he also left the Mount Vernon mansion and plantation, in the words following:—"The books in the cases in the dining-room, I give to my nephew John A. Washington." (See will of Bushrod Washington.)

This collection, or rather a part of it, was sold in 1849. W. F. Poole, now the librarian of the Newberry Library in Chicago, in referring, in 1872, to this purchase in a paper on "Anti-slavery opinion before the year 1800," states it "had about twelve hundred titles; of which, four hundred and fifty are bound volumes and seven hundred and fifty are pamphlets and unbound serials." This collection was sold to Mr. Henry Stevens, of London, who at one time designed placing them in the British Museum. They were brought to New York for shipment and a more careful packing than they had received at Mount Vernon. While in New York they attracted the attention of some public-spirited gentlemen of Boston, who bought the collection and presented them to the "Boston Athenæum" where they are kept intact in cases designated "The Library of George Washington." Mr. Poole further says that Mr. Livermore, as discretionary executor of the estate of Thomas Dowse, the "literary leather-dresser," of Cambridge, added to the gift $1,000 for the purpose of printing a descriptive catalogue of the collection, which we infer has not yet been done, for Mr. C. A. Cutter, the librarian of the Athenæum, wrote me in January, 1893: "This library has never published any separate catalogue of the Washington collection."

A sale of indubitable Washington manuscript and other relics, descending through heirs by will was made to the State of New York. These have the following history and line of regular devise.

The Hon. George C. Washington, already referred to, in making his own will left all his real estate and personal property to his wife, saving and excepting his papers which he left to his son and only living child, Lewis William Washington, in the following words:—

Item—I give to my son Lewis W. Washington all my papers, other than those relating to my private business, which I desire my said wife to retain. I also give to my son, Lewis W. Washington the sword of Gen'l George Washington, devised to me by my father, and also the sword and pistol (one [of] them being lost) of the said Gen'l Washington, devised to me by my uncle, Justice Bushrod Washington. Item—I give to my son Lewis my law books, public documents, and such other portion of my library as my wife may not wish to retain. Item—To my grandson James (Barroll) I give my watch and the gold chain and seal which belonged to and were used by General George Washington. (See will of G. C. Washington on record at Rockville, Montgomery County, Maryland.)

Col. Lewis William Washington, who inherited these private papers from his father, George C. Washington, resided on a beautiful plantation, "Belle Air," at Halltown, near Harper's Ferry, Jefferson County, W. Va. He was born in 1812, was married twice, and died October 1, 1871. By his first wife, he had one son and two daughters; and by the last, one surviving child, a son.

Negotiations for the sale to the State of New York of some papers and memorial relics of Gen. George Washington which came to Col. Lewis William Washington from his father George Corbin, who inherited them from Justice Bushrod Washington as already detailed were begun with the officials of the State of New York and an appropriation for their purchase passed by the legislature of that State April 20, 1871, in an act called the "supply bill" in the following terms:—

To Mrs. Lewis W. Washington, of Halltown, West Virginia, the sum of twenty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purchase of certain relics of General Washington, offered by her to the State, to be paid only upon the certificate of Martin Grover and the Chancellor of the University and J. Carson Brevoort, that said relics are in their opinion genuine, and that it is desirable in their judgment that they should be placed in the museum of the State Library.

The articles are numbered and listed as follows, in the Annual report of the New York State Library for the year 1873:

1. First draft of the Farewell address, May, 1796.
2. Opinions of the surviving Generals of the Revolution, 1791.
3. Tabulated statement of household expenses, 1789.
4. Dress sword of Washington.
5. Pistol, a present from Gen. Lafayette.
6. Gold watch-chain and two seals.
7. Box of surveying instruments.

8. Case of pocket protracting instruments.
9. Compass made by D. Rittenhouse, Philadelphia.
10. Tripod, called in the original list, Jacob's staff.
11. Measuring chain—small.
12. Measuring chain—large.
13. Six marking pins (surveyor's).
14. Volume of costumes of British army, 1742.

The last notable sale of books, which once had formed a part of the library of Gen. Washington at Mount Vernon, and which passed by the wills of the General and also of Justice Washington to John Augustine, was a considerable lot, which had not been offered or sold to Mr. Henry Stevens in 1849.

The war between the States left most of the previously well-to-do Southern people in very straitened pecuniary circumstances, which caused them to part with many highly-prized family relics. Such was the case with the heirs of the second John Augustine Washington, who still owned some of the books belonging to the original Mount Vernon collection, and which had been reserved from all former sales. Those were now collected together and sent to Philadelphia during the Centennial Exposition of 1876, and were there catalogued and sold as a part of Gen. Washington's library. Many of the books had the General's autograph in them. While the books attracted much attention, they brought lower prices than the same books would command at the present day.

While it is true that there have been other sales than those here referred to, at which genuine literary remains and other memorials of Gen. Washington have been disposed of, yet few other considerable lots, so accurately identified by unbroken successions of devises, are known to the writer.

In this hasty review of Washington's literary remains and estimate of its character and extent, it is intended to comprehend not only his letters, private and official, with their drafts, but his Diary and also memorandum notes and observations and accounts of every description, whether written by his own hand or by a secretary at his direction. Every scrap of a written record of this great man of destiny has its value to the student of history and is deserving of preservation.

The Dinwiddie papers, which cover a very important period in the colonial history of Virginia, are rich in early autographic letters. These were bought in London, in 1881, from Henry Stevens, by our most noted philanthropist of Washington city, William W. Corcoran, and presented to the Virginia Historical Society. To this valuable gift he added a fund, which enabled its accomplished secretary, R. A. Brock, to edit and publish these important historical papers in two handsome volumes. The Virginia Historical Register, begun in 1848, gave to the public many original Washington letters addressed to the executive and officers of the State of Virginia, and also letters addressed to Col. George Baylor and others. The Southern Literary Messenger, also, from time to time, published letters of Gen. Washington. These and other manuscripts possessed by that society, and the valued autographs of Washington's early correspondence with the Provincial Government stored in the State library and the Land office at Richmond, and among county surveyor's records, with the numerous collections, large and small, owned by citizens in different parts of the State, readily place Virginia at the head of all the States in the possession of Washington's literary remains. Of course, we always except the collections owned by the United States Government as the largest and most complete. Within the last couple of years there has appeared in the hands of autograph-dealers of New York several hundred certified returns of surveys with plats made along about 1750, 1751, and 1752 in the handwriting of George Washington. These had doubtless been surreptitiously taken from the records of the counties in the Valley of Virginia, to which they had been returned in accordance with the law made and provided for the government of licensed surveyors. It is thus evident Virginia is still being despoiled of her treasures.

The Massachusetts Historical Society, as early as 1794, came into possession by gift from the heirs of Governor Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut, of a very extensive and valuable collection of historical and official papers made by that statesman during his long and active public life. The papers were in good order, and cover the whole period of the War of Independence, of which he was a prominent and efficient promoter. Among these papers are many autograph letters of Gen. Washington, who had frequent occasion to write to the executive of Connecticut. These letters of the Commander-in-Chief to Governor Trumbull have been published by the Massachusetts Historical Society and form Volume II of the Trumbull papers and Volume X of the Fifth Series of that society's collection.

The Long Island Historical Society is the fortunate owner of many autograph letters and papers of Gen. Washington. They were mainly bought by the Hon. Edward Everett from the family or descendants of William Pearce, to whom these letters were addressed. He had been for some years Washington's farm manager at Mount Vernon. Upon the death of Mr. Everett, they were sold to the late James Carson Brevoort, who presented them to the Long Island Historical Society. These papers have been carefully edited by Moncure D. Conway, with valuable biographical and historical notes, and form a good-sized volume under the title of "George Washington and Mount Vernon;" being Volume IV of that society's publications.

The New Hampshire Historical Society has published a goodly number of letters written by Gen. Washington to Meshech Weare, governor of New Hampshire, and to other officials during the war of the Revolution.

I have no means of knowing what other autograph material of the General there may be in the office of the secretary of state or the state library of New Hampshire.

Sparks, the biographer of Washington, in 1826 found in the office of the secretary of state of New Hampshire fifty-eight letters of Gen. Washington. Where are they now?

It is known as a fact that two people who had been the recipients of many autograph letters from Gen. Washington, written in the fullest freedom which confidence and affection had established, were destroyed by the persons to whom they were addressed or by their explicit direction.

I refer to the letters Gen. Washington wrote to his wife, and those he wrote to his manager and kinsman, Lund Washington. However much we may blame or regret this destruction, both supposed they were doing a meritorious service and honoring the memory of Washington. The fact that Mrs. Washington destroyed the letters she had received from the General, as well as hers to him, rests upon the testimony of her granddaughter, Mrs. Peter, who was cognizant of the fact.

The destruction of the letters written to Lund Washington by the General rests upon the statement of Mr. Foot, the nephew and adopted son of Lund Washington, who informed Mr. Sparks that near the close of life Lund Washington instructed his wife to destroy all the letters he had received from the General. This instruction was carried out as far as it was in her power.

The unwarranted surmise that Tobias Lear, long the highly esteemed private secretary of Gen. Washington, and who was in charge of the General's papers at the time of his death, had abstracted or permitted the removal of autograph letters of Washington, and papers which, it is intimated, might have compromised, in some manner, Thomas Jefferson is, I believe, without a veritable sponser or any trustworthy testimony upon which to rest.

A knowledge of the safe preservation and present lodging-place of the original autographs of the many thousands of letters and documents written by George Washington, but more especially those which have not been printed, or only printed in part, interests every American and historical student throughout the world. The want of a calendar and a repository of these scattered treasures, or veritable copies of them in print or in manuscript where they might be consulted, confronts every inquirer who attempts to study the life of Gen. Washington and the history of the American Revolution. Thus far, the most available aid in this direction to the student has been Sparks's collection of the Writings of Washington.

As a slight amplification of the field, beyond this valuable publication, I venture brief references to a few of the many personal memoirs which contain letters of Washington not readily found elsewhere.

The belief is quite general that George Washington preserved complete drafts of all his public letters. I am not aware that he ever made or authorized such a statement; yet his collection proves to be so rich in these drafts as to give some credit to this notion. However, I very much doubt whether an examination and comparison would sustain the correctness of this belief. Many of these drafts are in autograph, others seemingly made from dictation are in the handwriting of clerks; the latter are frequently interlined and corrected in Washington's own handwriting. Madison's collection of autograph letters of Washington shows over twenty of which no copies are preserved in the General's files.

The earliest letter-press copies of Washington's letters that I have seen are of 1793. The historian, who desires to secure copies of all of Washington's letters can not, I apprehend, afford to rest his hopes on the theory that duplicates have been preserved, but should endeavor to obtain copies from originals (that is, the letter sent) wherever and whenever they come to his notice; besides, the letter sent has often been found amplified beyond the draft and transcript. No editor of Washington's writings has ever pretended to do more than publish selections from his writings; it is doubtless true that no important letters of his have been withheld, and it is universally conceded that those published show his preëminence among the great men of the world. Students in history welcome any publication that gives original letters and documents complete and with literal accuracy.

Among the preserved early memoirs published was that of Maj. Gen. William Heath in 1798. He introduced a number of the letters which he had received from Gen. Washington on military matters.

A memoir of the life of Richard Henry Lee, by his grandson, R. H. Lee, published in 1825, contains much of the correspondence between Gen. Washington and this great patriot of the Revolution. These letters were written during the progress of the war and refer only to military and public affairs. Doubtless others have been preserved by the heirs of this family, of a social and business character, written during Washington's youth and early manhood, to Mr. Lee, who was his esteemed friend from childhood.

The life and correspondence of Joseph Reed, statesman and soldier, of Philadelphia, also brought many letters of Gen. Washington to the notice of the public; giving them with literal accuracy.

The Marquis de Chastellux, who was connected with the French army in America during the Revolution, in a volume of his travels in North America, published in Paris in 1786, translated into English and issued in London in 1787, a revised edition of which, with notes, etc., was published in 1828, gives quite a number of letters which this worthy Frenchman had received from Gen. Washington. They are mainly upon military affairs, entirely characteristic of the general and full of interest.

The memoirs of Gen. Lafayette, in six volumes, published in Paris in 1837, contain many letters from Gen. Washington, as also from other political and military characters in the United States. He had kept a diary or journal of the principal events in which he took part in America, so that his account of affairs has the character and views of a personal actor. It is probable that he had in his possession many other letters from the Commander-in-Chief not introduced into his memoirs.

The papers of Gen. Rochambeau, now in the Library of Congress, have many autograph letters of Gen. Washington, and copies of many others in French, the originals having been given to friends and autograph collectors, before they came into the possession of the Government.

The careful studies which have been given to the voluminous writings and lives of John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Alexander Hamilton, Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison, each of whom were influential actors in the Revolution and in the founding of the American Republic, add much to our historical treasures, but the methods of the editors did not afford opportunities to introduce many of the letters of Gen. Washington.

A collection of Washington's letters, written between 1781 and 1783, to Brig. Gen. William Irvine, who was at that time intrusted with the defenses of the northwestern frontier, has been carefully edited and handsomely printed at Madison, Wis., by C. W. Butterfield. The original Irvine papers from which the volume was prepared are now in the possession of the Pennsylvania Historical Society.

The lives and public services of a number of patriots and compatriots with Washington in the armies of the Revolution, such as Philip Schuyler, Arthur St. Clair, Henry Knox, Joseph Jones, Henry Lee, Edmund Randolph and many other contemporaries with whom the General was on terms of intimacy, and between whom many official and friendly letters passed, have been given to the public in their published lives and memoirs.

Marshall's Life of Washington presents a clear exposition of his political views, and gives an authentic documentary history of the various causes and acts which led to the American Revolution and the independence of the colonies, and will always hold high rank in the literature of the subject, but the close argumentative methods pursued by the writer give him little scope for introducing original letters from Washington.

The greatest storehouse of Washington letters and recorded papers, for the majority of students, is the collection given to the public by that ripe scholar and able historian,

Jared Sparks. No fault can be found with his work, except as to the method adopted, which was the fashion of his time and still prevails, to select, omit and dress up the manuscript to suit the taste and opinions of the editor. As regards a comprehensive knowledge of the subject-matter under discussion, a thorough acquaintance with the resources of the country and the character, ability and services of Washington and his associates, no writer has equaled, much less excelled, Sparks; nor are his labors likely soon to be superseded or displaced with historical students. The writings of Washington now being edited by Worthington C. Ford give some desirable letters not to be found in Sparks, while he omits others of value given by that editor. Some of the lives, which have been published of George Washington, reflect hasty studies, contracted views and personal estimates of the writers, rather than the presentation of a comprehensive and impartial picture of Washington as he was, his opinions and his labors. It is, therefore, desirable and all-important that writers have access to original documents or faithful transcripts, so that all his recorded acts and utterances may be assembled before students without curtailment, augmentation, or distortion of any kind, before they can produce a true history of the life, and properly estimate the influence of George Washington upon his country and constitutional government.

The liberty which writers have taken with the Washington manuscripts in giving them to the press, makes it of special interest to historians to know where the originals are, and whether they exist in the chirography of a clerk or secretary, and are signed, or whether they are entirely in the General's handwriting; and whether those published are literal transcripts of an original autograph.

With no complete information in detail, I however venture the opinion that the extent of the autograph material possessed by the Massachusetts Historical Society in Boston and the various public institutions of Massachusetts makes that State the second most extensive owner of these autograph treasures.

Two volumes selected by John Cary, LL. D., from the official letters of George Washington written to the American Congress while he was in command of the Continental forces, were published in London in 1795 without notes or an editor's name. The same work was printed the following year in Boston, and also in New York. The publishers contemplated issuing a third volume, but this was not consummated. It was not deemed prudent by the Government to permit all of the General's letters on military affairs and papers on the policy of the United States to be published at that time, so that this selection, though an important contribution toward a history of the Revolution, represents but a small part of Washington's letters and suggestions to the Continental Congress.

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania largely represents the State in the possession of the Washington autograph material in Pennsylvania. This institution has been made rich by the gifts, from time to time, of extensive and choice private collections of literary remains. I am informed the collection now under their control exceeds four hundred autograph letters. The State capital not being situated in a literary or publishing center, historical documents naturally gravitated to the historical society in Philadelphia. However, many other institutions and libraries, public and private, in that city possess valuable collections. In 1826, when Jared Sparks began looking up and copying Washington's papers, he found many autograph letters of the General in the office of the governor of the State. I infer from an interview with the librarian that these letters are no longer on file there. One of the letters Sparks describes as comprising ten folio pages in autograph.

The State of Connecticut ought to possess, and probably has in her State archives and public institutions, a large collection of Washington's letters, for there were in that Commonwealth many influential public characters who had occasion to write to the commander-in-chief, and there was no executive of any State with whom the General of the Continental army corresponded more frequently during the Revolution than with Governor Trumbull.

In 1848 the legislature of New Jersey caused to be published a volume of selections from the original manuscripts and letters in the State library or office of the secretary of State. This publication is entitled "Selections from the correspondence of the Executive of New Jersey from 1776 to 1786." The volume contains letters from many eminent political and military characters not easily found elsewhere. Of the twenty-six letters of Washington given, but six appear in Sparks.

The New York Historical Society and the State Library have each fine collections of original letters of Gen. Washington. These institutions have become the custodians of a number of private collections of historical students and of family papers, many of them containing autograph material of Gen. Washington, some of which have been printed in the New York Historical Society's publications.

Without attempting to enumerate all the books and magazines in which letters of Washington have been published, still the Magazine of American History is conspicuous from the great number to be found in it. The interested inquirer should also consult Niles's Register, Harper's Magazine, The Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, Dawson's Historical Magazine and other publications of this character.

The States of Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Georgia, Ohio, Wisconsin and North and South Carolina have each the foundation on which to form a collection of Washington letters. The Lenox Library in New York city has been for years a leading buyer of choice autograph Washington letters and documents.

There are many gentlemen of wealth and culture in the various sections of the Union who possess choice libraries and rich collections of this highly prized Washington autographic material. The following are especially worthy of mention, as best known to the writer, Messrs. William S. Baker, George W. Childs, Ferdinand J. Dreer, Simon Gratz and Charles Roberts, of Philadelphia; Dr. Emmet and Mr. Wm. A. Havemyer, of New York; and Mr. Gunther, of Chicago. But there are doubtless many others.

The late Joseph W. Drexel, of New York, a quiet collector of rare autographs, had, at the time of his death, a complete set of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and also of the signers of the Constitution of the United States. He had besides in his collection over thirty autograph letters of Washington, and a plan of Mount Vernon drawn by Washington's own hand.

A very valuable collection of the autograph letters owned by the estate of the late J. C. McGuire, of Washington, D. C., was sold in December, 1892, at the salesrooms of Birch's Sons, auctioneers, in Philadelphia. The collection was extensively advertised and admirably catalogued, and attracted great attention among autograph collectors, historical writers and librarians.

From the many letters by Gen. Washington, it is (and for a long time to come will be) possible to buy autograph letters, as they emerge from hiding places among old family papers, from which they have never yet been separated. From this source the autograph speculator and auctioneer for years may be able to make more or less notable collections and catalogue sales.

Viewing Gen. Washington's autographic and literary remains in a broad, comprehensive way, and knowing that they are of inestimable value to a thorough study of his life and the history of American independence, I include every letter, document and paper written by him as coming under this designation. It is presumed that autograph letters of Gen. Washington were more carefully preserved by those who received them, and more prized by their heirs and descendants than the letters of any other conspicuous character in history. To the end, therefore, of founding a central and national depository of Washington's writings, which aims to assemble and to preserve literal copies of everything he ever wrote, to be open and accessible to all students, the writer solicits from the owners of such the favor of accurate copies of any original paper written by Gen. Washington, to be deposited in the "Toner collection" in the Library of Congress. The following are the names of some families and public characters with whom Washington corresponded, and among whose descendants it is probable that there may be lodged many important autograph letters. There are doubtless many other families, not thought of by the writer, whose descendants may have Washington papers. Many persons, as a security against accidents, have already deposited their Washington letters in State or public libraries. John Adams, John Armstrong, Theodoric Bland, Daniel Brodhead, John Cadwalader, Benedict Calvert, Edward Carrington, Charles and Daniel Carroll, Landon Carter, Archibald and Robert Cary, George Clinton, Nicholas Cooke, Dr. James Craik, William Crawford, Bartholomew Dandridge, John Dickinson, Count D'Estaing, William, George W., and Bryan Fairfax, Benjamin Franklin, Joshua Fry, Horatio Gates, William Gordon, William Grayson, Nathanael Greene, Alexander Hamilton, John Hancock, Edward Hand, Benjamin and R. H. Harrison, Moses Hazen, William Heath, Patrick Henry, Francis Hopkinson, Robert Howe (N. C.), David Humphreys, William Irvine, John Jay,

Thomas Jefferson, Thomas Johnson, Joseph Jones, Henry Knox, Gen. Lafayette, John Laurens, Tobias Lear, Benjamin Lincoln, Charles, Henry and Richard Henry Lee, Robert and William Livingston, Alexander McDougall, James McHenry, Allen McLane, James Madison, John Marshall, George Mason, George, John and Hugh Mercer, James Monroe, Daniel Morgan, Gouverneur and Robert Morris, William Moultrie, Thomas Nelson, Samuel H. Parsons, Edmund Pendleton, Timothy Pickering, Charles Cotesworth and Thomas Pinckney, Israel Putnam, Edmund Randolph, Joseph Reed, John Robinson, Edward and John Rutledge, Arthur St. Clair, John Sinclair, Philip Schuyler, Roger Sherman, Alexander Spotswood, Adam Stephen, Lord Stirling, Baron Steuben, David Stuart, John Sullivan, Benjamin Talemadge, James, Tench and William Tilghman, Jonathan Trumbull, father and son, Artemas Ward, James, John and Joseph Warren, Anthony Wayne, Meshech Weare, James Wilson, John Witherspoon, Oliver Wolcott, James Wood, William Woodford and David Wooster.

To this list might be added hundreds of names in Virginia and Maryland, and also the names of officers of rank attached to the French forces coöperating with the American army during the Revolution, as well as the commanders of the British army to whom Gen. Washington on occasions wrote letters.

At different times since the principal sales, already referred to, of Washington relics, other minor collections of autograph material, though how severed from his manuscript collection and by what devices brought together, it would be difficult to state, have by the art of the auctioneer been thrust alluringly upon the market. These relics of the "father of our country" would indeed seem to have a "Heavenly grace" about them since they are never exhausted. Thus far there has been but little fraud practiced upon the public in the fabrication of what is commonly designated "genuine Washington relics." It is surmised, however, that there may have been sold a few more chairs, tables, sideboards, fenders, andirons, plates, tableware, candlesticks, etc., than were ever at Mount Vernon, but the fad is progressive and will doubtless extend to autographic material. The attempt some years ago of a Washington City dealer in second-hand books to introduce a book plate in imitation of the one used by Gen. Washington, into a lot of old books, to impose on buyers is not forgotten. Although that attempt failed, others managed with greater cunning may prove more dangerous.

The descendants of most of Washington's heirs seem to have been strangers to any sentiment or feeling of sacredness for articles once owned by the General, which the public suppose they naturally would attach to the records, books, and bric-a-brac left by their illustrious kinsman. This defect of gratitude and want of due appreciation seem almost incomprehensible to the present generation of patriotic Americans, and yet this was more or less apparent from the time of the General's death. Neither the executors nor the heirs seem ever to have entertained other than a commercial idea of the value of the immortal Washington's memorial and historic treasures. From the various sales of relics that have taken place it is made apparent that Justice Bushrod Washington, who was one of the largest beneficiaries, and who had the custody of all the precious papers must have suffered a great mass of autographic material to be taken away from the collection, but whether with or without warrant we have no means of knowing. Tradition credits Justice Bushrod Washington with the exercise of a most gracious hospitality to visitors coming to Mount Vernon during his ownership, and as having repeatedly invited distinguished persons while viewing the sage's library and papers to help themselves to specimens of Gen. Washington's handwriting as well as to letters from distinguished persons to him. The low estimate, or want of any adequate appreciation, of the historic value of the manuscript papers which remained at Mount Vernon, after the death of the General and his wife, may be said to have become contagious among all who had access to them. Even the historian, Jared Sparks, it would seem became infected, and deliberately mutilated memorandum books and even the diary itself (although he says it was essential in writing the life of the General), by tearing out leaves to give to friends and relic hunters as veritable autographic memorials of our illustrious Washington. For evidence of this fact see specimens in the Dreer collection in the library of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, given by Mr. Sparks to Robert Gilmore, February 22, 1832, with the certificate of the fact in Judge Gilmore's handwriting attached.

The many manuscript volumes which comprise the diary of Washington are now so scattered that it is hazardous to assume that they were or were not (in one form or another) a complete and continuous record as to time, if not as to method and matter, when they left the hands of their author. It is possible and to be hoped that other volumes and parts of volumes and missing leaves not now known to exist may yet be discovered which may fill all gaps. Those which are known to be extant are now the property of the United States Government, historical societies, public and private libraries, and collectors of literary rarities, so that it is very difficult to find or obtain access to them or bring the disconnected parts together. As far as the writer knows, his is the only complete assemblage of copies of all the known originals that has ever been made since they were so ruthlessly dispersed from the library shelves at Mount Vernon.

The three months of Washington's diary for August, September and October, 1774, here given, comprise a most important period in the early movements which led the people of the English colonies up to an armed resistance against the tyranny of the mother country. In them are exhibited Washington's busy life, his prudent conduct, diverse employments as a planter, a patriotic citizen and legislator, in whose judgment the people, even then, with great unanimity confided. For sixteen consecutive years he had served in the assembly of Virginia. His military reputation, too, was the most admired of any living American-born citizen. The people of Fairfax County, in mass meeting, had but recently chosen him their chairman and had sent him as a deputy to the provincial convention of Virginia, where he offered those aggressive non-transportation resolutions which were unanimously adopted. This thoroughly patriotic convention, too, in its wisdom, selected him as one of the delegates from Virginia to the First Continental Congress in 1774. His daily pursuits and his association with the leading men of the day at Williamsburg, Fredericksburg, Alexandria, Mount Vernon and Philadelphia, are here a matter of record, and attest the fact that wherever Washington went and in whatever company he appeared, he received marked attention from the most distinguished people. His accurate knowledge of public affairs, his good sense and tact in social life, as well as in the political arena, during that and other exciting periods in our history, all stamp him as a man of great wisdom, sound judgment and diplomatic address of the first order. For some time prior to the meeting of the Congress of 1774, he had been receiving at Mount Vernon numerous and repeated visits from some of the most prominent men of Virginia and Maryland, among whom were such characters as George Mason of Virginia, and Thomas Stone of Maryland, the signer of the Declaration.

On setting out on this occasion for Philadelphia, as was his custom when going east by Upper Marlboro, or south by Port Tobacco, he sent his horses, servants and baggage, as well as those of his traveling companions, across the Potomac at the ferry, which was on his own plantation, some hours in advance of his own departure. A number of gentlemen from the neighborhood were his guests that day, and after dinner, Washington with Edmund Pendleton and Patrick Henry, also members of the Continental Congress, who had been resting a couple of days at Mount Vernon, crossed the Potomac River in front of the mansion in his own rowboat. Mounting their horses in waiting for them on the Maryland side, they rode in the shade of the afternoon by the Port Tobacco road to Upper Marlboro, where they lodged for the night.

This introduction has been extended much beyond the intention of the writer; but he found in his search for the missing volumes of the General's diary that the facts in the history of the breaking up of the great Mount Vernon library were not generally known or accessible to students. It is hoped, however, that this attempt at a schedule of the Washington papers and library, with the connected narrative of the more important sales and removal of George Washington's books and papers from Mount Vernon, with the statement where most of these treasures have found a permanent, yet accessible resting-place, may be a sufficient apology.

The text of the diary is given with literal exactness, the editor restricting his agency in the publication to footnotes, which are designed to furnish the reader with brief references to persons and places named in the diary. No attempt is made to recount the proceedings of this Congress. The debates were never made public and the parts taken by the individual members can not be known. Washington was not an extempore speaker, nor does he record speeches of others. It has been ascertained that John Dickinson drafted the petition to the king and the address to the inhabitants of Quebec, and that Jay drafted the address to the people of Great Britain; while Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, prepared the memorial to the inhabitants of the British colonies, a paper which extorted a eulogy from Chatham. In nearly every instance the individuals named in the diary were enterprising citizens, and some of them leaders of thought among their neighbors. Many of them were zealous in defense of colonial rights, and won renown in the army, while some were lukewarm, and in the march of events adhered passively to the crown, though a few took up arms in its defense. The diary, even in this aspect, throws important light on the views of certain actors during the early days of the controversy which preceded the armed contest that ended in the independence of the colonies. Washington's diplomacy and cultured address opened to him castle and mansion, and enabled him to mix freely with the leaders of every circle in society and learn all shades of popular opinion, thus obtaining views and convictions not usually disclosed.

DIARY OF COL. GEORGE WASHINGTON FOR AUGUST, SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER, 1774.

Where, how, or with whom my time is Spent.¹

¹ This is the formula or heading repeated in the diary at the beginning of each month for a year or more

² Col. Burwell Bassett, of "Eltham," was the brother-in-law of Gen. Washington. He was the son of William Bassett, of New Kent County, Va., owner of the fine estate known as "Eltham," on the York River, a little above the junction of the Pamunky and Mattapony rivers, which he left to his son. Burwell was twice married; first, to Ann Kidly Chamberlayne, daughter of a planter in New Kent, on the Pamunky River. She lived but a few years. His second wife was Anna Maria, daughter of Col. John Dandridge, a sister of Mrs. Martha Custis, the wife of George Washington. Col. Burwell Bassett was killed by a fall from a spirited horse he was training to the saddle. He had two sons and three daughters.

⁴ This was the convention of Virginia. A circular letter drafted by eighty-nine members of the house of burgesses, of whom Washington was one, at an improvised meeting in the "Apollo room" of the "Raleigh tavern" in Williamsburg, after the assembly had been dissolved by the governor on May 25, 1774, was sent to their constituents, recommending that each and every county in Virginia should send deputies to a convention to be held in Williamsburg on the 1st day of August, 1774. At the proposed convention the various questions exciting the public mind, such as taxation, non-importation, and the holding of a Continental Congress, were to be generally considered. If the latter proposition was accepted, the convention was to have power to select the delegates to a congress of all the Colonies. The measures recommended by this letter being approved, the convention met, was well attended, and their resolves were practically unanimous.

The following memorandum, in Gen. Washington's handwriting, doubtless gives the result of the ballots in this convention for delegates to the first Continental Congress. The original is preserved in the Dreer collection in the Pennsylvania Historical Society:

⁵Mrs. — Campbell, of Williamsburg, kept a large boarding house, or possibly, a licensed ordinary. Washington's cash books show that he had, at times, patronized her house since 1759. It is probable that Mrs. Campbell was the widow of Colin Campbell, deputy adjutant to Washington in 1754.

⁶Washington had one of his own houses in Williamsburg fitted up with the necessary furniture for lodging and office facilities, for transacting business and for conferences with his friends while in attendance at the meetings of the House of Burgesses. The General had also a house of his own in Alexandria, furnished in a similar manner, where he occasionally lodged and where he always met gentlemen for the transaction of business during the sessions of the court and at other times by appointment, in that town.

⁷ Robert Carter Nicholas, esq., was chosen treasurer in 1766 to succeed John Robinson, esq., and served until after 1775.

widdie, presented the case with ability and secured a modification of the practice. The fee, in time, was discontinued. After Braddock's defeat he headed a volunteer company of 100 mounted men to protect the frontier against an invasion of Indians. In 1758 he was appointed a visitor of William and Mary College, and was a valued officer of that institution. In 1764, as a member of the Assembly, he drew up the remonstrance of Virginia to the pending stamp act. He was chairman of the committee of correspondence in 1773, and influential in bringing about the Continental Congress. He presided over the Virginia convention of August 1, 1774, and was the first of seven deputies selected to attend the Continental Congress, which met in Philadelphia the 5th of September that year, and was unanimously chosen their presiding officer. He had had much parliamentary experience, was a man of noble presence, self-possession and kindness of manner which made him very popular. The friendship between Randolph and Washington was very strong. His wife was the sister of Benjamin Harrison, of Virginia. They left no children. His remains were removed from Philadelphia to Virginia and interred in the chapel of William and Mary College.

¹⁰ Mrs. Elizabeth Dawson is supposed to have been Miss Churchill, who married Commissary William Dawson, afterwards president of William and Mary College. As a widow, she kept a fashionable boarding house in Williamsburg for some years. In 1768 she disposed of her coach by raffle, in which Washington took chances. On June 1, 1774, his cash book shows that he lent the lady £2. His ledger in after years shows this account closed by loss, £2.

¹¹Besides the plantation owned by Washington and situated in King William County, there were lands belonging to the Custis estate, of which he was executor, both in this, New Kent and King and Queen counties. Washington also owned and operated two plantations on the Rappahannock, and three in the valley of Virginia, besides the five composing his Mount Vernon estate, and known as Mansion House, Dogue Run, Muddy Hole, Ferry farm and River farm.

¹²King William County, Va., lies between the Mattapony and the Pamunky rivers which bound it on the north and south sides respectively.

¹³Col. John Parke Custis was born at the "White House" on the Pamunky River in New Kent County, Va., in 1753. He was the son of Daniel Parke and Martha (Dandridge) Custis. His father died leaving John and Patsy Custis with a good productive estate to the care of their mother. January 6, 1759, Mrs. Martha Custis was married to Col. George Washington of Mount Vernon. At the latter place these children as wards passed their childhood and enjoyed the protection and guidance of their mother and their foster father, Gen. George Washington. While a boy, Washington spoke of him as John and Jacky, but in 1771 begins to give him his full name, John Parke Custis and writes of him as Mr. Custis. John Parke Custis was educated, at first, by private tutors, but later was for a time at St. John's College, Annapolis, and also at Princeton, N. J. He inherited a good estate which had been admirably managed for him by Gen. Washington. February 3, 1774, he was united in marriage to Eleanor, familiarly called Nelly, daughter of Benedict Calvert of "Mount Airy," Md. The young couple for some years resided at Mount Vernon and then removed to their own plantation known as "Abingdon," on the Potomac River immediately above Alexandria. He was always considerably cared for by Gen. Washington and in all respects treated as a son. Manifesting a desire to serve in the army, Washington appointed him his aide-de-camp with the rank of colonel and he proceeded with the army to Yorktown. During the siege of that place, he was seized with fever and died at "Eltham," the residence of his uncle, Burwell Bassett, November 5, 1781, leaving a wife and four children:—Elizabeth Parke, born August, 1776; Martha Parke, December, 1777; Eleanor Parke, March, 1779; and George Washington Parke, April, 1781. The youngest two were adopted by Gen. Washington and his wife. The remains of Col. John Parke Custis were interred at "Eltham." In the fall of 1783 his widow was married to Dr. David Stuart, of Maryland.

¹⁴King and Queen County, Va., lies between the Mattapony and the Piankatank rivers, which bound it on the south and north, respectively.

¹⁵King William Court-House is about 2 miles from the Mattapony River on the main road to Fredericksburg and about 25 miles from Williamsburg. This court house was unfortunately destroyed by fire a few years ago, causing another serious loss to those already sustained, and adding to the calamitous destruction of Virginia records.

¹⁶Todd's Bridge crossed the Mattapony River about 2 miles above Aylett's and some 6 miles from King William Court-House. Todd's Ordinary was kept there on the north side of the stream.

¹⁷Roy's Ordinary was kept by Boswell Roy, an extensive planter, a few miles south of Bowling Green. He was a member of a numerous and influential family of this name, who were among the early settlers on the Rappahannock and in its vicinity, and from whom the village, Port Royal, got its name. The name was once attached to "Roy's warehouse" and Royston's in Caroline County. The patriot and distinguished judge, Edmund Pendleton, married a daughter of Boswell Roy.

¹⁸Col. Fielding Lewis, patriot and planter of Fredericksburg, Va., was born in Spottsylvania County, 1726, and died at "Kenmore House," on his large estate adjoining the town of Fredericksburg, December, 1781. He was an enterprising, active, successful and popular business man and the first mayor of the town. He was one of the magistrates of the county, a member of the House of Burgesses and an early and influential patriot in the Revolution. His business capacity led him to be placed at the head of an establishment founded in Fredericksburg, early in the Revolution, for the manufacture of arms. The site of these works is still known as "Gunning Green." He was twice married; first, to Catherine Washington, cousin to Gen. Washington, by whom he had three children: John, Francis and Warner, the last of whom died in infancy. Second, to Betty, only sister of Gen. Washington, by whom he had nine sons and three daughters. Mrs. Betty Lewis was majestic in person, lovely in mental and moral attributes, and in figure and features closely resembled her illustrious brother. The grave of Mary, the mother of George Washington, is on what was then the Kenmore Estate. After the death of Col. Lewis his property was divided equally among his children.

¹⁹Fredericksburg is situated on a broad plateau on the right bank of the Rappahannock River, in Spottsylvania County, Va., and is the seat of justice. It is about midway between Washington and Richmond. The farm of Augustine Washington, on which his son George passed his childhood, was on the left bank of the Rappahannock, a mile or more below the present railroad bridge. His widow continued to live there until 1775, when her children induced her to remove into the town of Fredericksburg. The distance between Fredericksburg and Mount Vernon is 45 miles, which Washington repeatedly accomplished, on horseback, in seven hours.

²⁰Thomas G. Tyler resided on a plantation in the vicinity of Aquia, and as early as 1774, perhaps even before that, kept an ordinary.

²¹Aquia was inland, and is a small village at the head of tide water on Aquia Creek. The main road from Alexandria and Dumfries to King George County and to Fredericksburg crossed the stream at this place.

11. At home all day.—Miss Calvert ²² here.
12. At home all day Miss Carlyle ²³ & her Sister Nancy came here.—Mr. Willis ²⁴ also dind here, & went away afterwards.
13. I rid to the Neck Plantation ²⁵ & came home by Muddy hole²⁶.

Near by was the historic Aquia Creek Church, which was very elegant and spacious for its time. Shipping merchants early established stores at this point and conducted a profitable trade with the planters of Prince William and Stafford counties. A ferry between Virginia and Maryland, which had been maintained near Aquia from an early day, added to the importance of the place.

²²Miss Elizabeth Calvert was the daughter of Benedict Calvert, of "Mount Airy," Md., who married Charles Stewart. Her sister Eleanor married John Parke Custis, July 3, 1774. Ariana, another and younger sister, is, however, presumed to have been too young to have been visiting Mount Vernon at this time. She never married.

²³Miss Sarah, usually called Sally Carlyle, was the daughter of Col. John, a merchant of Alexandria, Va., (who served as commissary, with the rank of major, in the French and Indian war), and his wife Sarah (Fairfax) Carlyle. She had a younger sister, Nancy, and a brother, George, and they were all frequent visitors at Mount Vernon.

²⁴Francis Willis, jr., esq., was a young lawyer much employed by Gen. Washington and by G. W. Fairfax, about this time, in the management of the latter's business. He was the son of Francis, and grandson of Lewis Willis, of Fredericksburg, Va., whose families had intermarried with the Washingtons.

²⁵"Neck Plantation" was a name applied, for a time, to the farms lying immediately above Little Hunting Creek on the Potomac. It contained 1,207 acres of "plowable land." By the purchase of a tract of 1,806 acres from William Clifton in 1760, the bounds of the Mount Vernon estate were greatly enlarged. This particular plantation came to be included in what was afterwards known as the "River Farm," and is so referred to in Gen. Washington's designation of the various farms belonging to his possessions on the Potomac. (See letter December 12, 1793, to Arthur Young.) But there were at least two other larger tracts or farms adjoining this purchase from Clifton, included in the River Farm. March 30, 1774, Washington records the fact:—"Walked to my three plantations in the Neck."

²⁶Muddy Hole farm lay nearly 3 miles northwest from the Mount Vernon mansion house and contained 476 acres of beautifully situated clay land. The name had prejudiced this tract in the writer's estimation until he traveled over it. No person seems able to account for the name, which was, however, given to it before Gen. Washington bought it. This and each of the other farms had their overseer, servants, buildings and general outfit independent of each other.

14. Went to Pohick Church²⁷ with Mr. Custis—found Messrs. Carlyle,²⁸ Dalton,²⁹ Ramsay,³⁰ Adam,³¹ & Doct. Rumney³² here upon my Return.—Doct. Craik³³ also came in the afternoon.—

²⁷ Pohick Church, Truro Parish, is situated on Pohick Creek, about 7 miles from Mount Vernon and 4 from Gunston Hall. The first edifice was frame, built in 1732. This was the church attended by the occupants of Mount Vernon up to 1765, when it had become so dilapidated as to be no longer worth repairing. Washington was chosen a vestryman in 1765 and was kept in that office for several years. The parishioners resolved at that time to build a new church and construct it of brick. After much discussion a new site was chosen 2 miles farther up the stream and more central to the majority of the parishioners, though but little, if any, nearer to Mount Vernon. It, however, was not completed until 1772. Washington drew the plans for it and served on the building committee. The new church was erected on ground given for the purpose by Daniel French. Washington bought pew No. 28, north side, next the communion table, for which he paid £16, and had it marked with his initials. Lund Washington bought No. 29, which he afterwards sold to the General. While this church was being built the family attended Christ Church, Fairfax Parish, in Alexandria, where the General was also a vestryman and had a pew. Considering the condition of the roads in those days and the distance to be traveled, the Washington family were very constant in their attendance.

²⁸ Col. John Carlyle, of Alexandria, was a native of Scotland, who early in life became a merchant on the Potomac. He was twice married; first to Sarah, second daughter of the Hon. William Fairfax, of "Belvoir." He was in business in Alexandria as early as 1745. In 1753 he erected, on Fairfax street, a large stone residence, which is still standing, and in which he entertained Gen. Braddock in 1755 and the governors of the five provinces who met there to concert measures for the campaign against the French on the Ohio, which ended so disastrously. He was appointed by Governor Dinwiddie in 1754 commissary of provisions and stores for the expedition of that year to the Ohio. His mercantile and shipping business was conducted under a co-partnership with John Dalton. When, in 1748, a charter was granted for the town of Alexandria, he was named in the Act as one of the trustees. On the death of his father-in-law, William Fairfax, he was appointed as Royal Collector of the Potomac. He and all the members of his family were frequent visitors at Mount Vernon. His second wife was Sybil West, daughter of Hugh and Sybil (Harrison) West.

dence, which is still standing. He was frequently at Mount Vernon on business, his firm buying fish, flour and other products from the General. His children were also frequent visitors at the same place. He died in Alexandria in 1777, leaving a considerable estate.

³⁰Capt. William Ramsay, of Alexandria, Va., was born in Scotland in 1716. He came to America and settled as a trader and merchant in Alexandria in 1744, and died there in 1785. He was well informed in the laws of trade, familiar with the markets of the world and very popular with the farmers on the Upper Potomac, who bought supplies and marketed their produce with him. He married Ann McCarty, a relative, through the Balls, of the mother of George Washington. Capt. Ramsay early and fully identified himself with the town of Alexandria, as well as with the Colony of Virginia and the interests of the surrounding sections of country. In the act incorporating Alexandria, in 1748, he was named as one of the trustees. His extensive commercial and shipping connections enabled him to supply much of the outfits to the military expeditions of Virginia from 1754 to 1763. On the occasion of an alarm in 1756 of an Indian invasion, he served for a time as captain of a militia company from Fairfax, under Washington. His son, Dennis, was colonel of a Virginia regiment in the Revolution and served as mayor of Alexandria in 1793. Another son, Dr. William Ramsay, served as surgeon throughout the war for independence. He was one of the early merchants to reclaim the flats and build wharves in front of the town. The Washington and Alexandria ferry wharf was originally built by him in 1784-'85. Capt. Ramsay and his family were on terms of intimacy at Mount Vernon. Washington's letters and also his cashbooks show that the General contributed a part of the funds necessary to educate William Ramsay, jr., at Princeton.

³¹Robert Adam, merchant of Alexandria, was born in Scotland, 1731, and died on his plantation 4 miles from Alexandria, in Fairfax County, March 27, 1789. On coming to America he resided for a time in Annapolis, Md., before settling in Alexandria, Va., in 1753. He had received careful training as a merchant; was well educated; had refined tastes and correct habits. Through his business enterprise, there were inaugurated at Alexandria a number of industries, some of which are continued to this day. He also established methods of exchanges and agencies with merchants, and shipped to different cities and seaports, which had the effect of augmenting the volume and character of his business. For years, he bought the whole catch of fish at the different fishing landings of the Mount Vernon estate just as they were taken from the seine, cured them himself, then packed and shipped them as he found a market. He was a zealous and prominent Mason, and largely influenced the forming and the founding of the lodge in Alexandria, in 1783. As a merchant, his house had a deservedly extensive credit. His home was maintained in elegant style, as refinement and culture were natural to him. In 1772 he completed a new storeroom, the size and finish of which attracted much attention. Gen. and Mrs. Washington, with Patsy Custis, went to Alexandria expressly to see it. Mr. Adam left a family of sons and daughters, some of whose descendants reside in Alexandria at this time.

³²Dr. William Rumney, of Alexandria, was a well-educated physician, a native of Northumberland, England, where his father was established as master of a Latin school at Alnwick. An uncle was a clergyman at Berwick, England. The doctor, after receiving a good classical education, studied medicine and qualified for practice in London. He then accepted service as a surgeon in the British Colonial army, where he remained for several years. Resolving to go to America, he resigned his position, and settled in Alexandria, Va., about 1763. He was employed by Washington to attend, by the year, the servants of the several farms constituting the Mount Vernon estate from 1766 to 1781, at a fixed sum per year. There was also a William Rumney, a shipping merchant, in Alexandria, about the period of this journal, and for years after the Revolution, supposed to be an uncle of the doctor's. It was through the firm of John Rumney & Co., of White Haven, England, that Gen. Washington imported the stone tiling for the great eastern portico of the Mount Vernon mansion.

³³ Dr. James Craik was born at Obigland, Scotland, in 1732, and died on his plantation, "Vaucluse," near Alexandria, in Fairfax County, Va., February 6, 1814. He graduated, both in letters and medicine, at the University of Edinburgh, and then entered the army as a surgeon, serving for some time in the West Indies. Resigning in the winter of 1753, he came to Virginia with the intention of practicing his profession at Norfolk. But, early in the spring of 1754, an expedition was being organized for the Ohio, which he joined. His name appears at one time as ensign, at another as lieutenant, and again as surgeon. He was with Col. George Washington in the battle of the Great Meadows and the surrender of "Fort Necessity," in July, 1754. On the failure of this enterprise, he remained with the troops at Winchester and went out with the unfortunate Braddock expedition in 1755. He remained attached to the Virginia troops until about 1763. While in the army he acquired one or more plantations in the valley of Virginia, but eventually bought a plantation in Maryland, in the vicinity of Port Tobacco, about 8 miles from Mount Vernon, where he resided until after the Revolution. He served as a surgeon in the struggle for American Independence and rose to be director-general of the hospitals at Williamsburg at the capture of Cornwallis's army. He received from Virginia 6,000 acres of land for his services in the Indian and Revolutionary wars. In 1760 he was married to Mariamne Ewell, by whom he had four sons and three daughters; one of the sons was named George Washington, to whose education the General contributed liberally. The friendship that was formed between the General and the doctor in 1754 lasted through their lives, and the latter was always a welcome guest at Mount Vernon. It was his sad duty to attend the General in his last illness, and was pleasantly remembered in his will as "his old and intimate friend."

³⁴ Colonel George William Fairfax, of "Belvoir," Va., the oldest son of the Hon. William Fairfax, was born at Nassau, in the West Indies, in 1724, and died at Bath, England, April 3, 1787. The Colonel was educated in England, after which he resided with his father at "Belvoir," and found profitable employment with Lord Thomas Fairfax, in the Valley of Virginia, and in the development for himself of new plantations in that region. In 1748 he married Sarah, daughter of Col. Wilson Cary, of Hampton, Va. He resided for some years partly at "Belvoir," and in the summer at "Greenway Court." On the death of his father, in 1757, he inherited "Belvoir" and resided there continuously until 1773, when he went to England to attend to some business there, appointing his friend, George Washington, his agent. It soon became evident to him that his stay in England would, of necessity, be protracted for some years, and in 1774 he directed a vendue at which all his household effects should be sold, and "Belvoir" rented. This was done. A list of the articles bought at the first sale, August 15, 1774, by Gen. Washington amounting to £169 12s. 6d., may be seen in a note in "A Journal of My Journey over the Mountains," p. 16. The house was leased but in a few years it was accidentally burned, and was never rebuilt. Early in 1775, Washington resigned his agency in the management of Fairfax's affairs. His estate in Virginia consisted chiefly of lands, much of them of the first quality, which were rapidly enhancing in value. As he had no children, "Belvoir" was left to Ferdinand, son of the Rev. Bryan Fairfax, and his other property to his heirs. The friendship continued between Col. Fairfax and Gen. Washington throughout their lives.

³⁵Dogue Run farm, also spoken of as Dogue Run plantation and Dogue Run quarters lay two miles to the southwest of the Mount Vernon Mansion House, on a creek of the same name. Washington, in a letter to Arthur Young, bearing date 12th December, 1793, describes Dogue Run farm as "consisting of six hundred and fifty acres, with a new building for the overlooker and covering for forty odd negroes and a new Circular barn and stabling and sheds for thirty work-horses and oxen." It adjoined the Mill and the Posey farm.

³⁶George Washington inherited a small mill at the mouth of Dogue Run built by his father and left by him with the "Hunting Creek tract," afterwards known as "Mount Vernon," to Major Lawrence, who left it to George. The frequent mention of repairing the mill-dam and race in Washington's Diary raises the query as to whether it was not badly located or defective in construction. February 10, 1770, assisted by Mr. Balandine, Washington ran a new line of levels on Dogue Run to determine a site for a new mill, then about to be built. In January, 1771, he records the fact that he had completed the work of turning Piney Branch run into Dogue run to augment the supply of water to his two mills. The Mill plantation included land on both sides of Dogue run, adjacent to the mill but chiefly to the east of Dogue run plantation. In the later years of the administration of the estate the name "Mill plantation" disappears and it is presumed that the lands were farmed under the supervision of the Dogue run overseer and not, therefore, mentioned in Washington's enumeration of farms in 1793.

³⁷Posey's Plantation refers to a farm which Washington bought of Capt. John Posey, lying below the mouth of Dogue Run on the Potomac. In 1753, by Act of Assembly, a ferry from Posey's farm to the plantation of Thomas Marshall in Maryland was authorized to be established. There was also on the plantation a good fishing landing for seine hauling, and the buildings necessary for curing the fish caught. In 1769, Washington bought this farm and united it under the Mount Vernon management as a part of the Dogue Run Plantation. Capt. Posey at the time, reserved the ferry and the ferry house with 12 acres which, however, he sold to Washington in 1772. The ferry was continued as an enterprise by Gen. Washington and the fishing landing was also used in season. Capt. Posey is believed to have served with Washington in the French and Indian War. He was the father of Col. Thomas Posey of the Revolution.

³⁸Mr. — Fitzhugh. There was a numerous and influential family of this name in Virginia, with whom Washington was on terms of familiar intercourse but there is nothing in the text to designate the particular person here referred to. The writer is left to conjecture that it was either William Fitzhugh of King George County, or the planter John of "Mar-mion" of that county, both of whom were frequently at Mount Vernon.

³⁹Gen. Washington's attention to his wife and the respectful manner in which he addressed her, alike in the family circle and in company, as well as when referring to her in his diary and letters, was always most considerate, polite and affectionate.

⁴⁰Alexandria, Va. This location was included in a patent or grant for 6,000 acres of land fronting on the Potomac River, and extending from Hunting Creek just below the town to Pomit's run near the Little Falls above Georgetown. This patent was issued to Robert Howson by Sir William Berkeley, Governor of Virginia, in 1669. The same year the title was conveyed for the consideration of six hogsheads of tobacco to John Alexander. A "tobacco-rolling house," as such warehouses were then called in Virginia, was established on the site of the present town of Alexandria, then called "Belle Haven." The name of these houses was no doubt suggested by the method of transporting the hogsheads of tobacco by putting a shaft to an axle passed through from end to end of the hogshead, to which a horse was harnessed, and then rolling them over the roads on their own periphery. Alexandria was incorporated as a town with trustees named in the Act in 1748 and its organization effected July 13, 1749. In 1780 it was re-organized under a more republican form of government. In 1763 George Washington became one of the trustees and served for some years. It was here that he often attended church, made his purchases, did his banking, mailed and received his letters. The town is full of traditions of his interest in the place and in the people.

⁴² Col. John Fitzgerald, merchant of Alexandria, was a native of Ireland. He was well educated and full of commercial enterprise, stable in his purposes and friendships, and fully identified himself with the people of the town and surrounding country. He was married to a Miss Digges, near Bladensburg. He conducted a large and successful shipping and mercantile business and, to the close of his life, deserved and enjoyed the confidence of the community. At one time he was mayor of Alexandria. He bought large quantities of fish, flour and other products from the Mount Vernon estate and shipped them, as opportunity and market offered, to other localities. He was a patriot in the Revolution and, for a time, was on Gen. Washington's staff, and in this position was in the battles of Monmouth and Princeton. (See Recollections of Washington, by Oustis, pp. 190, 192 and 452.) He was on terms of friendly intercourse and correspondence with A. Lee, R. H. Lee, Robert Morris, George Mason and others. He died in Alexandria.

⁴⁵ The barbecue feast was a much more popular observance among the people in colonial times than at present. The animal selected for such a celebration was usually a small-sized bullock, although occasionally the pig, bear, deer, or sheep was selected and roasted entire. Such feasts were now and then given by societies, political parties, and by individuals to popularize some measure or rejoice over a success gained.

⁴⁶ Accotink, a hamlet of a few houses, was situated on the left bank of a stream having the same name, which rises near Fairfax Court House and empties into Pohick Bay, on the Potomac. The village is mainly made up of the mills, a blacksmith's shop, a country store and the few dwellings these enterprises inspired.

⁴⁸ William Herbert, a native of Ireland, born 1743, came to America in his youth and finally settled in Alexandria, Va., in 1772. He was energetic and soon became a successful business man and died, regretted, February 24, 1818. His correct habits, intelligence and capacity for the discharge of business soon placed him among the leading merchants of Alexandria. He married the daughter of John Carlyle, esq. In 1798 he was advanced to the presidency of the Bank of Alexandria, in which he had been a director for years. He was on terms of friendly intercourse with Gen. Washington, as were also his wife and children with the entire Mount Vernon household.

⁵⁰ Dr. Daniel Jenifer, son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Hanson) Jenifer, was born in Kent County, Md., January 25, 1756, and died 1809. Having studied medicine, he settled to practice in St. Marys County. On the breaking out of the war of the Revolution he was commissioned a surgeon in the Continental Line 26th August, 1776, and served until 1782. He ranked as surgeon in the general hospital, and is recorded as a member of the Maryland Society of the Cincinnati. In 1785 he married Sarah, daughter of Dr. James Craik. They had a number of children. (See Hanson's Old Kent.) in 1783. He was on terms of the most friendly relations with Washington, and doubtless often discussed the political situation and needs of the country with him. The draft of the plan of the confederation adopted by the States was largely from his pen. When not in Congress he was sent to the Maryland senate. He was influential in the passage of laws against primogeniture in the descent of estates. He was an eloquent speaker and a profound lawyer. He left no children.

⁵² William Digges, esq., was a wealthy planter on the Potomac, in Maryland. His estate, "Warburton," was in full view from the eastern portico of Mount Vernon. The plantation included the site of Fort Washington, which is nearly due east across the Potomac from the Mount Vernon mansion. Mr. Digges, as was the custom with the planters on the navigable waters of the Potomac, kept his own boats and trained servants, dressed in uniform, accustomed to rowing and sailing them. The "Mount Vernon" and "Warburton" estates indulged in this custom; intercourse was therefore easy, frequent and friendly between the proprietors and their families, of which this diary gives abundant evidence.

⁵³ Col. Edmund Pendleton, statesman, was born in Caroline County, Va., September 9, 1721, and died in Richmond, Va., October 23, 1803. His grandfather, Philip, came from England to Virginia, in 1676. Edmund had in youth but limited educational advantages, but a naturally strong and inquisitive mind, with a determined will and love for accurate knowledge, surmounted these obstacles. An effective schooling was afforded him in the clerk's office of Caroline County, in which he served for several years as the deputy of Benjamin Robinson. In 1744, he was admitted to practice law, and from the start attracted attention, not only as a speaker, but also for his knowledge of law and of history. He had throughout life a wonderful capacity for continued and unremitting attention to business and to study. In 1751, he was made a county justice; in 1752, elected to a seat in the House of Burgesses, and was soon recognized as one of the leading members. In 1764, he was placed upon the committee to memorialize the King on the affairs of the Colony. In 1766, as a lawyer, he gave the opinion that the Stamp Act was void for want of constitutional authority for Parliament to pass it and, therefore, it did not bind the inhabitants of Virginia. He was placed in 1773 on the committee of correspondence of Virginia; made county lieutenant, with the rank of colonel in 1774, and the same year was selected by the convention of Virginia a delegate to the Continental Congress to be held at Philadelphia, Pa., which he attended. In 1775, he was chosen president of the convention of Virginia, which met December of that year. In May, 1776, he drew up the resolution instructing the Virginia delegates to propose the Declaration of Independence. He was at this time president of the Committee of Safety. His conduct in every public position was characterized by wisdom, moderation and ability. On the organization of the State government, he was chosen speaker of the house, and was selected along with Chancellor Wythe and Thomas Jefferson to revise the laws of Virginia. In 1777, by an unfortunate fall from his horse, he was crippled for life. In 1779, he was made president of the Court of Appeals. In 1788, he presided at the State convention which adopted the Constitution of the United States, which he advocated in a masterly argument.

⁶⁴ Patrick Henry, orator and statesman, was born at "Studley," Hanover County, Va., May 29, 1736, and died at "Red Hill," Charlotte County, Va., June 6, 1799. He was a son of Col. John, of Virginia, and grandson of Alexander Henry, of Aberdeen, Scotland. Patrick was mainly educated in the classics and mathematics by his father and by private teachers. Owing to his father's financial reverses, a college course was not practicable, and at the age of 15 he began a mercantile career, which, however, was not prosperous. He then took seriously to the study of law and was married at the age of 18 to a Miss Shelton, whose father kept a public house. His practice as a lawyer was for a time limited. In 1763, he was employed in what is historically known as the "Parson's Cause." Before the court his force of reasoning and the legal knowledge he evinced, at once placed him in the very front rank of his profession. In 1764, he removed to Louisa Court House, the better to attend to his duties as a lawyer, and the following year was sent to the House of Burgesses. On May 29, 1765, nine days after he qualified, he moved a series of resolutions defining the rights of the colonies and stigmatizing the Stamp Act as unconstitutional and subversive of British and American liberty. This surprisingly bold step at first confounded both the friends of the Colonies and of the Crown and led to much opposition on the part of old leaders. However, after a speech of almost inspired eloquence, which was described by Thomas Jefferson as surpassing anything he had ever heard, five of his resolutions were carried. The whole series was published and speedily acquiesced in by the public. After this, the enforcement of the tax bill was impracticable and he, at once, became a leader. In May, 1773, he, with Thomas Jefferson, Richard Henry Lee and Dabney Carr, carried through the House a resolution establishing committees of correspondence which gave unity and cohesion to the patriots of the Revolution in all the Colonies and led to the Continental Congress of 1774. At the convention of Virginia in 1775, he moved that the militia be organized and the colony be put in a state of defense. He was at once put at the head of military affairs in Virginia and commanded the forces that demanded the return of the powder taken from the magazine of Virginia by Governor Dunmore, or its payment in money. In the re-organization of the State, in 1776, he was chosen governor and was one of the great powers in support of the Revolution. He was a member of the convention that adopted the Constitution of the United States but opposed its acceptance unless amended, pointing out its danger and defects with great clearness. Washington tendered him the office of Secretary of State, which he declined. He was elected to the United States Senate but died before taking his seat.

⁶⁵ George Mason, esq., statesman and planter of "Gunston Hall," Fairfax County, Va., was born in 1725, on his father's estate situated in

"Dogue's Neck," known also as "Mason's Neck," then in Stafford County, Va., and died at his residence "Gunston Hall," October 7, 1792. His education, which was good, was mainly received at home from private tutors. He was twice married; first, April, 1750, to Ann, daughter of Col. William Eilbeck, of Charles County, Md., by whom he had five sons and four daughters; second to Sarah, daughter of George Brent, of "Woodstock," Va. Shortly after his first marriage he built "Gunston Hall" on his paternal landed inheritance. He took an active and interested part in church affairs, and in 1765 was elected, together with George Washington, a vestryman of Pohick Church. He was a man of good habits, strong mind, retentive memory and strict attention to business, with a special aptness for system and the formulation of legal documents and bills for enactment of laws. In 1769, he drew up the non-importation resolutions which were presented by Washington in the Virginia assembly and which were unanimously adopted. One of these pledged the Virginia planters to purchase no slaves brought into the country after November 1 of that year. In support of the rights of Virginia, Mr. Mason printed a pamphlet with the title "Extracts from the Virginia Charter, with some remarks upon them." At a meeting of the people of Fairfax County, July 18, 1774, presided over by George Washington, he presented a series of twenty-four resolutions reviewing the whole ground of controversy between Great Britain and the Colonies, recommending a congress of all the Colonies and urging non-intercourse with the mother country. Later, the same principles were fully affirmed by the Continental Congress. He declined a seat in Congress but served on the Committee of Safety, which was charged with the executive government of Virginia. In 1776 he drafted the famous bill of rights and also the constitution of Virginia. Madison said that Mason was the ablest debater he had ever heard. In 1777, he was elected to Congress but declined. Ten years later he was a member of the committee that drafted the Constitution of the United States, but did not sign it because, as he said, it endangered the sovereignty of the States. He was also a member of the committee of the State which adopted the Constitution and again opposed its adoption, but without success. He was elected the first United States Senator from Virginia, but declined. He was referred to by Thomas Jefferson as a man of the first order of wisdom. Certainly George Mason deserves to be remembered as one of the purest of patriots and wisest of statesmen.

⁶⁷ Philadelphia, Pa., because of its central location as to the other colonies, as well as on account of the known advocacy of the rights of the provinces by many leading Pennsylvanians in the controversy with the Crown, was selected for the meeting of the Continental Congress, which had been resolved upon by the people of the Colonies, and called to meet in that city September 5, 1774.

⁵⁸ Upper Marlboro is the capital of Prince George County, Md. The town is situated on the right bank of the western branch of the Patuxent River about 2 miles above the fork and 20 miles southwest of Annapolis, on the main road from lower Maryland.

the condition that no other ferry should ever be established to trench upon the ground of the existing one. The Rock Hall ferry was maintained up to about 1846, and the old wharves are still visible.

⁶⁷ Carson's "Buck Tavern" was probably at a point now the thriving village of Middletown in Delaware, and about 18 miles southwest of New Castle.

⁷¹ William Shippen, M. D., the younger, was born in Philadelphia, October 21, 1736, and died in Germantown, Pa., July 11, 1808. He was a graduate of Princeton in 1754, and shortly after began the study of medicine with his father. He, however, completed his studies under Drs. Wm. and John Hunter of London, and at the University of Edinburgh, where he graduated M. D. in 1761. Returning to Philadelphia in 1762 he began the practice of his profession. November 16, 1762, he opened a systematic course of lectures on anatomy, the first in America. They were well patronized and pointed the way to the founding of a medical college which, in 1765, was engrafted upon the College of Philadelphia. Dr. Shippen was elected professor of anatomy and surgery September 23, 1765. He was thoroughly American in his principles and a patriot in the Revolution. On the 15th of July, 1776, he was appointed chief physician of the Flying Camp of the Continental army. On the 11th of April he was commissioned director-general of all the military hospitals for the armies of the United States. Although chosen to this position without a dissenting voice, the summary displacement of Surgeon-General John Morgan to give him the place, without charge or knowledge of the movement to the incumbent aroused suspicion of injustice or at least hasty action on the part of Congress which, in time, reacted unfavorably to Dr. Shippen, and finally led to his resignation January 3, 1781. However, while filling the position, its duties were ably performed. On the fusion of the College of Philadelphia and the University of Pennsylvania, he was continued a member of the faculty until 1806 and remained one of the staff physicians to the Pennsylvania Hospital until 1802. He was for more than forty years a member of the Philosophical Society. His acquaintance with Gen. Washington began in 1756 and continued cordial and warm to the close of his life. John Adams, in his diary of September 20, says Col. R. H. Lee lodged at Dr. Shippen's. It may be that Gen. Washington also continued to lodge there throughout the sitting of Congress.

⁷² "New Tavern" was so named because it was built as recently as 1770, but was more properly and generally known as "The City Tavern." It was situated on South Second, near Walnut street. For many years it remained the largest hotel in the city, and the gathering place for the members of the Continental Congress. It was from this house on the 5th of September, 1774, says John Adams in his diary, that "At 10 o'clock the delegates all met at the City Tavern, and walked to Carpenter's Hall." Within an hour afterwards the First Continental Congress was successfully organized by the selection of Peyton Randolph as president, and Charles Thomson as secretary.

⁷³This was a congress of delegates fresh from the people and untrammelled by instructions. The advisableness of a confederated union between all the English colonies for their better protection was early felt by the leading minds in America. Some such conference and union had been recommended in New England as early as 1643 and again by William Penn in 1696-'97. In 1698 Charles D' Avenant made similar propositions as did others at different dates. Daniel Cox, in 1722, laid his scheme for the settlement and security of New Jersey and proposed plans for a union. Lord Holderness, the English secretary, even went so far in 1753 as to recommend the assemblies of the several colonies to send committees to a general convention to meet at Albany, N. Y., to confer with each other and to renew treaties with the Indians, etc. A convention thus constituted and sanctioned by the ministry actually met at Albany on the 19th of June, 1754. Perhaps the most noteworthy thing that they did, and which was not suggested in the call, was the consideration of the importance of a permanent union among the colonies and the formulation of a plan by a committee of one from each province reported, for a union with a council of 48 members, selected from the several colonies, with a president at their head, to have the general management of civil and military affairs in America.

The conception and the bringing into existence of the Continental Congress in 1774 was almost a spontaneous aspiration and desire of the people of the several colonies. It derived its powers and authority directly from the people in free hustings, and town mass meetings, despite crown prerogatives, or authority from governors, legislatures, or military commanders. A subscription was raised in the Virginia convention to cover the expenses of the delegates to be sent to Philadelphia, to which Washington contributed £100. It is possible that this was returned, as the expenses of the delegates were assumed by the assembly of Virginia. Before adjourning the convention they provided for another Congress to meet in May, 1775. The future Congress was to be composed of delegates from the provincial assemblies, and not directly from the people as was the first.

A son of Samuel Pleasants, of the same name, removed to Richmond, Va., and for some years published there a newspaper called The Argus. His descendants still reside in Richmond.

⁷⁵ In the early times in America a club or company was frequently improvised on short notice, by individuals brought together at ordinaries, taverns and coffee houses for a dinner, a supper, or a bowl of punch. It is understood that the term was also applied to a mixed drink, furnished in a large bowl which was denominated "The Club" by the assembly, whether paid for by one or jointly, by the several persons partaking, whether present by accident or by invitation. It is, however, not entirely clear to the writer whether any of these definitions explains the significance of the term "the governor's club," who, it is inferred, did not even sympathize with the Continental Congress, and what its existence portended.

⁷⁶ Andrew Allan, esq., an eminent lawyer of Philadelphia, was born in that city in 1740, and died in London, England, March 7, 1825. He was the son of Chief-Justice Allan. After receiving a superior education he studied law with his father and entered upon a good practice in his native city. In 1776 he was appointed attorney-general of Pennsylvania. His intelligence and progressive spirit placed him among the foremost citizens in every enterprise, and when a committee of safety in Philadelphia was chosen, he was among the members. He was one of three appointed by the colony to go to New York and advise with the committee of safety in that colony and with Gen. Lee in regard to the defense of that city. He was apparently a strong advocate of all the Congressional measures until the British army possessed themselves of the city of New York. Then he lost courage, entered the British lines, took the oath of allegiance to the King, renouncing those he had taken to Congress, and went to England. His property in Pennsylvania was confiscated, but he was compensated for his loyalty to the crown and his losses in America by grants from the British Government and an annual pension of £400.

his views of the political questions discussed between the British Government and the colonies, but finally came to be regarded as a loyalist. On the approach of the British army to Philadelphia, in 1777, he was arrested and paroled with leave to visit his friends in Maryland and to report in Philadelphia by a certain date. Before the time elapsed the city was in the possession of the British. In May, 1778, he was discharged from parole. Washington and the whole family of Tilghmans were on terms of friendship.

⁷⁹ Richard Penn, lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania, was born in England 1735, and died there May 27, 1811. He was a student for some time at St. John's College, Cambridge, entering for the legal profession, but did attain to any degrees. In 1763 he came to Pennsylvania with his brother John, and January 12, 1764, qualified as a councilor. He revisited England for a couple of years, and was while there appointed by his uncle and brother lieutenant-governor, returning the second time October 16, 1771. By his liberal course and attention to duty he became very popular with all the business interests of this colony. He and his brother John had a dispute as to the construction of his father's will. In 1773 he was superseded in office by John Penn. Both the Penns favored concessions from the British Government, as relating to the oppressive acts complained of by the colonies, and joined in the petition of 1775 to the King, which Mr. R. Penn carried with him to England. He was examined by the House of Lords November 7, 1775, and gave testimony that he believed the colonies would resist the home Government by force unless an accommodation should be reached. He was later a member of Parliament from 1796 to 1806. He married a Miss Mary Masters, an heiress of Pennsylvania. In advanced life, however, he became very poor. He revisited Pennsylvania in 1808 for the last time.

⁸¹ James Allan, esq., of Philadelphia, Pa., the third son of Chief Justice William Allan of Pennsylvania, was born in that State 1742, and died 1798. James graduated from the College of Pennsylvania in 1759, after which he studied law with Edward Shippen, and then spent three years at the Temple, in London. Returning to Philadelphia he began to practice at the bar, and was, in 1767, elected a member of common council. In 1776 he was sent to the State assembly from Northampton County. James Allan began a diary in 1776, which he continued, with but few interruptions, to the time of his death, in 1798. He married, in 1768, Elizabeth, only child of John Lawrence. His diary referred to may be seen in Vol. LX of the Pennsylvania Magazine of History. Under date of May 19, 1773, we find the following entry: "Gov. Eden and Col. Washington are in town, come to the races. Water's horse, Herod, won the £100 yesterday & Mr. Delaney's Sultana £50 today. The town is very gay & invitations frequent. I asked Gov. Eden and Col. Washington to dinner, but they are engaged during their stay." Governor owned one of the horses that ran the first day of the races. It, however, came in second. The winning horse was owned by Israel Waters, and was known by the name of "King Herod."

⁸² Thomas Mifflin, major-general in the Revolution, was born in Philadelphia in 1744, and died in Lancaster, Pa., January 20, 1800. He was a graduate of the College of Philadelphia in 1750. Shortly after that he entered a counting house in which his brother was a partner. In 1765 he traveled in Europe, and on his return was taken into the firm. He had a popular manner, with a taste for public life, and in 1772 he was sent to the legislature. In 1774 he was a delegate to the Continental Congress. On the receipt of the news of the fight at Lexington in a town mass meeting he publicly advocated resolute action. When troops were enlisted, he assisted in organizing and drilling them, and was made major of the First Regiment. He was born and reared a Quaker, and, of course, this conduct severed his church connection. Washington, on assuming command of the Continental army, chose him as his first aide-de-camp, and in that rank he accompanied the General to Cambridge. In July, 1775, he was made quartermaster-general. After the evacuation of Boston, by the British, he was made, August 19, 1776, a brigadier-general, and assigned to the command of a part of the Pennsylvania troops. He was a man of prompt action, courage and perseverance. In the retreat from Long Island he commanded the rear guard. Later, in compliance to the resolutions of Congress, he resumed the duties of quartermaster-general. In November he was sent by Washington to Congress to represent the critical condition of the army. In January, 1777, he made a tour of the principal towns of Pennsylvania, and by his stirring oratory aroused a spirit among the people to enter the army. For a time he shared the feeling that Washington was too slow. In 1777 he was placed by Congress on the Board of War, but was retired in 1778. It was charged that the suffering at Valley Forge was aggravated by the inefficiency of the Quartermaster's Department, but this lacked proof. After the achievement of independence he entered Congress, and was president of that body when Washington resigned his commission, and replied to him in appropriate and eloquent terms. In 1787 he was a member of the convention that drafted the Constitution of the United States. In 1789 he was elected a member of the supreme executive council of Pennsylvania, and succeeded to its presidency. When the constitution of Pennsylvania was adopted, he was elected her first governor under it.

not then required for hospital purposes, and which was rented and cultivated as a truck garden, is left to speculation.

⁸⁵William Hamilton, esq., of Philadelphia, was the son of the second Andrew Hamilton, and inherited from him "The Woodlands," on the Schuylkill, now West Philadelphia. He was a man of large wealth in well-located real estate near the cities of Lancaster and Philadelphia. He was a man of cultivated tastes, fond of botany, and took pleasure in ornamental gardening. He built himself an elegant residence shortly before the Revolution. He was one of the earliest patrons of art in the country, and collected many fine pictures. During the progress of the Revolution he was suspected of having become inimical to the cause of the colonies, and was arrested and tried, but acquitted. He died at "The Woodlands" in 1824. His highly cultivated and beautiful farm greatly interested Washington. He never married.

⁸⁶The "State House," now more widely known as "Independence Hall," is owned by the corporation of the city of Philadelphia, and is one of the most revered Colonial landmarks in our country. It was designed on a liberal scale, its erection begun in 1729, and completed in 1735. When this enterprise was projected only about half the square—the Chestnut street front had been secured to the province, but in 1750 the remainder of the square fronting on Walnut street was bought. The building was at first used for the various offices of the Government, but from 1747 it was used also for the meetings of the State assembly, until the capital of Pennsylvania was established at Harrisburg (1812). In 1816 the legislature of Pennsylvania authorized the sale of the State House and the square of ground to the city corporation of Philadelphia for public purposes for $70,000. It is inferred that, even prior to this, either the city, or her influential citizens, had some voice in the control and use to which the building might at times be put, from the fact that public dinners had been given in it by the city to the members of this Congress. But it had also been used by the Provincial Government to give banquets in on special occasions, prior to this instance. In 1746 Governor Thomas gave a dinner in it to 200 persons on the occasion of the news of the Pretender's defeat. In 1752 Governor Hamilton gave a ball in the State House and a supper in the long gallery. Governor Morris, in 1754, had at the State House a ball in the evening and a supper in the long gallery. So that there were many precedents for this courtesy to the members of Congress.

⁸⁶John Dickinson, statesman, was born in Maryland November 13, 1732, and died in Wilmington, Del., February 14, 1808. He was the son of Samuel Dickinson, who removed from Maryland to Delaware and became a chief justice of Kent County in that State, dying there in 1760, aged 71. John, after receiving a classical education at the Friends Academy, studied law with John Molland, esq., in Philadelphia, and then for three years at the Temple, in London; returning to Philadelphia, he was admitted to the bar and practiced with success. In 1764 he was sent to the Pennsylvania assembly, and in 1765 to the Colonial Congress which met in New York. This year he began to write against the Colonial policy of the British Government. His celebrated "Farmer's Letters" appeared in 1767. He was chosen a member of the first Continental Congress, which met in Philadelphia in 1774, while that body was in session. It was generally understood that he was the author of several of the State papers issued by that body, among which was the "Address to the inhabitants of Quebeck," the first petition to the King, etc., the "Address to the Armies," etc. In June, 1776, he opposed the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, because he doubted the wisdom of the measure until terms of confederation and foreign assistance were assured. When the proposition came up for a vote he absented himself; but he proved his patriotism by enlisting as a private in the Army and serving until the end of his enlistment. He again served in the Army in 1777, and in October of that year was commissioned brigadier-general. In 1779, he was elected to Congress from Delaware, and in May wrote an "Address to the States." In 1780, he was elected a member of the Delaware assembly, and the following year was chosen president of the State. From 1782 to 1785 he filled the same office in Pennsylvania, and in 1787 served as a member of the convention from Delaware that framed the Federal Constitution. In 1788 he wrote nine letters under the signature of "Fabius," in favor of the Constitution. In 1797 he wrote a series of fourteen letters to promote a friendly feeling toward France. In 1783 he was largely influential in founding and endowing Dickinson College, at Carlisle, Pa. He was a profound scholar in political science and a fervid and logical writer. In 1770 he married Mary Norris, of "Fair Hill," at which place he resided when Washington visited him. He was a liberal entertainer, and his society was courted by the leading patriots of his day.

⁸⁷ Mr. Hill resided 6 miles from the city of Philadelphia. His wife was the daughter of Mr. Samuel Meredith.

⁸⁸ John Ross, lawyer and merchant, of Philadelphia, Pa., was born in County Ross, Scotland, January 29, 1725, and died in Philadelphia, Pa., in March, 1800. In his youth he was placed in a commercial house in Perth, Scotland, where he acquired a good knowledge of business. He came to Philadelphia in 1763, well versed in the best methods for the transaction of an extensive commercial business, and became a shipping merchant and an importing agent. At the very beginning of the difficulties with the mother country he aligned himself with the friends of the Colonies, and was a signer of the non-importation agreement of 1765. He presided at a public meeting of the mechanics and traders, June 9, 1774, to consider a letter from the artificers of New York, and was on the committee to reply to the same. He was shortly after appointed master of musters in the Pennsylvania navy, September 16, 1775, which office he resigned, 1776, on account of his own private business. In May, 1776, he was employed by the Committee of Commerce in Congress to purchase clothes, arms and powder for the use of the Army. To engage proper agents in France and elsewhere he went to Europe in 1776, and at other times. In his zeal during the progress of the war, he pledged his credit for £20,000 more than was supplied to him by Congress, much to his embarrassment and subsequent loss. He was intelligent and cordial in his disposition, and on terms of intimacy with Franklin, Robert Morris and the leading political characters of the times. Washington's diary shows that he visited and dined at his country place, "The Grange," on several occasions.

⁸⁹ W. Fisher was mayor of Philadelphia, 1772-74

⁹⁰ John Mease, instead of James, it is surmised, was the gentleman with whom Gen. Washington dined. If this be the case, he was born in Straban, Ireland, in 1746. He was a zealous patriot and died in Philadelphia in 1826. He was brought to America in 1754, grew with Philadelphia, and became one of her most prominent shipping merchants. He was one of the organizers and original members of the first troop of city cavalry, one of the corps that crossed the Delaware under Gen. Washington, on December 25, 1779, and was one of five who were detailed to keep alive the camp fires on the line fronting the Army to cover any suspicion of a movement, while the Americans marched to attack the rear guard of the British, at Princeton. Mease served during the entire war, suffering thereby great loss of property. In 1780, when the Government was in great strait to support the Army, he subscribed £4,000. He was one of the admiralty surveyors of the Port of Philadelphia.

⁹¹ Benjamin Chew, jurist, was born at West River, Anne Arundel County, Md., November 29, 1722, and died in Philadelphia, January 20, 1810. He was the son of the Quaker judge, Samuel Chew, chief justice of New Castle, Del. Benjamin studied law with Andrew Hamilton, of Philadelphia, and later at the Temple, in London. Returning to Delaware, he was admitted to the bar in 1743, and in 1745 removed to the city of Philadelphia. In 1755 he was made receiver and served until 1772. He also held the office of register of wills and attorney-general, which he resigned in 1766. In 1774 he became chief justice of Pennsylvania. He was for several years speaker of the house of delegates for the three lower counties in Delaware. At the opening of the Revolution, both parties claimed him, but after the Declaration of Independence, he openly opposed the Patriots, and declining to give a parole in 1777, was sent to prison at Fredericksburg, Va. He, however, never appears to have given aid to the enemy. In 1790 he was appointed chief justice of the high court of errors and appeals of Pennsylvania, which he held until 1806, when the court was abolished. His stone house at Germantown became historic by its position on the field of the battle of Germantown in 1777. He was twice married; first to Mary, daughter of Samuel Galloway, of Maryland; second, to a daughter of Mr. Oswald. He entertained sumptuously in 1774 at his house in Third street, Philadelphia. The friendly intercourse between him and Washington was continued after the Revolution. Of this dinner at Mr. Chew's, John Adams in his diary has the following record: "Dined with Mr. Chew, chief justice of the provinces, with all the gentlemen from Virginia, Dr. Shippen, Mr. Tilghman, and many others. ⁹²Joseph Pemberton, a prominent member of the Society of Friends.

⁹³Thomas Willing, lawyer and merchant, was born in Philadelphia December 19, 1731, and died there January 19, 1821. He was well educated in England and studied law at the Temple, London. In 1764 he became the head of the firm of Willing & Norris, the largest and most enterprising then in our country. This partnership continued until 1793. During the Revolution the firm was the agents of Congress for supplying naval and military stores. In 1755 Mr. Willing served as a member of the common council of Philadelphia, and in 1759 was an alderman, but did not accept until October, 1760. He was made, in 1761, an associate justice of Common Pleas, Quarter Session, and Orphans' Court. In 1763 he was elected by the common council mayor of the city. From 1767 to 1774 he was associate justice of the Supreme Court. He was a leader in opposition to the "Stamp Act" and one of the committee to enforce the non-importation agreement of 1765. June, 1774, he presided at a mass meeting to take action on the question of a general congress of all the colonies and was on the committee of correspondence. July 15, 1774, he presided at a patriotic meeting at Carpenter's Hall. He was placed on the committee of safety, and in 1775 was elected to the assembly on the "Moderate Men's" ticket, and the following year was elected a member of Congress to succeed Joseph Galloway. In Congress he voted against Richard Henry Lee's preliminary resolutions and the Declaration of Independence, because he deemed this action on the part of Congress unnecessary and premature. When the British took possession of Philadelphia, he remained during their occupation and held conference with Lord Howe. Later and at a critical period, in 1780, he, with other wealthy citizens of Philadelphia, subscribed £260,000 towards the foundation of the Pennsylvania Bank and to procure the necessary supplies for the Army. His own subscription to the fund was £5,000. In 1781, on the formation of the Bank of North America, he was chosen its president and continued to serve until 1792. He was also the first president of the Bank of the United States, established in 1791. He was in all his business relations a man of clear perceptions, great energy and high integrity.

“Society of Friends.” In the progress of time, the first structure proving too small to accommodate the members, it was taken down, and in 1755 a larger one erected on the site. The new “meeting house” was often spoken of as “the great meeting house.” It is most probable that this was the one visited by Washington.

⁹⁶ St. Peter's Episcopal church is at the southwest corner of Third and Pine streets. It was originally a branch or offshoot from Christ church, Philadelphia, and for some years was under the charge of the Rev. Jacob Duché, the brilliant parson who, in a persuasive letter to Gen. Washington, endeavored to convince him that it was a christian and patriotic duty for him to abandon the American armed contest with Great Britain.

⁹⁶ William Shippen, sr., physician, was born in Philadelphia, October 1, 1712, and died at Germantown, November 4, 1801. He was the son of Joseph and grandson of Edward Shippen, who was mayor of Philadelphia in 1701. William, early in life, applied himself to the study of medicine, for the practice of which he developed a great aptitude, to the benefit of the community in which he lived and by which he acquired fame and fortune. While devoted to his profession, he was public spirited and closely identified himself with the founding of several of the worthy institutions which have made Philadelphia so notable among the cities of our country. His assistance and influence in the organization of the Pennsylvania Hospital was great, and he labored as an attending physician in it until 1787. He was on the first board of trustees of the College of Philadelphia, now the University of Pennsylvania. He was a member of the American Philosophical Society and one of its esteemed vice-presidents. He was for nearly 60 years a member of the Second Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, and for half this time a trustee of Princeton College. In 1778 he was chosen by the Pennsylvania assembly a member of the Continental Congress, and was reelected in 1779. Through the inheritance of a good constitution, his regular and correct habits, he maintained, to an advanced age, a remarkable degree of physical vigor.

⁹⁷ Pennsylvania Hospital was founded on the square between Eighth and Ninth and Spruce and Pine streets. The cornerstone of the main building was laid in 1755. It was practically the pioneer hospital of any great pretensions in the colonies, and had the effect of centering in Philadelphia the leading medical schools of the country for more than a century.

⁹⁹ Edward Shippen, esq., was the second son of Edward, an eminent jurist of Philadelphia. He was born in that city February 16, 1729, and died there April 16, 1806. He read law with Tench Francis, and going to England continued the study at the Middle Temple in London. Returning to America, he entered upon this practice in his native city. On the 22d of November, 1752, he was appointed judge of the Vice Admiralty Court, and in 1762 was made prothonotary of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, which office he held down to the Revolution. He became a member of the Provincial Council in 1770 and served continuously for five years. His sympathies in the Colonial struggle for independence was, doubtless, with the mother country. He was, however, a man of such high character that his parole was taken by the Government to give neither succor nor information to the enemy. He remained in Philadelphia during its occupancy by the British army, but his prudence was such as to avoid giving offense. His popularity may be inferred by the fact that in 1784 he was appointed presiding judge of the court of Common Pleas, and in September of the same year one of the judges of the High Court of Errors and Appeals, which office he retained until 1799. Besides these official positions he held others of a judicial character, discharging all trusts with ability, including that of Chief Justice of Pennsylvania. A fine portrait of Judge Shippen hangs in the "Corcoran Art Gallery" in Washington, D. C. His daughter Margaret married Benedict Arnold and died in London in 1804.

¹⁰¹ Balls and assemblies for dancing have been popular social institutions from remote times, and in our Colonial days were especially so in the larger towns and particularly at the seats of Government. It is presumed that the dance and the high social characters who patronize well-regulated balls will, everywhere and in all ages, give them a charm for cultivated society. It will be seen by this reference that the ball was opened in the afternoon, which was a usual practice before the Revolution.

¹⁰² Dr. Thomas Cadwallader was born in Philadelphia in 1707 and died in that city in 1779. He studied medicine with Dr. John Jones, then residing in Philadelphia. For the further pursuance of medical knowledge he went to London and Edinburgh for their college and hospital advantages. Returning to America, he began to practice in his native city. On the opening of the Pennsylvania Hospital, he was chosen one of the attending physicians, and was retained upon its staff until his death. He studied anatomy under the eminent Prof. Cheseldon, attained a high degree of proficiency in dissection, and made some demonstrations on the subject for the elder Dr. Shippen, and for the benefit of other physicians who had not had the advantages that the schools of Europe afforded. He was an influential member of the American Philosophical Society and of the College of Philadelphia. As early as 1745 he published an "Essay on the Iliac Passion," and contributed to the press other articles of value on medical subjects. He was gentle in his manners, attentive to his patients, enjoyed to an exceptional degree the confidence and respect of the community, and was noted for benevolence and his cheerful disposition. In 1765 he was appointed to the Provincial Council, and held numerous positions of honor and trust.

Oct^r. 1st. At y^e Congress till 3 ocl: Din'd with Mr. Hamilton¹⁰³ at Bush Hill.

2. Went to Christ Church¹⁰⁴ & dined at y^e New Tavern.

¹⁰³ James Hamilton, esqr., of "Bush Hill," Philadelphia, was the son of Andrew Hamilton, the eminent lawyer who won fame with the friends of liberty and of free speech in America, by the defense of John Peter Zenger, the printer, in New York in 1735. James was born about 1710, it is supposed, in Accomac County, Va., and died in the city of New York, August 14, 1783. He was a man of good habits, well educated, and attentive to business. He was elected to the provincial assembly in 1754, and re-elected for five successive terms. On the retirement of his father as prothonotary of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, he was appointed to that office. In 1765 he was elected mayor of Philadelphia, and on retiring from that position, set the example, which was followed, that instead of giving a banquet, as had been the custom of his predecessors, he contributed £150 to a fund for erecting needed public buildings. This precedent was followed by his successors for many years. At the death of his father, he came into the possession of a very handsome estate which included "Bush Hill," where he resided. In 1746 he became a member of the Provincial Council, and in 1748, while in London, was commissioned the first native lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania, by the sons of William Penn. He resigned this office in 1754, to the regret of the leading citizens, but was induced in 1759 to resume the office, which he filled acceptably until 1763, when he retired. Again on the retirement of John Penn, he administered the government as provost of the council, until the arrival of Richard Penn in 1771. In 1773, he was for a brief period at the head of the Government. He had been so much in the service of the Crown, that it is not strange he should have found it difficult to adopt the extreme views of the Colonies and be prepared to take up arms against the mother country. Although prudent in his conduct, in 1777 he was arrested, but paroled. He resided at Northampton during the occupation of Philadelphia by the British army. He has left a good record in his efforts to found some of the benevolent institutions of Philadelphia. He was an active and useful member of the American Philosophical Society, and of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge.

¹⁰⁴ Christ Church was the earliest Episcopal organization formed in Philadelphia. The society erected, in 1695, a small wooden building on Second street, between Market and Arch streets. The structure was enlarged at different times, and was finally, about 1755, entirely rebuilt. The service Washington attended was in the handsome new structure. John Adams, in his diary under this date, says: "Went to Christ Church and heard Mr. Combe upon 'Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.'" "

¹⁰⁵ Joseph Reed, esq., was born at Trenton, N. J., August 27, 1741, and died in Philadelphia, March 5, 1785. He was a graduate of Princeton College in 1757, after which he studied law with Robert Stockton, and was admitted to the bar in 1763. He then went to Europe and spent two years at the Middle Temple in London. Returning, he began the practice of his profession at Trenton, and in 1767 was appointed deputy secretary of New Jersey. In 1770 he returned to England and there married Esther, daughter of Dennis De Berdt, the agent of Massachusetts in Great Britain. On his return to America, he settled in Philadelphia, and there pursued the practice of law with success. In all the early movements in the Colonies, which led up to the armed collision between them and Great Britain, he was an active and intelligent friend of America. In 1774 he was appointed a member of the committee of correspondence, and in January, 1775, was chosen president of the Second Provincial Congress. On the formation of the Pennsylvania associated militia, after the news of the battle of Lexington, he was chosen lieutenant-colonel of a regiment. When Washington was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the American forces, he accepted the position of military secretary to him, and, leaving his practice, he accompanied the general to Boston. In October, 1775, with the approval of Washington, he returned to Philadelphia, and in January, 1776, was chosen a member of the Assembly, and was acting chairman of the committee of safety. On June 5, he was appointed Adjutant-General of the American Army with the rank of colonel, and was active in the campaign that terminated with the battle of Long Island. In 1777, on the recommendation of Washington, he was appointed a brigadier-general and tendered the command of all the Continental cavalry, which he declined. March 20, 1777, he was appointed chief justice of Pennsylvania, which he also declined and remained attached to General Washington's headquarters as a volunteer aid, without rank or pay, serving with credit at Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth. In this year he was elected to the Continental Congress. In 1778 he was chosen president of the supreme executive council of Pennsylvania, which office he held for three years. He exposed an attempt of the British to bribe him with a large sum of money.

department and his devotion to professional duty soon attracted attention and won him an admiring clientage. He was not only humane but full of enterprise, and materially assisted in founding the college of Philadelphia. He gave the first course of clinical lectures to medical students in the Pennsylvania Hospital. As early as 1743, he was a member of a literary society composed of such men as Dr. B. Franklin, Bertram, Godfrey Coleman, and others of scientific and literary tastes. He was for many years an officer of the American Philosophical Society, and delivered the annual address in 1782. He was the author of a number of papers on medical and philosophical subjects, printed in the transactions of that Society. He was widely known as a learned physician, and very skillful surgeon, and was devoted to the interests of the Pennsylvania Hospital.

¹⁰⁷ Samuel Meredith was born in Philadelphia, 1740, and died on his estate, in Luzerne County, Pa., March 10, 1817. The Meredith family were from Wales. Their admiration for Washington began with the father of Samuel, Rees Meredith, a successful merchant of Philadelphia, who met Washington by accident in a public house, when he was quite a young man, and was so pleased with his dignified demeanor, patriotic sentiments, and wide intelligence, that he invited him to dine with him on fresh venison. The acquaintance thus begun proved lasting, and extended from father to sons. Samuel had served as a member of the legislature before the Revolution. In 1775 he entered the military service as major of the 3rd Pennsylvania Battalion, was in numerous engagements, and soon promoted for gallant services to be a brigadier-general. In an emergency during the war he and his brother-in-law, George Clymer, the signer, each gave £10,000 in silver to carry on the war. Gen. Meredith was exiled from Philadelphia during its occupancy by the British. He was a member of the old Congress 1787-'88, and was the first Treasurer of the United States, from 1787 to 1801, when he resigned. To aid the new Government, he advanced for it $20,000, and subsequently $120,000, which, it is stated, has never been repaid. Washington's diaries show that he dined with Mr. Meredith in Philadelphia in 1773, and again in 1774, and on other occasions.

¹⁰⁹ John Cadwallader was born in Philadelphia, January 10, 1742, and died in Shrewsbury, Pa., February 11, 1786. He was the son of the eminent physician, Thomas Cadwallader, of Philadelphia. John was an early and zealous advocate of the rights of the Colonies in the controversy with the mother country. He was one of the original members of the Committee of Safety, and captain of a military company prior to the Revolution, which, in a bantering way, was called the "Silk Stocking Company," but the high character of the men composing it may be inferred from the fact that most of the members, in the progress of the military organization of the troops of the State, served as commissioned officers. On the organization of the city forces, he was placed in command of that battalion, and shortly afterward made brigadier-general and placed in command of the Pennsylvania militia. Gen. Cadwallader cooperated very efficiently with Washington in the capture of the Hessians at Trenton, December 26, 1776, and was present as a volunteer at the battles of Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth. In the fall of 1777, at the request of Gen. Washington, he assisted in organizing the militia of the Eastern Shore of Maryland. In 1778 the combination known as the "Conway Cabal" becoming aggressive against Washington, Gen. Cadwallader denounced and challenged the most outspoken of the plotters, Thomas Conway. They met, and Conway was wounded, but recovered. As Gen. Cadwallader's service was in the Pennsylvania militia, and not in the regular Continental service, he was therefore only a volunteer aid to Washington when the Pennsylvania militia were not in the field, although he declined the appointment of brigadier-general from Congress in 1777. After the independence of the States was recognized, he removed to Maryland and served at different times in the legislature of that State, from Kent County. His daughter, Fanny, married David Montague, afterward Lord Erskine.

¹¹¹ Catholic Church, mentioned here as the "Romish Church," was most likely St. Mary's on Fourth street, above Spruce, and was built about 1763. It served for a time as the bishop's church or cathedral, under the administration of the first Bishop of Philadelphia, the Right Rev. Michael Egan. John Adams in his diary under this date says, "Went in the afternoon to the Romish Chapel, and heard a good discourse on the duty of parents to their children, founded on justice and charity. The scenery and the music are so calculated to take in mankind, that I wonder the reformation ever succeeded. The paintings, the bells, the candles, the gold and silver, and the Saviour on the Cross over the altar, at full length, and all His wounds bleeding. The chanting is exquisitely soft and sweet."

¹¹² Bevan's. Possibly a public house.

¹¹³ John Morgan, M. D., was born in Philadelphia, 1735, and died in the same city, October 15, 1789. He was the son of Evan Morgan, a native of Wales, who settled in Philadelphia and became a prosperous merchant. John received a classical education at the Rev. Mr. Finley's academy and at the College of Philadelphia from which he graduated in 1757. As was then the custom, he was apprenticed to the study of medicine, with Dr. John Redman of Philadelphia. On the conclusion of his office studies, he entered the military service for a brief period, serving with the Pennsylvania troops, then engaged in the French and Indian war. In 1760 he went to Europe to study further and to prosecute, in the large hospitals and colleges, a more systematic course of medicine than America afforded. In Paris

he met and renewed a pleasant acquaintance with Dr. Benjamin Franklin, who introduced him to many eminent and scientific gentlemen in England and on the Continent. In 1763, he received the degree of M. D. from the University of Edinburgh. The following year was spent in the study of anatomy and physiology. He wrote a paper on "The art of making anatomical preparations by corrosions," and was elected a member of the Royal Academy. After visiting Italy and Holland, he returned to London for further study, and became a licentiate of "The College of Physicians and Surgeons." In 1765 he returned to Philadelphia thoroughly equipped for the practice of his profession. Shortly afterward he was largely instrumental in founding the medical department of the College of Philadelphia, now the University of Pennsylvania, in which he was appointed the professor of the theory and practice of medicine. In 1775 he was appointed, by Congress, director-general of the military hospitals and physician in chief of the American Army, and immediately joined Gen. Washington, at Boston. The medical department, at this time, existed chiefly in name. He exerted himself with intelligence and energy to make it efficient and systematic in the conduct of the duties assigned to it with measurable success when all the difficulties are considered. Jealousies were excited and rivalries developed so that Congress, taking sides January 9, 1777, without inquiry or report to them of any facts in the case, dismissed him, and appointed a successor. Later, upon repeated petitions, his administration of the hospital department was inquired into, and he was acquitted of all blame. He continued his services in the Pennsylvania Hospital until 1783. Dr. Morgan was a member of the Royal Society of London, a member of the Belles-letters Society of Rome, the American Philosophical Society, and many others. His medical papers and writings show that he was not only a ripe scholar, but also thoroughly imbued with the spirit of scientific investigation.

¹¹⁴ Joseph Wharton was born in Philadelphia, March 21, 1733, and died there December 25, 1816. He was the son of Joseph Wharton, merchant, who was also born in Philadelphia, August 4, 1707, and died in that city July, 1776. Joseph, the second, went to England in 1775, and while there wrote a number of letters on the attitude of Great Britain to the Colonies, which were published and, at the time, attracted much attention; but afterwards for safety he had to leave London for France. While in England he was much in the company of the artist, Benjamin West. It was mainly through his suggestion and influence that West's painting of "Christ Healing the Sick" was given to the Pennsylvania Hospital. The transfer of this picture was only definitely accomplished in 1817.

¹¹⁵ John Penn, lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania in 1774, was the son of Richard and the grandson of William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania. He was born in London, July 14, 1729, and died on his estate in Bucks County, Pa., February, 1795. He was well educated when he came to Pennsylvania in 1753, and was at once admitted as a member of the Provincial council with the right to succeed to the presidency when a vacancy occurred. In 1754 he was sent as one of the commissioners of the colony to the Congress which met in Albany. In 1763 he became lieutenant-governor on the death of his father. In 1771 he inherited one-third of the Province, his uncle, Thomas, owning the remainder, by whose deputation and in his own right, he became governor of the Province in 1773. He was opposed on principle, to taxation without representation. At the outset of the Revolution, the patriots organized an assembly, in the nature of a committee of safety, without consulting the governor. Governor Penn saw it was no use to antagonize the sentiment and while protesting, remained inactive. Most of the great landed estate of the Penns was confiscated, although the governor never took up arms against the Colonies. There was said to have been a very cordial friendship existing between Washington and Governor Penn, from the period of the French and Indian war, which was never entirely broken off.

¹¹⁹ Benjamin Rush, M. D., signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born in Bybury Township, Philadelphia County, Pa., December 24, 1745, and died in Philadelphia, April 19, 1813. His grandfather, John Rush, commanded a troop of horse in Cromwell's army, and in 1683 emigrated to Pennsylvania. When Benjamin was but 6 years old, his father died. His earliest instructor was his uncle, Rev. Samuel Finley. Later he was sent to Princeton College, where he graduated in 1760. He read medicine with Dr. John Redman, and then went to Europe and graduated in that study at the University of Edinburgh, 1768. He also studied at the hospitals in London and Paris. Here he had the wise counsel of Dr. B. Franklin. In 1769 he returned to Philadelphia, and shortly after was elected professor of chemistry in the College of Philadelphia. In 1771 he published papers on slavery, temperance and health, and in 1774 delivered an oration before the Philosophical Society on the natural history of medicine among the Indians. He early identified himself in the pre-revolutionary movements in advocacy of colonial rights. As a member of the Pennsylvania provincial congress, and chairman of a committee, he reported that it was expedient that Congress declare independence. He was surgeon of the Pennsylvania navy from September to July, 1776, when he was elected member of Congress, which gave him the opportunity to sign the Declaration of Independence. In 1776 he married Julia, daughter of Richard Stockton, and in the same year was appointed Surgeon-General of the Middle Department of the Continental Army, becoming Physician-General in 1777. He was a man of much mental activity, well informed, and had great physical powers for prolonged labor. After the battles of Brandywine, Germantown, Trenton and Princeton, he underwent for some days great fatigue. In 1778 he resigned on account of wrongs that had been done the soldiers in regard to hospital stores; and a coolness, about this time, existed between him and Gen. Washington. He refused compensation for his services while in the army and resumed private practice. For twenty-nine years he was surgeon to the Pennsylvania Hospital, and port physician in Philadelphia in 1790-'93. He was influential in founding Dickinson College and the Philadelphia Dispensary. He was a member of the convention that ratified the Constitution of the United States, and also of the convention that drafted the constitution of the State of Pennsylvania. He performed a prodigious amount of labor during the epidemic of yellow fever in Philadelphia in 1793. His practice was bold and heroic. From 1790 to his death he was treasurer of the United States Mint. He was an influential and valued member of nearly all the scientific societies of his time, and wrote much and well on every subject that engaged his attention. In medical literature he is spoken of as the Sydenham of America.

¹²⁰This dinner given to the delegates to the Continental Congress by the assembly of Pennsylvania, was a polite recognition of the character of the men composing that body, as well as a respectful consideration for the sister provinces from which they came. The courtesy of the affair, considering the fact that the Congress was unauthorized by the ministers of Great Britain or the crown officers residing in America, all of whom would have prevented it if they could, was a high compliment, emphasized by the further fact that it was given under the patronage of the newly elected assembly of Pennsylvania, which was largely made up of "Friends," who were on principle opposed to the exercise of armed force. An analysis of the list of members shows that six delegates to the Continental Congress were also members elect of the assembly; and also that in this assembly were two who were afterwards signers of the Declaration of Independence. If we include the counties on the Delaware there were then three more who were members of the Continental Congress, and were later signers of the Declaration of Independence. Although there were some non-combatants, there were also others who were distinguished in arms and statesmanship, like John Dickinson, who was a tower of strength to the patriot cause. Such were the hosts and committee of reception in this, the first state dinner of the Revolution. From John Adams' diary we quote the following in relation to the dinner of one hundred or more guests. During the evening he says:

"A sentiment was given, 'May the sword of the parent never be stained with the blood of her children.' Two or three broad brims over against me at the table; one of them said, 'that is not a toast but a prayer; come, let us join in it.' And they took their glasses accordingly."

The editor wishes to acknowledge the obligation he is under to Dr. W. H. Egle, M. D., of Harrisburg, Pa., for the list of members of the newly elected assembly, and the particulars relating to this entertainment from the original minutes of the assembly of Pennsylvania, under date of October 14, 1774.

"Upon motion by Mr. Ross,

"Resolved, unanimously, that John Dickinson, esq., be, and is hereby added to the Committee of Deputies appointed by the late Assembly of this province to attend the General Congress now sitting in the City of Philadelphia on American Grievances.

"Resolved, That this House shall provide an entertainment, to be given on Thursday next, to the deputies from the several Colonies attending public business in this city.

"Ordered, That Mr. Gray, Mr. Hillegas, Mr. Mifflin, Mr. Rodman, Mr. Pearson, Mr. Wayne, and Mr. Ross, with the Speaker, be a Committee to provide and superintend the said entertainment, and that Mr. Speaker do invite the gentlemen of the Congress accordingly."

Upon motion on Friday, October 21, the following resolutions were passed:

"Ordered, That Mr. Gray, Mr. Hillegas, Mr. Mifflin, Mr. Rodman, Mr. Pearson, Mr. Wayne, and Mr. Ross, or any four of them, with the Speaker, be a committee to settle accounts of the entertainment given yesterday, and of the expenses attending the sitting of the Congress, and that the said committee do draw orders, for discharging the same, on Samuel Preston Moore, esq., to be paid out of the late interest money in his hands."

¹²¹ Daniel Roberdeau was born in the island of St. Christopher, West Indies, in 1727, and died in Winchester, Va., January 5, 1795. He was the son of Isaac Roberdeau, a French Huguenot, and was brought by his mother's family, who were Scotch, to Philadelphia. From his youth he was trained to merchandising and the counting house. He was well educated, active, intelligent and attentive to business. He was as early as 1752 a Mason and was a member of the Pennsylvania assembly in 1756, serving until 1760. In 1765 he was an elder in the Presbyterian church. Early in the movement of the Revolution, he identified himself with the friends of the colonies, and joining the Pennsylvania Associators was elected, in 1775, colonel of the Second Battalion, and made president of the board of government of the association. He presided at a public meeting at the State house May 20, 1776, which greatly influenced sentiment in favor of the Declaration of Independence. While in command of his battalion, he and his partner Col. John Bayard, fitted out two ships as privateers, one of which took a valuable prize with $22,000 in silver which he placed at the disposal of Congress. July 4, 1776, he was chosen a member of the council of safety, the same year was elected brigadier-general of the Pennsylvania troops, and assisted Washington in New Jersey. In February, 1777, he was elected to the Continental Congress and served until 1779. In 1778, in hope of supplying lead to aid the army, he undertook to start the smelting of lead from the ore at a disused mine in Bedford County, Pa., where he established a fort and smelting works. The project did not succeed, however.

In May, 1779, he presided at a public meeting in Philadelphia, to expose and correct the abuses of depreciating the currency. After the Revolu-

¹²² Benedict Calvert, esq.: Mount Airy, the seat of the Calvert family in Maryland, is in Prince George County, situated about 15 miles from the city of Washington and 6 from Upper Marlboro. The land was bought from Ignatius Digges. This estate was inherited by Benedict from his father, Charles Calvert, sixth Lord Baltimore, then it descended to his eldest son, Edward Henry, who married Elizabeth Briscoe; George, a second son, married an heiress, a Miss Rosalie Steel, of Maryland, and established his house near Bladensburg, the beautiful estate known as "Riversdale," which is often erroneously referred to by writers as the old family estate of the Calverts. Benedict died at Mount Airy in 1788, had three daughters, Eleanor, Elizabeth and Ariana. Eleanor married John Parke Custis, the son of Mrs. Martha Washington by her first husband; and the ward of Gen. Geo. Washington; she bore him four children. Her husband died at Eltham, of camp fever contracted at Yorktown, in 1781. Elizabeth married Charles Stuart, esq., of "Dodon," near Annapolis, Md. The third daughter never married.

IV.—LOTTERIES IN AMERICAN HISTORY.

BY A. R. SPOFFORD, LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS.

LOTTERIES IN AMERICAN HISTORY.

By A. R. SPOFFORD, Librarian of Congress.

In attempting to sketch an outline of the history of the lottery system in the United States, I propose no other aim than to rescue from the oblivion of obsolete statutes and forgotten journals some facts which may prove of historical interest. If, perchance, I am reminded that it is no part of the functions of an historical association to enter upon the domain of ethics, it is to be remembered that the history of morals has long been recognized as one of the most interesting and profitable of historical investigations. It is not my purpose, however, to treat of the morality of lotteries, but to present, so far as possible in the short time allotted, a brief of their history. If the manners and customs of a people are of perennial interest to their posterity, this leaf out of the social history of America may perhaps be found not wholly unworthy of notice.

The genesis of the English settlement of Virginia presents the first record found of the lottery in connection with our own country. In the third charter of King James to the Virginia Company of London, in 1612, full power and license is granted, with much legal tautology, to that company "to set forth, erect, and publish one or more lottery or lotteries, to have continuance for the space of one whole year next after the opening of the same." These lotteries were to be opened in London or in any towns within the realm of England, with such prizes, agents, etc., as the Company found convenient, and all the promoters were to be put under oath for their true dealing, that none adventuring in the lottery might be defrauded of their moneys, "or evil and indirectly dealt withal in their said adventures."

The lotteries thus sanctioned were largely subscribed to, the Grocers' Company of London and other guilds taking shares, and we even find two London churches adventuring £6 in Virginia lottery tickets. The first lottery was drawn in both June and July, 1612, and a second was drawn November 17, 1615, all moneys of the adventurers being paid in to Sir Thomas Smith, treasurer, "to inable us to make good supplies to the colonie in Virginia." The drawings were often postponed to enable the numbers of the lottery to be filled up. The amount realized from them was about £29,000, but upon the House of Commons protesting against the Virginia Company's lotteries as an illegal raising of money without Parliamentary sanction, they were terminated in 1621, by an order in council.

The earliest notice of an American lottery I have found (although it was not the first) was in Andrew Bradford's American Weekly Mercury, Philadelphia, February 23, 1720. It advertises a "new brick house, corner of Third and Arch," for which 350 tickets, at 20 shillings each, were to be drawn. "John Read and Henry Frogley have given £500 bond to the mayor to see a fair drawing." Soon after, lotteries appear to have become common, and their attendant evils led to the passage of an act as early as 1729, by the legislature, forbidding lotteries under a penalty of £100.

This, however, went no further than to prohibit unauthorized lotteries, for those permitted by special legislative grant continued to flourish.

As early as 1735 we find the proprietors of Pennsylvania proposing a new method of selling lands in the province by lottery. This scheme was to sell 100,000 acres of land at £15 10s. per 100 acres, making the sum of £15,500, and that the same be purchased by the sale of 7,750 tickets at £2 each, also amounting to £15,500. The subscription not having filled up, this lottery was never drawn, but the tickets actually sold were recognized as titles to lands.

Many cases are found in the early history of Philadelphia—then our largest city—of lotteries organized for public objects. For many years after this practice began to prevail it was not regarded at all as a kind of gambling; the most reputable citizens were engaged in these lotteries, either as selected managers or as liberal subscribers. It was looked upon as a kind of voluntary tax for paving streets, erecting wharves, buildings, etc., with a contingent profitable return for such subscribers as held the lucky numbers. All the subscribers and managers contributed their influence to secure the sale of all the tickets, so as to insure the largest return for the object to which the funds remaining above the prizes drawn were pledged.

It is curious to find the early defense of the colonies against foreign invasion helped on by the aid of the lottery. In 1748 leading citizens of Philadelphia (Benj. Franklin, Edward Shippen and others), having defeated the Quaker policy of non-resistance, organized a lottery to raise £3,000 needed for the erection of a battery on the Delaware. There were 2,842 prizes held out to subscribers, and 7,158 blanks. Tickets were put at 40s, and the common council took 2,000 tickets to aid the cause of defending the city against attack, some of which drew prizes. The scheme was successful in raising the needed money, and a fine battery of cannon was soon planted below the city on the bank of the Delaware.

In 1748 a lottery was organized at Philadelphia to raise 9,375 "pieces of eight"¹ for public use.

In 1756 another lottery was formed to raise the same amount for a college and academy in Philadelphia.

In Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette of February 22, 1759 is a "scheme of a lottery for raising 1,200 pieces of eight for finishing the English church in the city of New Brunswick." The advertisement avers that this drawing is "solely for the promotion and honor of religion," and is in "imitation of many of their pious neighbors in this and adjacent provinces."

By the year 1761 lotteries had become so common in Pennsylvania, that the law forbidding them may be said to have proven a dead letter. Almost the whole community speculated in tickets, and the objects for which the numerous schemes were developed, were extremely various. Among those for education was a lottery to raise £1,125 for the use of a public English and High Dutch school; and to raise £6,000 for New Jersey College. Other schemes provided for paving the streets of Philadelphia, for bridging Conestoga and Octorara Creeks; for a lighthouse at Cape Henlopen; for a company of rangers, and for £500 for the use of the colony of New Jersey. Strange as it may appear in modern eyes, the larger number of lotteries at this period were for ecclesiastical objects. Thus we read of lotteries to gather in £1,350 for St. James' Church, Lancaster;

¹The "piece of eight" was equivalent to one dollar.

£500 to enlarge Trinity Church, Oxford; £450 for the Presbyterian Church, Middletown; 3,000 pieces of eight to finish the Episcopal Church in Third street; £3,000 for a new Presbyterian Church in Baltimore, and 3,000 pieces of eight to finish the steeple of the Second Presbyterian Church, Third and Arch streets.¹

A much advertised scheme for a lottery to raise funds for public baths and pleasure grounds brought out organized opposition from the clergy and others, who united in a protest to the governor against it. It was said that this kind of gambling was associated with much dissipation and immorality. The anti-lottery efforts had the effect to pass a more stringent law through the legislature in 1761, declaring all lotteries, public or private, to be common nuisances, and opposed to the good of the province. A penalty of £500 for erecting a lottery, with £25 fine for advertising or selling tickets, was imposed. The rights of existing lotteries were reserved, and £3,000 was raised for the streets, so that the first public paving ever done in that city was paid for out of the avails of a lottery.

John Leacock, in 1773, set up a lottery for the encouragement of the grape-growing industry. The glass works, at Kensington, to raise money for carrying on their business, instituted a lottery the same year.

In 1784, in pursuance of petitions from Philadelphia, the legislature passed an act for a State lottery, to raise $42,000 to improve the roads leading into the city, which was successful in attaining the object.

In 1796 occurred a warm struggle in the Pennsylvania legislature over lottery bills. The senate passed a bill to authorize a drawing to raise funds for Dickinson College. The house inserted amendments to raise by lottery $15,000 for piers at Chester on the Delaware, $16,000 to finish a town hall and market in Philadelphia, and $8,000 for a building and landings in Southwark. The senate refused to concur in any of these, and the whole bill failed.

In 1811 the Union Canal Company was chartered by the State to open water communication with the western counties, with power to supply Philadelphia with water, and to raise for these purposes the sum of $340,000 by a lottery. Under these powers an annual drawing was held, and the privilege being continued and enlarged by a new act in 1821, the lottery schemes advertised and drawn from 1812 to 1831, inclusive (or twenty years), aggregated the enormous sum of $21,248,891.¹ Yet out of this great aggregate the Union Canal Company realized less than the $340,000 originally granted.

The wide-spread evils growing out of the extension of the lottery system in Pennsylvania, by the act of 1821, led to the formation, in 1834, of the "Pennsylvania Society for the Suppression of Lotteries." In an address to the people, the society declared that the act of the legislature prohibiting all lotteries after December 31, 1833, was systematically violated.

Lottery offices for sale of tickets of Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia lotteries were scattered through Philadelphia. The corrupting tendency of lotteries was dwelt upon, and it was declared that all claims of public benefit conferred, where the proceeds of lotteries were devoted to such objects, were deceptive and illusory.

The rapid growth in Pennsylvania of the lottery system is shown in the fact that in 1809 only three offices for the sale of lottery tickets existed in Philadelphia; in 1827, the number was computed at 60; in 1831, they amounted to 177, and in 1833 to more than 200. In the single year 1832, tickets in 420 lottery schemes were sold, whose prices amounted to $53,136,930; but these schemes represented all parts of the Union having organized lotteries. These sales were all expressly prohibited by law, yet in the neglect of official duty by its officers, and in the careless state of public opinion, the laws were constantly violated, until they became virtually dead letters. These foreign lotteries, authorized in the respective States, were a virtual tax upon Pennsylvanians, for the benefit of internal improvements outside the State, and of the companies promoting the lotteries. The sales of tickets were reported as amounting to $1,500,000 a year, in Philadelphia alone, the greater part of which was absolute loss. The drawings were weekly or fortnightly, and tickets were so subdivided that 12½ cents was sufficient to purchase a chance. The poor, and especially the servant class, were, to a very wide extent, the patrons of the lotteries. Hand bills were sown broadcast, street placards in gigantic figures, appealing to the imagination of the credulous, were exhibited, and the emissaries of the lottery office even importuned passers-by in the public streets.

It was not without many attempts to resist the repeal of the anti-lottery laws, and to secure renewal of the privileges, that Pennsylvania succeeded in putting the ban of public reprobation upon such schemes. In 1843, according to the Philadelphia North American, upwards of $3,000 was raised for the purpose of "effecting a law" to legalize lotteries, the proposed object being "to enable the State to liquidate its debt."

In Connecticut, in 1750, a lottery was authorized to raise a fund for building a new edifice for Yale College.

As early as 1744 the Massachusetts province granted authority to raise by lottery £7,500 to meet the expenses of government. In 1749 Swansea, Mass., was empowered to raise funds by lottery to repair Miles' bridge, and Newbury, the next year, was granted leave to raise £12,000 for a bridge over the Merrimac. In 1757 the manufacture of glass in Braintree was aided by a lottery, sanctioned by the general court. Harvard College, in 1772, its funds running low, received special permission for a lottery scheme to erect Stoughton Hall, which privilege was renewed in 1794. This lottery prolonged its drawings for over ten years, producing $18,400 net. The college invested $2,000 in tickets, and itself drew the principal prize of $10,000 on ticket numbered 18,547.

In 1806 another lottery grant in favor of Harvard College produced $29,000 to aid in the building of Holworthy Hall, and to repair Massachusetts Hall. The president and fellows appointed agents, and advertised the scheme of the lottery in the journals of the day.

During the Revolutionary war leave was granted to raise money by lottery for the officers and soldiers of Massachusetts in the field.

In the letters of Samuel Sewall is one, October 12, 1719, in which he says: "I dined with the court last Friday, when many expressed their dislike of the lotteries practiced of late, as differing little from gaming for money, and as being really pernicious to trade. Taking notice of no less than four lotteries in the inclosed News-Letter, I would propound it to consideration, whether it will not be expedient to put some stop to the progress of it?"¹

In 1758 we find the people of Charlestown in town meeting assembled voting to ask the general court for authority to organize a lottery to raise funds for paving Main street. This petition was granted, and Charlestown lottery, No. 1, was advertised. The scheme embraced an issue of 6,000 tickets at $2 each; the prizes numbered 1,255, to return $10,800 to those buying tickets, and leave $1,200 to pay for the street paving.

In 1779 there was another lottery authorized for $60,000, to repair the streets of Charlestown. The same year the repairs of Long wharf were provided for by a $250,000 lottery.

In 1780 no less a sum than $200,000 was authorized to be raised by lottery to mend the roads in the counties of Berkshire and Hampshire.

In 1812 a lottery was authorized to raise $16,000 to repair the beach at Plymouth. This lottery issued schemes in the space of nine years to the prodigious amount of $886,439; yet the entire sum realized to the town of Plymouth was only $9,876.

A lottery to buy for Harvard College Joseph Pope's orrery (or planetarium) was authorized in 1788 by special act. The reason assigned in the preamble of the act was "to encourage the efforts of ingenuity and the advancement of science and the public good." Three thousand tickets, at $2 each, were offered, with one capital prize of $1,000, one of $300, one of $200, two of $100, three of $50, fifteen of $20, and six hundred and seventy-three of $3 each. The drawing took place at the state house March 10 to 14, 1789. The scheme was successful, and after paying premiums of about $2,700 and $2,250 to Mr. Pope for his orrery, a balance of some $400 above expenses was paid into Harvard College treasury.

Among public buildings erected by the aid of lotteries in America, Faneuil Hall in Boston possesses most historical interest. After the burning of the first edifice in 1761, at a time of much financial depression, the selectmen of Boston were instructed by a town meeting to petition the general court to empower some suitable person to raise by way of lottery such a sum of money as would be sufficient for the rebuilding of Faneuil Hall. The legislature granted the petition, and the profits of the lottery, which had several drawings, extending to 1764, were applied to building the second Faneuil Hall, which held the town meetings of the Revolution, and still stands as a place of public assembly.

The year 1790 was marked by a singularly wide development of the lottery passion. In Massachusetts and Pennsylvania the mania was especially rife. Rev. Jeremy Belknap wrote from Boston to Ebenezer Hazard: "You could scarcely imagine what a rage we have here for lotteries. Eight thousand tickets sold in four days in the Marblehead lottery. I wonder Secretary Hamilton does not hit upon a lottery. It would be more popular than laying a duty on salt, which, if he does, will greatly injure our fisheries."¹ Hazard himself (then in business at Philadelphia) sold 500 of the Boston lottery tickets, and thought that he could have sold 1,000 if he had received them. He sends to Rev. Dr. Belknap a ticket which had drawn a prize of $8 for collection at Boston.²

At the beginning of the present century lotteries were regarded in Massachusetts as a ready and not improper means of raising funds for colleges, academies, and churches. They were made as popular and alluring as possible. "A representation of Fortune blindfolded and balancing herself upon a wheel caught the eye of the reader. One hand of the goddess held a cornucopia, from which a stream of coins was pouring into the hat of an improvident young person who was reduced to that single article of clothing; in the other the fickle lady brandished a scroll bearing the inscription '$10,000.'"³

Already, as early as 1719, the general court of Massachusetts enacted that "all private lotteries are common and public nuisances." In 1733 a more stringent act for their suppression was passed, followed by others in 1753 and 1785. Still, these laws were frequently violated, and the legislature itself, in plain frustration of their spirit and intent, passed many special acts permitting these "common and public nuisances." At length, in 1821, a joint committee of the legislature made a remarkable report upon the mischief of the permitted sale of lottery tickets from other states in Massachusetts. The abuses of the system were laid bare, and it was shown that in a single case nearly $500,000 had been collected from tickets out of the hard-earned savings of Massachusetts citizens.

In 1825 a commission appointed to report upon ways and means for building a canal from Boston to the Hudson River proposed to the legislature a lottery scheme for raising funds to carry out that enterprise. This commission estimated that the amount annually expended in Massachusetts for the purchase of lottery tickets was over $250,000, and they saw no reason why, with such sums invested in these schemes, notwithstanding a law of the State prohibiting such traffic altogether, the canal might not be helped forward, under express legislative sanction, as a great and beneficent public enterprise. Their arguments, however, did not prevail, and the canal was not built.

In 1833 an act was passed, which put an end to the sale of lottery tickets in Massachusetts.

As early as the year 1721 lotteries had become so common in the colony of New York that an act of assembly was passed "to prevent lotteries within the Province of New York."

Nevertheless, the practice was not only permitted thereafter, but sometimes authorized by express act, for we find Governor Clinton, in a letter to the Lords of Trade, September 27, 1747, explaining his reasons for giving assent to an act of assembly "for raising 2250 pounds by way of lottery for the advancement of learning, which is absolutely necessary, and much wanted in the Province."¹

In 1748 another special act was passed by the New York assembly for raising the sum of £1,800 by a lottery, for the purpose of founding a college. Again, in 1757, an act was passed to raise £1,125 by lottery, to finish a new jail in New York city.

In 1774 a church was proposed to be erected by a lottery in Brooklyn, for the public religious service of the Church of England, the Dutch Reformed being then the only existing worship.

From a presentment against lotteries by the grand jury of the city of New York, made in 1830, it appeared that at that time fifty-two lottery drawings a year took place, with ostensible prizes amounting to $9,270,000. The amount of the people's money sunk in them, though not ascertainable, was prodigious, and their effect upon morals was presented as pernicious, creating a spirit of gambling which is productive of idleness, vicious habits, and the ruin of credit and character.

By act of the New York legislature all lottery privileges were prohibited in that State after December 31, 1833.

One of the notable facts in the issues of the early press is the extraordinary number and variety of public lottery schemes which they advertised. In 1790-'91 we find the New York lottery with its regular drawings filling a half column with its list of prizes; the Massachusetts semi-annual State lottery, to be drawn in the Representatives' chamber at the state-house, tickets for prizes (from $8 to $10,000) to be had of the treasurer of the State and at the bookstores; the Delaware State lottery, for raising £1,000 for the use of the State; the Lancaster lottery, to raise £1,350 for St. James's church; a lottery to raise a large sum for paving the streets of Philadelphia; another lottery to finish a new Episcopal church, and many more.

In 1776 the Continental Congress authorized a United States lottery to raise money for the army then in the field.

The first drawing was at College Hall, Philadelphia, August 11, 1777. One hundred thousand tickets were offered; under a complicated scheme, by which each ticket was subdivided into four, and the drawing was in four classes, with seven leading Philadelphia citizens as managers. The tickets were to the amount of $500,000 net, after deducting 15 per cent for expenses; the prizes were also to the amount of half a million dollars, running from $50,000 down to $20. The prizes drawn of over $50 in amount were made payable in treasury bank-notes redeemable at the end of five years. It was thus hoped to realize the whole amount of the lottery in ready money.

By a resolution of May 2, 1778, the drawing of the second class of the lottery was postponed until January 1, 1779.

Another resolution, June 3, 1778, directed lists of the prizes drawn to be printed in pamphlets and distributed to all post-masters, lottery agents, and sellers of tickets in the several States, "for the free inspection of the several adventurers;" and that the printers in the States be requested to publish the whole in weekly portions.

One of the early foreign loans authorized by Congress, soon after the war of the Revolution, was associated with the principle of the lottery. In 1784 John Adams, then minister to Holland, negotiated with Amsterdam bankers a loan of 2,000,000 guilders, at 4 per cent interest, agreeing to distribute among the subscribers, by lot, in subsequent years, obligations of the United States for 690,000 guilders, as a bonus or premium on the loan. These obligations bore 4 per cent, but were payable at the option of the United States within six months after their date. Other bonuses and bankers' commissions carried the amount which the United States agreed to pay for an immediate accommodation of 2,000,000 guilders, up to 2,891,800 guilders. Mr. Adams was fearful that this enormous usury would cause its negotiator to be blamed, but he wrote to Dr. Franklin that he despaired of obtaining the money on any lower terms, as the credit of the United States was low, many bills having gone to protest, and the market for loans being very stringent. But by ciphering out the terms of payment, it appears that if the United States cashed the obligations distributed by lottery within six months after the drawings (which was actually done) the 4 per cent interest on the loan, with the large bonus and premiums added, amounted to only $6\frac{3}{4}$ per cent annual interest.

The foundation of Washington City as the national capital was not without some association with the principle of the lottery, once so widely prevalent. In 1793, the funds for erection of the public buildings running low, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia organized a lottery to raise $350,000 "for the improvement of the Federal City." They appointed Samuel Blodget, an enterprising citizen of great public spirit (author of the first American statistical work, "Economica"), as supervisor of the buildings and general agent for the lottery, at £600 salary per annum. The tickets were $7 each, and of the 50,000 to be issued, 16,737 represented prizes, and 33,263 blanks. The principal prize was "one superb hotel, with baths, outhouses, etc., to cost $50,000." The cash prizes ran from $25,000 down to $10 each. The Commissioners say the scheme was drawn up "with the previous approbation of the President." In a letter to Washington, proposing a second lottery, they state that the tickets of the first were "taken up with avidity." The first scheme was measurably successful, but the second proposed lottery was never drawn.

In 1795 the legislature of Maryland passed an act "to authorize two lotteries in the city of Washington," conferring upon Daniel Carroll, Thomas Law, and associates, power to raise by lottery the sum of $52,500, to improve the means of communication by the construction of a canal in Maryland and the District of Columbia.

This act was fully recognized by an act of Congress, approved by Madison, May 6, 1812, which declared the powers therein vested should thereafter be exercised by the Washington Canal Company. The conditions of the act of Congress required a bond of $100,000 by the Canal Company to secure "the payment of the prizes drawn by the fortunate adventurers in said lotteries and the residue to the completing of the canal in the city of Washington and draining the marshes contiguous thereto."

The lottery thus authorized was (naturally enough, since it had the direct sanction of Congress) called a "national lottery," and widely advertised. Tickets were placed on sale in leading cities, and such sales at Norfolk, Va., brought this lottery into the Supreme Court of the United States, in 1820, upon grave questions of constitutionality. The law of Virginia prohibited the sale of the tickets of any "foreign lottery" within that State. The ticket sellers in Norfolk were indicted, and carried the case before Chief Justice Marshall, who awarded a summons to bring the case before the United States Court. Soon after this the Virginia General Assembly passed resolutions (in January, 1821) declaring that the Supreme Court had no rightful jurisdiction, under the Constitution, to correct the judgment of the Virginia court against the sellers of lottery tickets, and entered their "solemn protest" against such judicial interference. The case was decided by the Supreme Court at Washington, in February, 1821, to the effect that the act of Congress could not authorize the sale of lottery tickets in States prohibiting it by State law.

It appears that John Quincy Adams was troubled, when President, by solicitations to approve of a quadruple lottery scheme, sanctioned by the corporation of Washington city, to raise $40,000. In May, 1825, Mr. Adams, fortified by the opinion of Attorney-General Wirt, refused to approve of the lottery.

In 1842 Congress passed an act, still in force, providing for the suppression of the sale of all lottery tickets in the District of Columbia.

By a section of the Revised Statutes of the United States all postmasters are prohibited from acting as lottery agents.

By an act of Congress September 18, 1890, the constitutionality of which came before the Supreme Court, all letters, circulars, or newspapers containing advertisements of lotteries or gift enterprises of any kind, or transmitting purchase money for lottery tickets are forbidden to be carried in the mail or delivered by any postmaster in the United States, under penalty of a fine of not over $500, or imprisonment not more than one year, or both. Postmasters are also required to return to the senders registered letters addressed to any known lottery conductor or agent, but no authority is conferred to open any letters whatever. The Supreme Court held the act valid, the right to circulate lottery matter not being a fundamental right, and that it was no abridgment of the freedom of the press for the Government to refuse to become an agent in circulating printed matter deemed by Congress injurious to the public morals.

In 1839-40 Maryland passed acts totally abolishing the State lottery system, and prohibiting the drawings or dealing in tickets in the State lotteries or in any foreign lotteries whatever. This act was not very effectual in putting an end to the practice, but in the constitution of the State, adopted in 1851, the opponents of lotteries succeeded in ingrafting a provision that "no lottery grant shall ever hereafter be authorized by the legislature." As, however, the existing charters termed "Maryland consolidated lottery grants," had not yet expired, the constitution provided for the choice by the people, at each legislative election, of a "commissioner of lotteries," to discharge certain duties connected with the fair drawing of such authorized schemes. It was further constitutionally enacted that after April 1, 1859, no lottery scheme should be drawn for any purpose whatever, nor any lottery ticket sold, in the State of Maryland. The commissioner was required to secure to the State the annual lottery revenue received during five years previous, until the definitive cessation of all lottery privileges.

In the "instructions" of King George III to Lord Dunmore, Governor of Virginia, dated February 7, 1771, occurs an injunction that the Governor should not give his assent to any legislative acts "for raising money by any private or public lotteries whatsoever." This was occasioned by "great frauds and abuses committed" through lotteries set up by private persons by authority of acts of the legislature in several of the American colonies.

It is not surprising to find George Washington participating in the lotteries of his time, for in what object of public improvement was he not interested? Tickets are preserved of the "Mountain Road Lottery," dated in the year 1768, and signed by Washington. One of these is in the Toner collection in the Library of Congress. In his MS. account books, preserved in the Department of State, is this entry, under date of May 4, 1769:

By cash paid Peyton Randolph, esq., for my tenth of 100 Tickets taken in Partnership with himself and others in Col. Byrd's Lottery, £50.

In December, 1769, in Washington's personal diary, appears this entry:

Dined at the attorney's, and went in evening to draw Col. Moore's Lottery.

The same business engaged him three successive evenings. And in the following year:

June 4, 1770. By Col. George Brooke, for 4 tickets in Col. Bd. Moore's Lottery, & Int't on them.....£41 0 4

The first entry records Washington's modest share of ten tickets, at five pounds sterling each, in the lottery organized for the sale of the famous estate of Col. Wm. Byrd, called Westover, comprising a large domain on James River. This was authorized in 1756, and enabled payment to be made of the debts of a heavily involved estate. Without the lottery, Mr. Jefferson says, the lands would have sold at from one-half to one-fourth of their value, and the creditors would have lost the greater part of their claims.

This way of disposing of real estate was not uncommon in Virginia more than a century ago. It was unrestricted by law until 1769, when the legislature, moved by the too wide growth of the speculative mania, enacted that no lottery should be drawn without being authorized by a special act. These special acts, however, were sufficiently numerous, as appears from a partial list of seventy legally permitted lotteries in the thirty-eight years between 1782 and 1820, cited by Mr. Jefferson.¹ The purposes for which these lottery schemes were organized were quite various. Five of them (1790 to 1816) were for clearing rivers and building bridges, including one to raise $50,000 for the Dismal Swamp improvements. Nineteen were for educational objects, chiefly in aid of academies, with two lotteries for William and Mary College. Ten were for opening or improving public roads; ten to enable counties or towns to pay for streets or other improvements; two for charitable societies; eight to erect or to complete churches in Virginia towns, and six for private individuals "to erect a paper mill;" "for sufferers by fire in Lexington;" "to raise £4,000 for William Tatham, to enable him to complete his geographical work," etc.

Besides these special lottery acts, the Virginia legislature, between 1814 and 1820, derived a part of the state revenue from lotteries organized for the express purpose of aiding in the support of the Government.

I now come to the lottery authorized by the Virginia legislature in 1826, for the benefit of Thomas Jefferson. That illustrious man, returning from the highest executive office in 1809 to a long-neglected estate at Monticello, struggled for years with adverse fortune, failing crops, wasteful slave labor, low prices, depreciated currency, an expensive hospitality, and a constantly growing debt and interest account. He was an ingrained optimist, believing always in better times, and while careful and scrupulous in his accounts, his generous nature led him to bestow many charities which his straitened income could not afford. More than any man in America, he was frequented in his retirement by a throng of friends, admirers, and lion-hunters, who found bed and board at the "hotel Jefferson," until its proprietor was almost literally eaten out of house and home. The guests consumed more than Monticello produced, and not even the careful management of his grandson, Randolph, could retrieve his rapidly waning fortunes. At length, early in 1826, in a season of the severest depression, Jefferson, then in his 83d year, "An old man broken with the storms of State," turned as a last resource to the device of selling his lands by a lottery, for which legislative sanction was sought at Richmond. The act passed (not without strenuous opposition), and the gratitude of Jefferson drew from him some expressions almost pathetic in his letters to friends. Before the lottery was organized, or the lands had been valued by the appointed appraisers, the public interest was so excited in behalf of the venerable statesman that it was resolved to save his estate from alienation, and a lively sympathy produced voluntary subscriptions in New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore to the amount of some $18,000. The amount for which Jefferson was involved, however, was more than $80,000; and while the subscriptions served to cheer his declining days (for the pride which had refused aid from the Virginia treasury in former years was now subdued by adversity), they hindered rather than helped the extrication of his estate from its embarrassments. The first endeavor had been to dispose of the lottery privilege to parties familiar with such organizations in the northern cities; and had the books been opened and the tickets everywhere offered while the public sympathy was still fresh, the success of the plan might have been fully assured. But it was delayed by the volunteer subscriptions, until the death of the illustrious beneficiary, the same year, caused the interest in saving to him his patrimony to subside. It was found impracticable to dispose of the tickets in the lottery, and the whole project was ultimately abandoned. The result was a forced sale of Monticello and Mr. Jefferson's other estates to pay his debts; and the considerable deficiency was most honorably made up by his executor, Thomas Jefferson Randolph.

In its constitution, adopted in 1850, Virginia ratified a provision that no lottery should thereafter be authorized by law; and the buying or selling of tickets or chances in any lottery, not heretofore authorized, was prohibited. The same provision is in the existing constitution.

A singular historical error occurs in the Encyclopædia Britannica, where it gravely asserts, in an article on lotteries, that "before 1820 at least seventy acts were passed by Congress authorizing lotteries for various public purposes, such as schools, roads, etc." The facts are that Congress has passed but three lottery acts from the earliest days of the Continental Congress until this day; and the industrious but careless encyclopædist has confounded Mr. Jefferson's list of 70 lotteries authorized by Virginia laws with the legislation of the United States Congress.

The history of lotteries in the State of Kentucky shows how the survival of a once legalized game of chance for public objects may be perverted to purposes of private gain. In 1838 the Kentucky legislature empowered the city of Frankfort to raise, by a lottery, $100,000 for the use of city schools and the construction of waterworks. The managers of this lottery (which had long become functus officio) sold certain undrawn classes of schemes in it to Simmons and Dickinson, who, in 1877, carried on what they termed "The Kentucky State Lottery," ostensibly under the wing of the State's sanction; this, too, notwithstanding a Kentucky statute, passed in 1816, prohibiting the sale of any lottery tickets, except as authorized by special act. The legislature in 1878 went further, and repealed all lottery grants existing in the State of Kentucky.

The managers of this lottery were convicted and their lucrative business stopped by the State courts.

In 1880 in Louisville appeared the flaming prospectus of the "Commonwealth Distribution Company," whose managers were shortly after indicted and deprived of their means of appropriating the money of the people.

Another bold attempt to convert a chartered lottery privilege for public purposes to private gain was in the assumption by the managers of the "Kentucky State Lottery" of a privilege granted in 1839 to Paducah, Ky., to raise $100,000 by lottery, for education and wharf construction; the court of appeals put an end to this claim in like manner.

These illegal concerns, however, subsisted for years, drawing profits from the credulity of the public, and with offices in New York, etc., advertising the drawings on the 1st and 15th of every month, of the "Old Reliable Kentucky State Lottery."

A legal and constitutional question of much interest in relation to vested rights in lotteries was decided in 1880 by the United States Supreme Court. The suit was brought by the State of Mississippi to suppress a lottery company known as "The Mississippi Educational and Manufacturing Aid Society," which had been duly chartered in 1867. The State constitution of 1868 (one year later) prohibited lotteries, and an act of 1870 forbade the further sale of tickets by companies already authorized. It was claimed by the lottery that this act was unconstitutional and void, because it impaired the obligation of contracts. On appeal to the highest tribunal, the United States Supreme Court held that "The contracts which the Federal Constitution protects are property rights, not government rights. Lotteries belong to the latter class. That lotteries are demoralizing in their effects, however carefully regulated, can not be doubted. There can be no question that lotteries are proper subjects of the exercise of the State's governmental or police power. They are a species of gambling. The right to stop them is governmental, and to be exercised at all times by those in power at their discretion."

It appears from a statement compiled for the Massachusetts legislature in 1832 that the following States then authorized lotteries, with tickets issued under the various schemes as specified:

States authorizing lotteries.	No. of classes.	Amount of tickets at scheme prices.
New York.....	80	$14,387,801
Virginia.....	72	10,920,166
Connecticut.....	88	8,332,583
Rhode Island.....	68	7,837,621
Pennsylvania.....	26	5,313,056
Delaware and North Carolina (joint grants).....	37	3,462,900
Maryland.....	18	2,212,540
Delaware.....	32	670,263
Aggregate in nine States.....	421	53,136,930

Besides the above, Maine had two lotteries, and several Southern States not named had others.

The State of Louisiana appears to have become the last refuge of the lottery as a system. The constitution of Louisiana, adopted in 1845, prohibited all lotteries and all sales of lottery tickets in that State, and the same provision is found in the constitution adopted in 1857. But in 1864, yielding to a very general desire to open a door for revenue to the impoverished treasuries of the State and the city of New Orleans, the constitution framed in that year declared "The legislature shall have the power to license the selling of lottery tickets and the keeping of gambling houses; but in all cases not less than $10,000 per annum shall be levied as a license or tax on each vender of lottery tickets and on each gambling house, and $500 on each tombola."

Under this grant of power, that formidable and lucrative corporation, the Louisiana State Lottery, was chartered August 11, 1868, and it was declared unlawful to sell any other lottery tickets in that State, because "many millions of dollars have been withdrawn from and lost to this State by the sale of Havana, Kentucky, and Madrid and other lottery tickets, thereby impoverishing our own people." The Louisiana Lottery was thus made a monopoly as against all others; and the consideration named in the act which chartered it was the sum of $40,000, to be paid annually for twenty-five years, to the treasury of the State. The title of this act is "An act to increase the revenues of the State, and to authorize the incorporation and establishment of the Louisiana State Lottery Company." This extensive privilege, through the prohibition of lotteries by all other States, has inured to the enormous profit of the company chartered. Shrewdly and ably managed, it drew to its support very influential financial backers, circulated its attractive advertisements broadcast throughout the country, established agencies to operate openly where it could, and secretly where it could not, and became the fruitful source of unknown wealth to its managers. According to the statements of the company itself, it formerly sold each month, for ten months of each year, 100,000 tickets at $2 each, and at its "extraordinary drawings" for each of the two remaining months 100,000 tickets at $10 each, thus making its revenue (1,000,000 tickets at $2 and 200,000 at $10) or actual receipts $4,000,000 per annum. Out of this vast sum (still by its own statement) the company paid in prizes $2,124,000; commissions and incidentals, $825,000; advertising, $187,500, and premium to the State, $40,000; total, $3,176,500. The balance, $823,500, represents the probable profits of a year's business. This, however, was in its palmy days of prosperity, for the company had its trials and its drawbacks.

After enjoying about ten years' lease of its lucrative privilege, the Louisiana legislature passed an act repealing its grant, and prohibiting it from drawing any lottery or selling any tickets from and after March 31, 1879.

Here was a dilemma. But the Louisiana Lottery Company was equal to the emergency. A State constitutional convention was about to meet to revise the fundamental law of the State. This body convened, and a clear majority of its members being converted to the advantages of the lottery system, it put into the new constitution a clause empowering the general assembly to grant lottery charters or privileges, provided the sum of $40,000 per year should be paid into the State treasury for the use of the Charity Hospital of New Orleans. It further provided as follows: "And the charter of said company is recognized as a contract binding on the State for the period therein specified (i. e., twenty-five years, from 1868 to 1893), except its monopoly clause, which is hereby abrogated." This constitution was adopted in December, 1879, and was held to control the legislative act of repeal, and to reinstate the lottery company in all its privileges, except the exclusive right to deal in lottery tickets. In this new constitution, strange to say, was a clause to this effect: "Gambling is declared to be a vice, and the general assembly shall enact laws for its suppression." There is also a proviso after the rehabilitation clause, that "all charters shall cease and expire on the 1st of January, 1895, from which time all lotteries are prohibited in the State."

In 1890 the company offered the legislature half a million dollars a year for an extension of its franchise, increased the offer to a million, and finally got through an act for submitting to the people a constitutional amendment giving a twenty-five years' lottery privilege for the sum of $1,250,000 annually. This was vetoed by the governor, and long judicial proceedings were instituted. The Lottery Company finally abandoned the hope of getting any renewed lease of life in Louisiana, and turned its attention to Spanish-American countries less hostile to that form of gambling than the United States.

Besides the many legalized lotteries which have from time to time subsisted in various States, there has been a plentiful crop of bogus or illegal lotteries, doing a large business in the sale of tickets, in nearly every city. Not to refer to the "policy shops" and the dealers in all kinds of chances, whose name is legion, there was a "Cheyenne Lottery" exploited about 1877, in New York, holding out the alluring bait of 500,000 prizes, "every ticket to draw a prize." About the same time the Wyoming Prize Distribution Lottery, the Laramie City Lottery, the Victoria, Canada, Lottery, and the Royal New Brunswick Lottery drew in a multitude of victims.

The history of movements for the suppression of the lottery system affords convincing proof of the soundness of public opinion upon this subject when once enlightened by facts. Although the record here given exhibits a multitude of legislative sanctions to lotteries for public purposes, it presents surprisingly few grants for private lottery schemes, however sugar-coated by royalties reserved to the State or locality in the interest of the tax-payers.

Among the various constitutional provisions found on this subject, that adopted by Arkansas in its constitution of 1836, and reenacted in that of 1874, is a model of brevity. "No lottery shall be authorized by this State, nor shall the sale of lottery tickets be allowed." This prohibition is amplified in other State constitutions, that of Alabama reading as follows:

The general assembly shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and it shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift-enterprise tickets, or tickets in any scheme in the nature of a lottery, in this State, and all acts or parts of acts heretofore passed by the general assembly of this State authorizing a lottery or lotteries, and all acts amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto, are hereby avoided.

The following shows the States that have incorporated in their fundamental law a prohibition of lotteries, with date of adoption of the constitution now in force. All of the States named have forbidden their legislatures to authorize lotteries for any purpose, and those marked with a star have prohibited the sale of lottery tickets within their limits:

* Alabama	1875	* Montana	1889
* Arkansas	1874	Nebraska	1875
* California	1879	* Nevada	1864
* Colorado	1876	* New Jersey	1844
Florida	1885	* New York	1846
* Georgia	1877	* Ohio	1851
Idaho	1889	* Oregon	1857
* Illinois	1870	Rhode Island	1842
* Indiana	1851	* South Carolina	1868

It will be seen that thirty-three States have constitutional provisions prohibiting lotteries, all of them except nine extending the prohibition to the sale of lottery tickets within their limits. Of the remaining eleven States the following are living under constitutions adopted before the public agitation against lotteries became prevalent: Massachusetts, whose constitution was framed in 1780; New Hampshire, 1792; Vermont, 1793; Connecticut, 1818; Maine, 1820, and Delaware, 1831. In Pennsylvania, under a constitution adopted in 1873, the laws prohibit lottery schemes, but the constitution is silent on the subject.

Lotteries which appeal to the charity as well as the cupidity of men have always held out a double attraction to that portion of the public who like the fascinating hazard of risking a small sum in the hope of gaining a greater. The greed of gambling, concealed under the garb of charity or of religion, may be covered by a very thin veil, but it is a veil which has proverbially covered multitudes of sins.

The now generally-recognized evils of the lottery were slow in making themselves felt in many parts of our country. The fact that all, or nearly all the earlier lottery schemes were for public benefits served to quiet the consciences of the scrupulous. The lottery for private gain is mainly of very recent growth. The lottery for government expenses, ecclesiastical buildings or revenues, educational endowments, improved transportation, river and harbor betterments, and public charities, was the earliest, and survived the longest. Gradually, however, it developed abuses so flagrant as to arouse public reprobation, and to open the eyes of all but the wilfully blind. The investor in such schemes always stands to lose and the management to gain in the direct ratio of their chances, which are preponderantly in favor of the lottery. The plain results of indulgence in this tempting but surely losing species of gaming were seen in thousands of instances. Unreal expectations, visionary hopes, distaste for the slow gains of useful labor, consuming anxieties, spending beyond means, debt, speculation, concealment, bankruptcy—such were some of the oft-repeated experiences of the victims of the lottery habit. The poorer and more ignorant classes, as is always the case when speculative schemes are launched anywhere, were the greatest sufferers. The rich speculator who invests in lottery tickets spends part of his surplus and can afford to lose; the poor man spends perhaps his last dollar, and often a borrowed one. The deprivation, want, and misery entailed upon families by this curse can not be measured.

Writers on the theory of probabilities have laid down this formula: "The value of every expectation is found by multiplying the sum expected by the probability of obtaining it." Thus, suppose a lottery scheme where there are 10,000 tickets of \$10 each and only one prize; then A's chance of drawing the prize is 1 against 9,999, or $\frac{1}{10000}$ expresses his probability of winning. Or, suppose a lottery in which the number of prizes and of blanks is equal—or 5,000 prizes of \$20 each and 5,000 blanks, the tickets being \$20. Here A's chance of winning or losing is precisely equal. If he wins, he is no better off than if he had not risked his \$20; if he loses, he is \$20 worse off. And however widely the scheme may be varied, the proportion of a purchaser's disadvantage between these two extremes will keep pace with the variations. In other words, the lottery ticket buyer has always the odds against him, and however honestly the drawing may be managed, he stands to lose in the direct ratio of the chances, which must always be largely in favor of the management, or there would be no motive of profit in the scheme.

To sum up this necessarily concise and imperfect historical view, it appears to be established that in the earlier ages of the republic lotteries were regarded with general favor, or at least with toleration; that schemes or drawings by chance for public objects were common throughout the country; that lotteries for private gain were very rarely, and in most States never permitted to exist; that even those organized for public improvements produced trifling pecuniary results to the objects ostensibly aided, while drawing from the people heavy sums with no returns save to a very few individuals; that the evils and abuses developed by the system, even when administered under the shield and sanction of the law, led gradually to discredit it profoundly in the public mind; that the change in popular opinion was evinced first, by the enactment of prohibitory laws with fines and forfeitures in all the States; next by criminal statutes, punishing the promoters of lotteries by imprisonment, and finally by making the prohibition of lotteries a part of the constitution in all States except eleven, in which, however, lotteries are prohibited by law, save in three States, where, moreover, they do not exist; and that the experience of the past appears to have crystallized into a general public conviction that lotteries are to be regarded, in direct proportion to their extension, as among the most dangerous and prolific sources of human misery.

V.—UNITED STATES PROVISIONAL COURT FOR THE STATE OF
LOUISIANA, 1862-1865.

BY JUDGE CHARLES A. PEABODY.

UNITED STATES PROVISIONAL COURT FOR THE STATE OF
LOUISIANA, 1862-1865.

By Judge CHARLES A. PEABODY.

One of the evils to which a nation at war is exposed is that of accidentally and unintentionally doing injury or giving offense to nations other than the one with which it is at war. A hostile or offensive act is seldom intended under such circumstances, but in exerting every faculty and power with all possible energy against an enemy it must often happen that the rights or sensibilities of another nation, or of its subjects whose interests the nation is bound to protect, may receive diminished consideration and be unintentionally encroached upon. Under such circumstances the demand of friendly nations for careful observance of the rules of international etiquette should no doubt be somewhat relaxed in estimating the acts of parties absorbed in the contest. Much is to be overlooked or excused which, under circumstances more favorable to deliberate consideration, would be treated differently; and if reparation be demanded by a party injured or offended it is to be done in a tone less imperious than would have been appropriate if the party complained of had been at peace and had all the usual opportunity of a nation at peace for acting deliberately.

But with all the mitigation which can be hoped for in the fact that the author of the offense, real or fancied, was unable under the circumstances to act with deliberation, a controversy with another nation is a very serious matter, and the gravity of such a controversy is enhanced almost incalculably to a party by the fact that it is already engaged in war with another adversary.

The case of the capture of Mason and Slidell from the Trent in the late war in the United States, by error of a commander in the Navy acting on his impression of duty at the moment, without opportunity for instructions or deliberation, sent a thrill, almost of horror, through the veins of every enlightened friend of the United States because of the condition of the country at the time, it being then engaged in war; and notwithstanding the fact that the nation whose sensibilities were wounded was great and powerful beyond any other nation of the world, and being without temptation to extravagant self-assertion, might reasonably be expected to be magnanimous and even considerate in asserting itself against a junior blood relation, immersed and struggling as if for life, in that most disheartening of national contests—resembling family discord, a house divided against itself—civil war.

After the passage of the forts on the Mississippi River below New Orleans by a fleet of the United States under command of Admiral Farragut, bearing a military force under command of Maj. Gen. Butler, during the late war in the United States and about May, 1862, the surrender of New Orleans to the forces of the United States followed almost immediately. The means relied on by the Confederate government for protection of the city and the country in that region against aggression by the Army and Navy of the United States, namely, the two forts on the Mississippi River, the chain cable across the river and the naval force of the Confederates above it, acting in concert, being overcome by the masterly skill of Farragut, the only course left to the city, on the arrival of the fleet before it, was to surrender, and that course was adopted at once. The city and much of the territory of the State of Louisiana and neighboring States came at once into the control of the Army of the United States and was held by it in armed belligerent occupation—constituting the Department of the Gulf—until the end of the war in 1865, the headquarters and central point of the department being Louisiana and in it New Orleans.

During that time the United States, having sole authority, had to administer government there as best it could in local and internal matters. It had of course to encounter the usual difficulties of extemporizing a system provisional in its character.

Situated as it was in the interior of the country and having no territorial contact or intercourse with any other nation or government, it might seem likely to be free from danger of controversial issues, or being the occasion of them, with other nations and governments; and so it proved to be as to questions that might ordinarily be supposed likely to arise from location in reference to other governments or their territorial possessions or claims.

There was a class of cases however between the United States and foreign governments and like most international questions having a grave character, especially to a nation at war, with all its energies already taxed to their utmost against an avowed enemy, which cases had their origin in New Orleans and which gave to the Government of the United States a great deal of anxiety in respect to its relations with the governments of several nations. It was the pressure arising from those cases and the danger of international complications liable to grow out of them that brought into existence the United States Provisional court for the State of Louisiana, on the application of the Department of State under the administration of Mr. Seward, Secretary of State, for relief from the labor and anxiety to which the Department were subjected by them.

The business of New Orleans at the time of the breaking out of the late war was very large. The commerce of the Mississippi River and its tributaries had its terminal point and focus there. That commerce was very extensive. The numberless steamers of those days plying the waters from the head of navigation on the Mississippi, Missouri, Arkansas, Ohio, Tennessee rivers, and other streams tributary to them, affording tens of thousands of miles of navigable waters, bearing the products of the immense territory drained by those streams and their numerous tributaries, extending from the crest of the Allegheny Mountains on the east to the crest of the Rocky Mountains on the west, all deposited their cargoes at New Orleans. There was in those days no other outlet for their products to the ocean and the outer world. Railroads had not begun to do that transportation, and all the exports of that vast region had to pay tribute to New Orleans. There they were received by merchants to whom they were consigned, and after being sold for exportation and having changed owners, perhaps more than once, were reshipped in ocean vessels by way of the Gulf of Mexico to the ocean and the markets of the world.

The capital on which the commercial business of New Orleans had been transacted had always been largely foreign, and owned by bankers and capitalists residing abroad in various commercial countries of Europe, and some of them in countries other than the United States, on this Western Continent. The population in Louisiana of foreign birth was also quite numerous, and they had not been accustomed to naturalize and renouncing all claim to the protection of the governments of the countries whence they came, to acquire the rights of citizenship in this country, like the foreign-born population of the Northern States of the Union. Large numbers of men dwelling and engaged in business there from France, Spain, Italy, and islands of the Mediterranean and other countries, still remained subjects of the governments of the countries from which they had migrated and claimed right to the protection of those governments.

The business of New Orleans and the capital invested in it necessarily suffered much from the war and the transfer of the government from the peace footing of the State under which the business carried on there had prospered, to the war footing of the United States under which great losses had been sustained. As has been said, that capital was owned largely by subjects of foreign governments.

Those losses and injuries, many of them caused by the necessary action of the new governing power, became subjects of claims against the Government of the United States. Those claims were urged upon the representatives of the United States Government in New Orleans with the aid of consuls of the governments of the respective claimants, and relief being refused, the aid of the governments themselves was invoked and by those governments the claims were placed in the hands of their ministers resident at the seat of Government of the United States and there urged upon the Government of the United States before the Department of State.

The questions raised by them, urged at first by the consuls for their respective governments before the military authorities at New Orleans, and afterward by their ministers at Washington before the General Government had become so numerous and required so much and so careful attention from the Secretary of State that he found it impossible to attend to them there, and also thought the foreign relations of the Government greatly endangered by the course they took.

Mr. Seward, then Secretary of State, said that from the time of the capture of New Orleans, in May, 1862, to the establishment of this court, more than half of his time had been occupied most anxiously with these questions, many of them of the most intricate and delicate character; and it was thought by him to be indispensable that there should be some tribunal or person on the spot capable of deciding and ending such questions of an international character, and liable at all times, while they remained undecided, to become subjects of serious international controversy.

It may be remembered by some of our readers that a case of the kind above referred to occurred in the summer of 1862, a short time prior to the establishment of this court, which Mr. Reverdy Johnson, of Baltimore, one of the most distinguished lawyers of the country, was sent to New Orleans by the Federal Government, at the instance of the State Department, to investigate. That case arose on the claim of a Greek commercial house, Rodocorachi & Franghiadi, to a quantity of sugar which had been seized by the military authorities on the ground that it had been acquired or was destined to be used in aid of the rebellion. The case having been decided adversely to the claim of the Greek merchants by the military authorities at New Orleans, the aid of their Government was invoked and the claim was pressed before the Department of State at Washington by the representatives of the Greek Government resident there, and had become a matter of grave interest with the two governments.

To afford relief to the Government at Washington, and (what was deemed of much greater importance at the time) to have all such questions, thereafter to arise, passed upon and ended before they should reach the portfolios of foreign governments or the State Department of our own and assume the gravity of questions pending between the governments of the two nations, it was thought expedient to have some tribunal or person on the spot capable of examining claims of the kind and deciding upon and ending them. To effect that purpose the establishment of the United States provisional court of the State of Louisiana, with powers adequate to every emergency possible and whose decisions should be conclusive in all cases, was resolved on. All claims of the kind above referred to could be prosecuted before this court, and it was made the tribunal of the Government for its examination and decision of them. If urged elsewhere on a representative of the Government the officer to whom they were presented must order them to this as the tribunal ordained by the Government for examining and deciding them.

The tribunal desired was created by the following order of the President of the United States and the Commander in Chief of the Army thereof.

EXECUTIVE ORDER ESTABLISHING A PROVISIONAL COURT IN LOUISIANA.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,

Washington, October 20, 1862.

The insurrection which has for some time prevailed in several of the States of this Union, including Louisiana, having temporarily subverted and swept away the civil institutions of that State, including the judiciary and the judicial authorities of the Union, so that it has become necessary to hold the State in military occupation; and it being indispensably necessary that there shall be some judicial tribunal existing there capable of administering justice, I have, therefore, thought it proper to appoint, and I do hereby constitute, a provisional court, which shall be a court of record for the State of Louisiana, and I do hereby appoint Charles A. Peabody, of New York, to be a provisional judge to hold said court, with authority to hear, try, and determine all causes, civil and criminal, including causes in law, equity, revenue, and admiralty, and particularly all such powers and jurisdiction as belong to the district and circuit courts of the United States, conforming his proceedings, so far as possible, to the course of proceedings and practice which has been customary in the courts of the United States and Louisiana—his judgment to be final and conclusive. And I do hereby authorize and empower the said judge to make and establish such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the exercise of his jurisdiction, and to appoint a prosecuting attorney, marshal, and clerk of the said court, who shall perform the functions of attorney, marshal, and clerk, according to such proceedings and practice as before mentioned, and such rules and regulations as may be made and established by said judge. These appointments are to continue during the pleasure of the President, not extending beyond the military occupation of the city of New Orleans, or the restoration of the civil authority in that city and in the State of Louisiana. These officers shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the War Department compensation as follows. * * * Such compensations to be certified by the Secretary of War. A copy of this order, certified by the Secretary of War and delivered to such judge, shall be deemed and held to be a sufficient commission. Let the seal of the United States be hereunto affixed.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

By the President:

WILLIAM H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

The power conferred on the court constituted by this order, would seem to be the unlimited power of determining every question that could be the subject of judicial decision and to make its decision conclusive of the rights and obligations of all parties, including, of course, the Government itself. It was not limited to the class of cases interesting in reference to the foreign relations of the Government, on account of which it was instituted. That class of business was not specially referred to in the Executive order and it was not desirable that attention should be called to it by the language of the order.

The organization of the court was proceeded with at once, the judge appointing a prosecuting attorney, marshal and clerk, and all preparations were made before proceeding to the field of action. Thus completely organized and ready for business, as authorized by the President and Commander in Chief of the Army of the United States, for the exercise of its functions in territory held in armed belligerent occupation by the Army under his command, the court proceeded by Government transport, under convoy, from New York to New Orleans, the headquarters of the Department of the Gulf. Arriving there early in December, 1862, it proceeded as soon as proper arrangements could be made to do business.

Claims of foreign governments of the kind above described, which had hitherto caused great anxiety to the Government at Washington, ceased to be presented there shortly after this court commenced business, it was said by the Secretary of State, and the relief sought for the government and department was attained.

The court then proceeded to do business as a court of general jurisdiction.

Commissioned broadly to administer justice, and no rule or law for its action being prescribed it was left to the court to decide by what law it would be governed. It decided to adopt, as the rule of its action, in ordinary litigation between man and man, the law theretofore of the State of Louisiana; as being the law under which the transaction to be adjudicated had many of them been had and also because it seemed probable that that law, having had the sanction of the previous government, would be best suited to the business and interests of the inhabitants and persons interested in business and property there. This, however, the court announced would only be the general rule, and the court would decide in each case whether reason existed for a departure from the law of the State in order to the attainment of the fullest justice, and would make exceptions wherever sufficient reason for it existed.

The executive power of this court was one of its most attractive features. For this purpose it had always at its command the entire physical force of the United States within the department. The marshal of the court, bearing its process, had a pass everywhere within the Federal lines, and was furnished every facility and all the power demanded for the execution of its orders. Commanders of stations, military and naval, were instructed to afford him every aid. On land, a military escort as large as necessary for his purpose, and on water, transports and gunboats were at his command, and transportation to the utmost extent of the capacity of the Government at the particular place. He even penetrated the enemy's lines for miles, sometimes with a large escort of hundreds and perhaps thousands of men, cavalry and infantry, and brought from within those lines into the custody of the court, cotton, sugar, and other property demanded by the process he bore, for adjudication between litigants. Private boats navigating the Mississippi and other rivers, and the bayous, lakes, and other waters of that aqueous State were ordered to land him and at his signal to stop and take him on board, wherever he required them to; even at places at which they were not otherwise allowed, by the military regulations of the department, to land.

A short time before this court terminated its labors a deputy marshal having process to serve in the vicinity of Morganza, a military station and depot on the Mississippi River above New Orleans, obtained access to the general in command there, and asked for an escort to take him to a point in the interior where his process was to be served. The general examined the process of the court held by the marshal, and said that the escort was at his service; that it would require a thousand cavalry to escort him there safely; that he had them, however, and they would be ready for him whenever he desired to move. A deputy marshal of the court, during the siege of Port Hudson, in 1863, said that he thought an escort he had on one occasion embraced several thousand men.

The necessity for tribunals for the decision of controversies between contending parties and for the administration of justice generally was felt immediately after the occupation of the city by the Federal Army, and provision had been made for the supply of that want before the United States Provisional court, for the need of such an institution had been considered.

A striking illustration of the necessity for judicial action in such a case is afforded by the history of the Provost court (the first to be established there, and for a considerable time the only one) in its gradual extension of jurisdiction brought about by the necessities of the case.

About June, 1862, and a few days or weeks after the occupation of the city of New Orleans by the Federal Army, a court was established, called the Provost court of the Army of the United States for the city of New Orleans, having at first as its name imports powers only to decide questions relating to the Army occurring in New Orleans. From time to time other questions, not connected with the Army, were referred to this court by military officers in command there, and particularly such as related to matters of police and the punishment of crimes generally; and the jurisdiction of that court over cases of that kind, from frequent repetition of reference of them to it, became habitual and came to be deemed constitutionally inherent in the court.

Very soon that court exercised unquestioned jurisdiction of all criminal cases arising in the city of New Orleans and in all other parts of Louisiana held in military occupation by the Federal arms.

Shortly after this acquisition of jurisdiction, civil matters, in the absence of courts formally endowed for such business, were referred from time to time to this court for decision (ex-necessitate, it might almost be said) by officers in command, and in the same manner a general jurisdiction in civil matters was gradually established and recognized by the Government there and the court and citizens.

Things remained much in this condition until late in the summer of 1862, the Provost court under Maj. Joseph M. Bell, a member of Gen. Butler's staff, being the only court there and that court exercising beneficently jurisdiction acquired in the manner above stated, in cases of almost every description—making orders in the nature of injunctions; administering estates of deceased persons; appointing guardians of infants and administering their estates, and appointing, removing, and controlling trustees of other trusts.

About that time other courts having civil jurisdiction were established and set in motion.

There were reasons in the magnitude and importance of the business of New Orleans and the fact that the business transacted in that city could not be done elsewhere, but must be done there, at that the only point at which the internal commerce of that vast territory, drained by the Mississippi and its innumerable affluents, could meet the extraterritorial and international commerce of the world, why elaborate and careful provision should be made these for government and the protection of pecuniary and personal rights.

The necessities of commerce, however, and the general wants of the inhabitants in their dealings and intercourse, had already received such attention from the power-administering government there, in the establishment by the military governor of Louisiana, of courts for the decision of questions usually arising in such cases. Several of the identical courts, styled first, second, and third district courts of the parish of Orleans, in use before the surrender of the city—courts established and operated under the State government prior to the conquest, and therefore presumptively well suited to the wants of business and society there—had been rehabilitated; new and competent judges and other officers had been appointed, and the courts set in motion under the authority of the Federal Army; and those courts were then doing business in much the same manner under the new government as before the conquest while under the State government.

This setting in motion those old courts under a motive power, seemed like an appropriation by the new governing power, of governmental machinery of the Confederate State, embraced (it might be said fancifully) in the surrender made to the Federal Government just after its forces had passed the forts on the Mississippi and appeared before New Orleans.

This was the condition of things when in December, 1862, the judge of the United States Provisional court for the State of Louisiana, and the officers appointed by him, the prosecuting attorney, marshal, and clerk, arrived in New Orleans, from New York, ready for business.

The courts then in operation were performing duty in dispensing justice satisfactorily.

The parts of the State held by the Federal arms, outside the parish of Orleans, however, had no courts, civil or criminal, and no process from the courts of the parish of Orleans went thither. No local courts could well be maintained there, for the tenure of the country by the Federal Army was not permanent, but fluctuated from time to time. At one time, and for months together, a tract of country, embracing several parishes or counties, would be held by the Federal Army, and at another time, another part of the State, of equal extent, would be so held, and these districts, one after another, by the retirement of the Federal Army from them, were left to govern themselves as best they might, and perhaps sometimes returned to the occupation and control of the Confederate army. This had been the case at different times to such an extent that, perhaps, no considerable part of the State, except the city of New Orleans and the country in the immediate vicinity, was uniformly held by the Federal Army after its first capture. A central court, therefore, with power to bring litigants to itself, and whose operations practically would expand and contract with the flow and ebb of the Army, was a great desideratum, and almost indispensable to the administration of justice in those parts of the State. That want was supplied by the United States provisional court.

Immediately after the United States Provisional court opened its doors for business generally it was occupied with business of the first magnitude, and by none was it received with greater favor than by those in sympathy with the rebellion and unfriendly to the Federal Government. These disloyal people seemed to entertain distrust of the local courts, the judges in which had been selected from the class of residents in Louisiana opposed to the rebellion and friendly to the Federal Government. Considering themselves as under the ban of the existing government, to which they had been and continued to be inimical, they apprehended unfair treatment from judges between whom and themselves, as members of opposing parties, animosities or prejudices might exist, and at any rate were said to be feared by them. They had no distrust of the kind in respect to this court however, officered as it was by strangers to their local feuds or antipathies.

The district courts of the parish of Orleans, several of which had recently been set in motion in New Orleans by the occupying force, had been a part only of the old system of judiciary for the State. That system had also embraced a court of review, known as the Supreme court of Louisiana, the court of last resort in all cases.

From all other courts of the state appeals had laid in former times to the Supreme court. Accordingly those courts, considering the Supreme court as still a part of their system, held that their decisions were subject to review by the Supreme court, and on appeals being taken in accordance with the practice theretofore existing those courts treated them as regular and stayed proceedings on the judgments appealed from until decision by the appellate court.

The Supreme court had not been organized or set in motion since the establishment of the Federal authority there.

Under these circumstances the power of the United States Provisional court to entertain appeals from the judgments of the other courts and reverse, affirm, or modify them was at once perceived, and an effort was made to induce that court to entertain such appeals generally and review the judgments and dispose of them finally. The court declined, however, to make any general order on the subject, not doubting its authority, but deeming such action inexpedient.

The necessity for a court which should have power to review these cases and dispose of the appeals accumulated led, some time afterward, to measures for the organization of the Supreme court of Louisiana, and Judge Peabody, having already under his previous commission much greater powers than would be needed in that position, was made chief justice of that court.

The United States Provisional court for the State of Louisiana was brought to a close by the termination of the war and of the military occupation of the Federal army in 1865, and its judgments were transferred to and made judgments of the circuit and district courts of the United States by act of Congress of July 28, 1866 (see U. S. Statutes at Large, Vol. XIV, p. 344).

The argument presented is that the position of the papal demarcation line on this globe is drawn in accordance with the claims of the Spaniards first definitely formulated at the conference of Badajos in May, 1524. Hence it is concluded that this globe can not have been constructed as early as 1523.

- "In the great discussion which took place in the years 1787 and 1788 the adoption or rejection of the Constitution of the United States, not the least important method of influencing public opinion, resorted to by the partisans and enemies of the proposed frame of government, was the contribution of essays to the press of the period. The newspapers were filled with anonymous articles on this question, usually the product of the great statesmen and writers of that period. Often of marked ability and valuable as the personal views of the writers, the dispersion and destruction of the papers that contained them has resulted in their almost entire neglect as historical or legal writings, and the difficulty of their proper use has been further added to by their anonymous character, which largely destroyed the authority and weight they would have carried had their true writers been known.
- From an examination of over forty files of newspapers and many thousand separate issues, scattered in various public and private libraries, from Boston to Charleston, the editor has selected a series of these essays and reprinted them in this volume. From various sources he has obtained the name of the writer of each. All here reprinted are the work of well-known men. Five of the writers were signers of the Declaration of Independence; seven were members of the Federal Convention; many were members of the State conventions and there discussed the Constitution. All had had a wide experience in law and government. Their arguments are valuable, not merely for their reasoning, but from their statement of facts. New light is thrown upon the proceedings in the Federal Convention, so large a part of which is yet veiled in mystery; and personal motives and State interests are mercilessly laid bare, furnishing clues of both the support of and opposition to the Constitution. Subsequently most of the writers were prominent in administering this Constitution or opposing its development, and were largely responsible for the resulting tendencies of our government. The essays reprinted are:

8vo, pp. xiii, 498.

"Of the writings of the American statesmen of the Revolutionary and Constitutional periods, none possess greater interest than those which were the work of S. Mis. 57—16

Thomas Jefferson. The individuality of the man, the important part borne by him in the events of his time, and still more the political principles originated or supported by him, give to the productions of his pen a value for the statesman, the lawyer, and the historian. It is, nevertheless, the case that less than one-fourth of his papers were printed in the so-called collections of his works, and many of his most important contributions were omitted from these. Nor do these earlier recollections meet the requirements of modern historical research. In accordance with the editorial methods in vogue at the time, portions were suppressed, while other portions were garbled and altered for the purpose of bringing Jefferson and those with whom he came into contact nearer to a standard of thought and conduct which the editors had themselves established. Scarcely a document was printed as Jefferson wrote it, and in certain instances an entire perversion of truth was the result. * * * To meet the need of a comprehensive and correct edition of the writings of Thomas Jefferson, this work has been undertaken. Not content with relying upon the Jefferson MSS. in the Department of State, from which, substantially, the former editions were compiled, the present editor, while making full use of the records of the Department, has obtained many interesting documents from the papers of the Continental Congress; the archives of the State of Virginia; the files of the French foreign office; the private papers of Washington, Adams, Madison, Monroe, Steuben, and Gates, as well as from many State archives, historical societies, and private collections throughout the country. The present possessor of the private papers of Jefferson has, with the greatest generosity, allowed the editor to obtain copies of the most important of that collection, and the editor has been fortunate enough to purchase Jefferson's own set of the public documents covering the period of his presidency, thus obtaining an unequalled series of his messages and other public papers."

III. EDITED WORKS.

(1) German.

Der Deutsche Kirchenfreund. Organ für die Gemeinsamen Interessen der Amerikanisch-deutschen Kirchen. Mercersburg, Pa., 6 vols., 1848-'54.

A monthly periodical, the first American theological journal in the German language. The editor imported printer and types from Philadelphia, and began with half a dozen subscribers (students). He continued it for six years, after which his friend, the Rev. Dr. William Julius Mann, professor in the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, continued it for six years longer. Philadelphia (Schäfer & Koradi), 1854-'60.

Deutsches Gesangbuch. Eine Auswahl geistlicher Lieder aus allen Zeiten der Christlichen Kirche. Nach den besten hymnologischen Quellen bearbeitet und mit erläuternden Bemerkungen über Verfasser, Inhalt und Geschichte der Lieder versehen. xiv., 663 pp. 1859. Enlarged ed., 1874. Philadelphia (J. Fohler).

This hymn-book was made for and adopted by the German Reformed Church in the United States, and published in many editions, large and small, with and without tunes, by Kohler, in Philadelphia, and by the Reformed Publication Board, Cleveland, Ohio.

Gesangbuch für Deutsche Sonntagsschulen. Sammt einem Anhang ausgewählter Englischer Lieder. Philadelphia (Kohler) and New York (Radde). 272 pp. 1864.

Official Letters and Documents of the American Bible Revision Committee. Private and confidential. 186 pp. New York (Bible House), 1885.

An abridgment of these documents, prepared by President Dwight, D. D., was sent to the subscribers together with the memorial edition of the Revision.

The American Bible Revision Library, with all the official correspondence and other documents, was presented to the American Bible Society, who keep it in a special case at the Bible House, New York.

The New Testament in the original Greek. By Westcott & Hort. With an Introduction. New York (Harper & Bros.), 1881. Fifth ed. revised, 1893. The Greek text was printed from a duplicate of the London plates by arrangement with the editors and publishers, and corrected by Dr. Hort. The introduction of eighty-nine pages was prepared by Dr. Schaff, and corrected for each new edition.

Religious Encyclopædia: or, Dictionary of Biblical, Historical, Doctrinal, and Practical Theology, Based on the Real-Encyclopædie of Herzog, Plitt, and Hauck. In connection with Rev. Samuel M. Jackson and Rev. D. S. Schaff, D. D. New York (Funk & Wagnalls), 1884, 3 vols.; revised, 1887; 3d ed., revised and enlarged, in 4 vols. (which includes the Encyclopædia of Living Divines), 1891. Usually called the "Schaff-Herzog Enc."

Encyclopædia of Living Divines and Christian Workers of all Denominations in Europe and America. With Rev. Samuel M. Jackson. New York, 1887. 271 pages.

This is now included in the third revised edition of the Schaff-Herzog Encyclopædia (at the end of the fourth volume), with an Appendix brought down to the close of 1890. The material was supplied mostly by the living divines themselves.

A Select Library of the Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church.

First series.—Fourteen volumes (St. Augustin, 8 volumes and St. Chrysostom, 6 volumes). New York (The Christian Literature Co.), 1886-1890.

Second series (with Henry Wace, D. D., Principal of King's College, as co-editor), in course of publication, to embrace, in thirteen or fourteen vols., the chief works of the Fathers from Eusebius and Jerome to John of Damascus and Gregory the Great. Vol. I, Eusebius; II, Socrates and Sozomenus; III, Theodoret, Jerome, Genadius, Rufinus; IV, Athanasius. New York (The Christian Literature Co.) and Oxford (Parker & Co.), 1890-1892.

Wilmore's New Analytical Reference Bible. 2189 pp. New York (J. A. Wilmore & Co.), 1891.

It contains The Holy Bible (with references to the Analysis); Comprehensive Bible Helps; Hitchcock's Analysis; and Cruden's Concordance. Dr. Schaff is responsible for the Preface and the Comprehensive Bible Helps.

American Church History (in course of preparation). A series of Denominational Histories by a number of scholars, to be published under the auspices of the American Society of Church History, by an Editorial Committee consisting of Rev. Many parts of the following letters were read in 1844-1845 and 1846, before the "Councils of the New Confederacy of the Iroquois," and to the establishment of that historical institution the research, by which the facts were accumulated, is chiefly to be attributed. The institution referred to is founded upon the ancient confederacy of the Five Nations, and its symbolic council-fires are kindled upon the ancient territories of the Mohawks, the Onondagas, the Cayugas, and the Senecas. The design is "to gather the fragments of the history, the institutions, and the government of our Indian predecessors." Introduction.
